THE following Compilation was directed to be undertaken with the view of affording information on points of Hindoo Law and Custom hitherto referred to Shastrees of Courts or special witnesses, pending judicial decisions.

An obvious inconvenience resulting from this mode of investigation, is the probability that the parties giving their opinion or evidence may be biassed by sinister influence. This consideration led Sir William Jones, so early as the year 1788, to propose the compilation of a Digest on the model of the Pandects of Justinian, the execution of which, from the number of Sanskrit books to be consulted, and the discordant interpretations of different commentators, has hitherto been, for most practical purposes, a desideratum.* Other arguments are not wanting to shew the great utility of elucidation on points, whether of written law, or unwritten Custom revered by numerous Castes as Law, on which from the want of publications on the subject little has hitherto been known, except by those gentlemen whose official practice may have enabled them to obtain local information.

“ The Dhurm Shaster, it is understood, is a collection of ancient treatises neither clear nor consistent in themselves, and “ now buried under a heap of more modern commentaries;
“ the whole beyond the knowledge of perhaps the most learned and every part wholly unknown to the people who Its place is supplied in many cases by known

II

“ customs, founded indeed on the Dhurm Shaster, but modified “ by the convenience of different Castes or communities, and “ no longer deriving authority from any written text. The “ uncertainty of all decisions obtained from such sources must “ be obvious, especially when required for the guidance of a “ foreign Judge, himself a stranger both to the written law, “ and to the usage which in some cases supplies its place. The “ usual resource when the Shaster is to be consulted is to refer “ to the Pundit of the Court, on whose integrity the justice of “ the decision must in the first instance depend: supposing, “ however, that he is honest and learned (which last quality is “ not now common and must daily become more rare), he has “ the choice of a variety of books to quote from, and in many “ instances the same book has a variety of decisions on the same “ question.” “ When the question depends on custom, the “ evil is at least as great: the law is then to be collected from “ the examinations of private individuals, the looseness of tra“ dition must lead to contrary opinions, and even when any rule “ is established, it is likely to be too vague to be easily applied “ to the case in point. Add to this, the chance of corruption, “ faction, favor, and other sources of partiality among the wit“ nesses.” “ There are but two courses by which a remedy
“ can be applied,—the first is, to make a new Code founded en“ tirely on general principles, applicable to all ages and nations,— “ the second is to endeavour to compile a complete and con“ sistent Code from the mass of written law and the fragments “ of tradition, determining on general principles of jurispru“ dence those points where the Hindoo books and traditions pre“ sent only conflicting authorities, and perhaps supplying on “ similar principles any glaring deficiencies that may remain “ when the matter for compilation has been exhausted. The “ 1st of these courses, if otherwise expedient, is rendered entirely “ impracticable here by the attachment of the Natives to their “ own institutions, and by the degree to which their laws are “ interwoven

III

“ interwoven with their religion and manners. The 2d plan “ is therefore the only one which it is in our power to {pur“ sue. The first step towards the accomplishment of its objects, “ appears to be to ascertain in each district whether there is any “ book of acknowledged authority either for the whole or any “ branch of the law: the next is to ascertain what exceptions “ there are to the written authorities, and what customs and “ traditions exist independent of them. The best modes of “ conducting these inquiries are, 1st, To examine the Shas“ trees, Heads of Castes, and other persons likely to be acquaint“ ed either with the law, the custom of Castes, or the public “ opinion regarding the authority attached to each; and 2d, to “ extract from the records of the Courts of Justice the informa“ tion already obtained on these subjects in the course of judi“ cial investigation.”

The period during which regular Courts have been established in Guzerat, naturally suggested those Zillahs as the field for inquiry of the 2d kind. The result of Mr. Borradaile's exertions in selecting Cases decided by the Sudur Udalut has been lately printed, and that mode of investigation is about to be combined by that gentleman with a more extended system of local enquiry.

In the Dekkan, on the contrary, the British rule had been much later introduced, and care had been taken to avoid the sudden adoption of strict judicial forms, in many cases alien to the habits of the people. The Native Government had been altogether

* On this point Sir W. Jones observes, in his letter to the Supreme Council of Bengal, 19th March 1788, “ Nothing could be more obviously just than to determine private contests according to those laws which the parties themselves had ever considered as the rules of their conduct and engagements in civil life: nor could any thing be wiser than by a legislative act to assure the Hindoo and Mahometan subjects of Great Britain, that the private laws which they severally hold sacred, and a violation of which they would have thought the most grievous oppression, should not be superseded by a new system, of which they could have no knowledge, and which they must have considered as imposed on them by a spirit of rigour and intolerance.”

altogether Hindoo ; the Peshwa and many others in subordinate authority were Brahmins ; in the city of Poona are many resident Shastrees, including those receiving stipends from Government in the College, besides casual visitors at the Hindoo festivals ; lastly, its position seems adapted to display varieties in Castes and professions, which in a large inland town in the midst of an agricultural country are less affected by the influence of commerce and immigration. Here, therefore, the inquiry of the 1st kind was ordered to be conducted.

The Regulation Committee having accordingly prepared queries as the foundation of others to be introduced in progress of the investigation, they were transmitted to Mr. Chaplin, late Commissioner, and to Colonel Briggs, Resident at Satara, with a request that they would adopt the measures most expedient to obtain the information required throughout the territories under their superintendence. The collection of judicial awards, both of our own and the Peshwa's time, was suggested, and subsequently, in consequence of a proposal to the Heads of Castes at Surat having created some alarm among the people, the Commissioner was desired to confine the proposed experiment on that point to some one district under his control.

These were the objects in view by the Hon'ble the Governor in Council in undertaking the inquiry : it is in the next place proper to state the manner in which the instructions have been carried into effect, and the ulterior measures still necessary in order to perfect the original design.

The inquiry naturally resolved itself into three general heads : 1st, To ascertain the particular text-books and commentaries referred to by Shastrees as authorities. 2d, To investigate the number and relations of existing Castes, and their mode of preserving old or establishing new customs. 3d, To compare the

the written law with the unwritten customs, and note their conformity with or opposition to each other.

I.—LAW.—Partly from the difficulty of the language, and partly also from the nature of the subject, our knowledge of the Hindoo Law has hitherto been far from precise or extensive. Sir W. Jones observed on the Code of Mr. Haller (compiled by desire of Mr. Hastings), that however complete in appearance, it is in fact a translation of an injudicious Persian epitome, by no means faithfully rendering the original Sanskrit. The Institutes of Munoo, translated by Sir William himself, is an elementary work, treating, as most text-books and commentaries forming part of the Dhurmsastru would appear to do, of many topics foreign to what we term jurisprudence. The Digest of Jugunath, translated by Mr. Colebrooke, although other subjects are occasionally adverted to, is nominally confined to the law of Contracts and Successions, and the frequent occurrence of jarring texts and obscure commentaries forms a great objection to it as a work of practical reference. To supply the deficiency, we have Mr. Colebrooke's valuable translation of the treatise of Jimoota-vuhunu and of the Chapter in the Mitakshura on Inheritance, the Reports of Cases decided by the Sudur Deewanee Udaluts at Calcutta and Surat, and the published works of Sir F. Macnaghten and Sir T. Strange. The latter publication would appear in a great measure to have attained the object, so far as respects the law in force at Madras.

It has been ascertained, in the course of time, that different interpretations are given of original text-books by different commentators, and that among these, writers of particular tenets are held as authorities in different provinces of India. Many apparent contradictions have originated from taking as collateral authorities the glosses or interpretations of writers of different different schools, whereof the leading divisions appear to be those of Bengal and Benares.

The books chiefly referred to in Wywusthas in the Dekhun are the text-books of Munoo and Yadnywulkyū; the Mitakshura or Vidyaneswuree, a commentary on the latter; the Myookh; Nirunesindhoo; Hemadree; Koustoobh; and Purasmadhoo; all apparently of the Benares school. The Mitakshura is preferred on account of its comparative clearness and decision, and is the work most usually quoted by the Sastrees of Poona.

It is to be understood that besides the foregoing all other books composing the Dhurmsastru, as well as the Veds, and in some instances, the Poorans, are held of authority though less generally known and less frequently referred to. In the pages following this introduction will be found a list of text-books and commentaries more or less imperfectly known to the Sastrees consulted at Poona. It was furnished by Wamun Sastree Satyu, and corrected by reference to the Hindoo College and other Brahmans who attended the distribution of the Dukshuna in 1825.* Although in this list an approximation to correctness has been attained, it is not to be supposed that the exact number of Sloks has been assigned to each work, nor that the particulars as to date and subject-matter are in all cases accurate; its errors and defects may form the subject of future investigation, and the catalogue, on farther inquiry, be completed. All information respecting the Sastrus has been however elicited with difficulty, partly from the backwardness of the Natives to give precise information on any subject, but chiefly from superstitious prejudices.

On

* Among these were Ragwacharee, Principal of the College; Sukharam Sastree, Gooroo of the Dhurmsastru; Ragwendracharee, of Sattara; Siddheswur Sastree, Moonsif of Joonur; Babacharee Adye, Jageerdar of Kher; Balacharee Toupe, Pandit of Dharwar; Samupacharee and Nursupacharee, of Holjee, near Bellary.

On comparing the one now published with the lists given by Mr. Colebrooke, some important variations are observable, apparently arising from the latter having chiefly included the writers of the Gouryu or Bengal school. Of the text-books, the work called Katyayun appears as a Sootr in the Poona list, and the latter includes Wamun, smrootee, Wridhsatatup, and the Sløk, not found in the former. Of the 21 Oopusmrootees noticed by Mr. C. there are only two (Boudhyayun and Aswulayun) found in the Poona list. Ten Commentaries and minor authorities only appear in both. Twenty-five mentioned by Mr. C. are omitted in the present, and upwards of 110 are found in the Poona Catalogue exclusively. Of their legal, as of their political history, the Brahmuns seem entirely ignorant, nor could the causes of the difference subsisting between Commentators of different schools be at all traced in Poona.

The Abstract of Hindoo Law as affecting Civil disputes, now published, has been prepared to answer purposes of reference, until the greater diffusion of original works* sanctioned as law shall have established the knowledge of it in a more perfect manner. It has been drawn up from answers to queries submitted to Bhalchundr Sastree of Poona, and afterwards corrected by the Dhurmsastrees of the College. It had been preferable to have obtained all the replies from the College in the first instance, but those received directly from them were so very meagre as to afford little information.

It is satisfactory to observe that on comparing this Abstract with the translation of the Chapter on Inheritance in the Mitakshura, there has been found an exact conformity on all but two immaterial points. These have been since corrected, and some additional references introduced, from Mr. Borradaile's Reports

* The Mitakshura and others have been already published in Bengal. The Myookh the Bombay Government.

VIII

Reports of Selected Cases. Although nominally limited to Inheritance, the translation of Mr. Colebrooke refers to several points relative to Marriage and Adoption, so that the correctness of so large a portion gives a fair criterion of that of the whole.

Some points of law appearing to have been decided by the Supreme Court of Calcutta have been subjoined as notes from Sir Macnaghten's work, and some quotations have been made from the Digest of Jugunath, in order to facilitate comparison between the opposing authorities of the different schools. The most important points on which a discrepancy exists, are on the power of widows to adopt and inherit, the limitation as to age in adoption, the power of fathers over ancestral property, and the tenure of inherited property by females generally.

II.—CASTES.—It is well known that the ancient Hindoo law books recognize four Castes only, and prescribe the duties to be followed by each with minute accuracy. The whole system is founded on the supremacy of the Brahmun Caste, and the ignorance and dependence of the others. It confines to the former the duties of the priesthood and an acquaintance with the national law and literature; it enjoins that Brahmuns should receive from others gifts to any extent as alms, without prohibiting them from amassing wealth; and by assigning expulsion from Caste as a punishment to offenders against their ordinances (especially intermarriage and even contact, if the parties are of different Castes) a provision is made for constant degradation, while no possibility exists that a man of a lower should by any degree of merit whatever obtain admission into a higher Caste. Under the operation of this system, the Brahmuns themselves are, owing to irregular intermarriages and other local causes, divided into numerous sects, the majority of individuals in which neglect the duties of study and abstracted devotion prescribed by the Sastru;

IX

Sastru ; the Kshutriy and Wys Castes are thought no longer to exist, although several pretend to those titles ; and besides the pure Soodrus (which the Mahratta Koonbees or cultivators are allowed to be) are a host of mixed Castes, in various degrees of repute among the Hindoos of the present day.

In assigning the relative rank of the Castes of Hindoos, there are two criteria chiefly to be borne in mind as influencing their estimation among themselves, viz. Descent and Occupation. The particulars of the former are to be found in several of the Sastrus written on the subject, laying down the genealogy of the Castes and the pursuit each is to follow, but the variations which time and irregular marriages have introduced, have occasioned other modes of estimating the respect paid to the higher by the lower Castes : these are, 1, Intermarriage ; 2, Eating together (the higher Caste not accepting the invitation of the lower ;) 3, receiving water to drink at the hands of a lower-caste ; 4, touching the person (the touch or approximation of a low-caste-man being considered pollution requiring purification by bathing—spurs-dosh.) There is less strictness on the last two points, and the acquisition by any individual or Caste of rank, wealth, or power, has of course a tendency to counteract the prejudices arising from their descent or supposed impure practices, but, as in the case of Europeans, by no means to overcome them altogether.

The enumeration found in the present summary has been prepared with regard to all these criteria, and may serve as the groundwork of a future more complete investigation. The books consulted by the Sastrees on the occasion were the Jati-wiwek, the Brohud Jatiwiwek, Jatdurpun, Madhwu Kulpuntu, and Purseram-Prutap ; and the compared list of Castes, according to books and present usage in and near Poona, was drawn up by Wamun Sastree Satyu, Abba Bhut (Pooranek of Sam Row Pingule), Ramacharee Hoonhurleekur, Siddheswur Sastree (Moonsif of Joonur). It was afterwards submitted to and approved by Neelkunt Sastree Thute, Dadajee Chityok and Anaba Mendule of Poona. Many particulars have been since added from examination of the Castes themselves.
Row

The mythological origin of the four Castes is generally known. Before the present Kulee-yoog a Brahmun was permitted to espouse a wife from each of the four Castes; a Kshutriy was allowed to marry a Kshutriy, Wys, and Soodru; a Wys had two wives, one of his own and one of the Soodru-Caste; and a Soodru one only, of his own. Thence arose the distinction of the Unoolom and Pruteelom Castes; the former consisting of the progeny of a higher-Caste-father with a lower-Caste-mother; the latter vice-versâ; all being in general the offspring of legal marriage. For example, the descendants of the Brahmun by his Brahmune wife remained Brahmuns; those by his Kshutriy wife were termed Moor-dawusikt &c. There are reckoned, besides the four original, six Unoolom and six Pruteelom Castes.

The offspring by illegal marriage or adulterous connexion between any of the foregoing sixteen Castes, or of individuals among them expelled from the privileges of their Caste, have gradually introduced the vast number of Sunkurjat, Wurun-sunkur, or mixed Castes, now prevailing. It is doubtful indeed whether some of the titles are not merely local or professional designations, the main ground of distinction being the practice of intermarriage and eating in company or otherwise. In all these, however, an adherence to hereditary custom is maintained by the authority of an assembly of the Caste, who prescribe the penance to be performed by the offender, consisting of some sacrifice either in purse or person, and generally commutable into a fine or dinner given to the individuals of the Caste.

From

From the above causes of intermixture, and the influence of immigration, the number of Castes may be considered to be constantly augmenting, and the authority of the Caste-assemblies and of the Brahmuns over the rest, to be decidedly on the decline, since the introduction of the British Government.

From an examination of the lists it appears that there are 133 Castes mentioned in the books consulted, and about 150 Castes and varieties said to exist in and round Poona. It will be seen that some of the Sastru names are not appropriated by any existing Caste in that part of the country; that some existing Castes are not mentioned in the books consulted; and that the occupation and relative estimation of some Castes are different at present from what they should be according to the written standard. Some of the particulars relative to foreigners especially bear evident marks of ignorance and prejudice, but all have been retained as elucidatory of the opinions prevalent among the Brahmuns on such topics.

Compliance with ancestral custom forms, it appears, the standard of duty in the great majority of Hindoos. All are anxious to preserve their own Caste from contamination by refusing to intermarry or eat in company with any individuals of a Caste lower than their own; and the spirit of the written texts, by which the higher Castes affect to be guided, is enforced in the lower by the authority of Brahminical priests and Caste-assemblies. The religious ceremonies practised on all occasions, ordinary and extraordinary, in private houses, in the temples and by the road-side, and the periodical assemblies at Festivals and Pilgrimages, serve to strengthen the ties of obedience both to one and to the other; although it is difficult to recognize in the rude sculptures revered by the common people the Awutars and Deities described in the books. As in other superstitious countries, there is a general belief in miraculous culous cures at particular shrines and tombs of saints (whether Hindoo or Moossulman) supposed to be invested with superhuman powers. Vows are made, and the condition performed, although attended with severe torture to the individual who inflicts it on himself. Departed spirits are believed to haunt particular places, or the bodies of particular persons, then said to be seized or possessed by a ghost or demon; and there is a generally supposed efficacy in Astrology, spells, and sorcery, which is often not without real effect, acting through the imagination of the parties.

It would however be foreign to the objects of this summary to enlarge further on the various ceremonies and opinions countenanced by the Hindoo religion, or prevalent among the common people. It will be sufficient to annex the substance of replies received from different Castes in Poona on the constitution of Caste-assemblies, the nature of the office of Headman, and the mode in which their authority is exercised in taking cognizance of offences against Caste-discipline. Subjoined to these is a statement of the Oaths said to be most binding in the different Castes interrogated on that point.

III.—EXISTING CUSTOMS.—The information compiled under the third title consists of the substance of replies from the Castes and Traders in Poona, together with details received by the late Commissioner in the Dekhun from the subordinate Collectors.

Under the letter P is arranged, 1, replies from 75 of the resident Castes to the inquiries prepared by the Regulation Committee, on the establishment of rules in Castes, marriage, divorce, inheritance, wills and gifts, adoption and funerals, transmitted by the Collector of Poona; 2, replies from 101 Castes resident in Poona (including the former) to supplementary queries ries suggested in the course of the enquiry ; on Caste, Marriage, Parentage, Adoption, Service and Slavery, Community of Property and Partition, Contracts ; and on the customs of Sahoo-kars and traders. The individuals consulted on this last branch were Siddheswur Sastree ; Sam Row Perigule ; Raghopunt Tuthé ; Venkut Row Nana ; Gopaul Row Despande ; the Zumeendars of Joonur ; Shesupa Naik Padshapoorkur ; Bapoo Moonee, Bapoo Bhowanee Josee, Dada Lukree, Dyaram Atmaram, and other Sahoo-kars. 3, As elucidatory of the rules in force among native tribunals, some cases have been selected from the Duffur of Ramsastree, Nyayudhish of Poona, in the time of the Peshwa Madhoo Row. The body of information is however chiefly compiled from direct replies.

By the letter S are designated the extracts from a valuable report transmitted to the Commissioner by Colonel Briggs, Resident at Sattara, containing replies to the queries prepared by the Regulation Committee, and a variety of additional information collected by that Officer himself.

The abstract of inquiries conducted by Colonel Robertson in Khandesh (letter K) consists of a few selected cases from the Register's file, of replies to the queries prepared by the Regulation Committee, and to others by the late Principal Collector and his assistants in the Southern Mahratta country. These replies appear to have been received from individuals of different Castes and places of abode in the Province assembled at Dhoolia, and selected on account of their experience and intelligence. It is matter of regret that the breaking out of the Cholera before the completion of the enquiry rendered it less complete than it would otherwise have been ; enough has however been elicited to demonstrate the utility of the investigation in that Province.

In consequence of the lamented death of Mr. Thackeray pending the extended enquiries instituted by him, a detailed report of the investigations prosecuted in the Southern Mahratta Country was never forwarded. To many queries however replies have been received; those especially on the subject of Marriage, and Slavery, compiled by Mr. John Warden, will be found to contain much valuable information; all of which is designated in the summary by the letter D.

A number of awards by Punchacts of Native Arbitrators were received from Ahmednuggur, translations of some of which have been selected and appended under the proper heads.

The Appendix will be found to consist of an account of the Institutions of the Gosaens or Gosaweas, a singular fraternity of self-styled Devotees, whose customs in many respects are assimilated to those of the Monastic rule. This account was drawn up by Mr. John Warden, from replies to queries prepared by that Gentleman, and submitted to the Gosaen Pilgrims who last year assembled at the source of the Gunga or Godavery near Nasik.

By the marginal references to the preceding summary of the law, the points of agreement or of discrepancy between the Brahminical books and existing Custom will be in most cases ascertained.

In Poona the Castes were assembled successively, and each question was proposed in order. The answer was given after a consultation between the headman and the most intelligent individuals, or between the latter only, in the presence of the rest of the Caste. The inquiry was tedious, but it was not difficult to procure the willing attendance of the people after the object was understood. It is to be regretted however that from the backwardness of some to elucidate even remotely their religious Customs,

Customs, and the want of intelligence exhibited by others, the information now submitted, however correct so far as it goes, is far from complete. Many of those consulted could of course speak only to points within their own limited observation; in other cases no definite rule appears to exist; at least the rule is liable to modification in a particular case from the prejudices or partialities of Native Arbitrators.

A general conformity is however observable with the leading principles of the Hindoo system, which (so far as they affect Civil disputes) appear to be as follow :

1. The supremacy, generally speaking, of the Brahmun Caste. Some Castes permit the agency of their own priests, but the ceremonies performed are imitations of the Brahminical rites.

2. Severe penalties annexed to intermarriage or association with a lower Caste.

3. Adoption, even by Widows, in order to secure the continued performance of Funeral oblations.

4. Inheritance, generally speaking, in equal shares by males only in equal degree of relationship, the degree of consanguinity indicated by the customary performance of funeral oblations being the principle on which property is inherited.

5. Community of property among the members of one family; descended or ancestral property being considered as entailed.

On the other hand, the chief points on which the law and custom have been observed to be at variance, are, 1, The great variety of Castes and sects; 2, The custom of a second and inferior marriage, allowed to wives and widows in many Castes;

XVI

Castes; 3, The small or irregular punishment in some cases forced by Caste assemblies; 4, The disregard to legal restrictions as to Caste, in trading and taking interest: besides an infinity of local usages which have become established, unwarranted by Sastru, if not in opposition to its rules.

Such being the original design of Government in instituting the inquiry, and the extent to which it has been hitherto carried into partial effect, it has been considered expedient to circulate the whole in a printed form among the local Authorities. In the first instance, by this means, the existence of usages may in some cases be established which are otherwise little known, or might be thought fabricated to answer a particular object, and in others misrepresentations will be more readily detected. But the great benefit proposed is, that by local investigations, gradually carried on on the same basis, the defects in the present compilation may be removed, and all peculiarities of partial extent and observance be recorded: so that after the applicability and correctness of the information successively acquired shall have stood the test of time and Judicial examination, and the extent of innovation occasioned by the institution of positive enactments shall have been ascertained, the ultimate object originally proposed by Government may be attained, of separating and classifying the rules binding on all Hindoos from those which are observed by particular Castes only, or by local varieties of the latter. In the words of the Minute previously quoted, “After the Digest shall have circulated for a certain time as a book of information though not of authority, it may ultimately be improved by the decision of all doubtful questions, the removal of all glaring blemishes, and the filling up of all great deficiencies, until it forms a complete Code of Laws sanctioned by Government, and accessible in their vernacular language to all classes of its subjects.”

NOTE—In the orthography of such Sunskrit or Mahratta words as have not acquired by custom a particular English form, the plan of Dr. Gilchrist has been generally followed, as best adapted to express the sounds as well as to mark the letters of the original words. It may be remarked that Mahratta words are often spelt with slight variations by the Natives; and some sounds, as those of व or य may be expressed indifferently in English by w, v, o; y, ee. An Italic letter serves to distinguish the following characters; श, s; ड, d; ट, t; uniform correctness on this point must not however be anticipated.

The Jyns in Poona stated that books exist different from the
Gooroo

Gooroo on occasions of Penance. They mentioned the Poo-nyuhawachun, Ubhishek, and others, but were ignorant of particulars, and would appear to consult Brahmuns on most disputed points. Nothing like a catalogue of their own books could be procured at Poona.

MARRIAGE.

Of the Suns.

Sixteen purifying ceremonies, called Sunskars, performed at different periods, are prescribed for all males of the three leading Castes, Brahmun, Kshutriyu and Wys—1, Gurbhadhan, a ceremony performed after the future mother has attained maturity. 2, Pooswun, at the period of conception. 3, Unwulobhun, at three months' pregnancy. 4, Seemuntonyun, at five months'. 5, Wishnoobhutee, at seven months'. 6, Jatkurum, at birth. 7, Namkurum, on naming the child, at the 12th day after birth. 8, Nishkrumun, on bringing the child outside the house, at three months' old. 9, Sooryuwulokun, on his being presented to the Sun, at four months'. 10. Unnuprasun, on his being fed by hand, at six months'. 11, Choul, on his head being first shaved, at three years of age. 12, Oopunyun, the ceremony of Moonj, or investiture with the jenwa or sacred thread, by which regeneration is supposed to be effected, at eight years of age. 13, Mahenamyu, the ceremony of the Gayutree, performed subsequently to the Moonj. 14, Sumawurtun, performed before Marriage. 15, Wiwuha, Marriage. 16, Swurgarohun, funeral ceremonies. Males of the Soodru caste, are not entitled to the 12th 13th and 14th. B. S. (Narayun Bhutee, Soodrukumulakarun &c.): according to the Soodru Kumulakarun, twelve Sunskars only are appropriated to Soodrus. P. C. Females of all castes are not entitled to the 12th 13th and 14th; their principal sunskar being marriage, its early celebration, and fidelity on the woman's part, are strictly enjoined. B. S. The ceremonies previous to marriage, according to the Soobodhinee, refer to males only, and not to females, Mit. Tr. note 288. A different enumeration of the Sunskars is given in C. Dig. 3,104. See note in Mit. Tr. 285.

2. There are eight kinds of marriage recognized in the Sastus: 1, Bruhm, where the charges are incurred solely by the girl's father. 2, Dyv, where the girl's father gives her in marriage riage to a Brahmun during the Hom sacrifice. 3, Ursh, where the girl is given in exchange for a Cow and a Bullock. 4, Prajaputyu, where she is given with the view of obtaining offspring. 5, Usoor, where she is taken in exchange for wealth, and married: this species is peculiar to the Wys and Soodru Castes. B. S. (Mit.) The sale of a girl in marriage is forbidden B. S. (Mit.) See Munqo 3, 20, 34. It is considered as Usoor-wiwuha, and Stree-soolk, and the money, if unpaid, is an unlawful debt. B. 2, 199—see paragraph 26.—6. Gandhurvu, where the marriage is agreed on by the parties without the parents' knowledge. 7, Rakshus, where the girl is seized and married with tumult and violence. The 6th and 7th species are peculiar to the Kshutriyu Caste. 8, Pysach, where the girl is stolen by night from her place of sleep. This species is forbidden: B. S. (Mit.) C. Dig. 3, 604 (Yadn

3. The agreement by Brahmun parents on both sides to marry their son and daughter is called Wagnischyuh. There is no prescribed limit as to time, but it is enjoined that betrothment should precede marriage by as short an interval as possible, lest a quarrel should interrupt the contract. The Magunc, or asking in marriage, practised by Soodrus, is also at no fixed period. If after the agreement to marry, a relation on either side die, or either party be discovered to be of lower Caste, or to have some disease as leprosy &c., or if the intended husband be discovered to be impotent, or the girl to be unchaste, the marriage cannot take place. Neither can a marriage be solemnized between parties whose Nukshutr is in the same Nadee.* B. S. (Nirunesindhoo. Koustoobh.) If one party

Marriage cannot take place if certain Goon or Astrological conjunctions are unfavorable, known by inspecting the calculation made at the birth of the parties, and written in their Junumputrika. Brahmun is enjoined to remain with his Gooroo as a Student until 20 years of age, or at least 16, and on leaving him to marry. Beyond that period there is no limit at which he may not marry, B. S. (Koustoobh). A female should be married at eight years of age; but not under six (Nirunesindhoo and Mit.) nor can the marriage be delayed to her 12th year except by reason of distress. B. S. (Koustoobh and Mit.) Should the signs of puberty appear before the Marriage of a Brahmuncce, she may be married after certain prescribed ceremonies of penance; P. C. B. S. (Nirunesindhoo) or married privately as one who has lost caste; or even abandoned altogether, B. S. (Skund Pooran). The 2d marriage of a wife or widow (called Pat by the Mahrattas, and Natra in Goozerat) is forbidden in the present age at least, and to twice-born castes. See Munoo. C. Dig. 2, 473. MARRIAGE.

Should the father be dead, that of the mother and brother is sufficient, or of the other male relations by the father's side, (Sukoolyu), B. S. (Myookh). The order in the text of the Mitakshura is, 1, Father. 2, Parental grand-father. 3, Brother. 4, Sukoolyu relations. 5, Mother; the next of sound mind in default of the former. There is a text of Yadnyawalkya, that if there be no persons competent to give a girl in marriage, she may herself choose a suitable husband, (C. Dig. 2.387) (swyumwur). But it is said in the Wyuwhar-Myookh that such swyumwur marriage is forbidden in the present Kuleeyong, B. S. (Poorans). The law is considered in the present age, to limit the choice of a wife to within the husband's Caste. Her Gotr must be different from his own; that is, she must be descended from a different Rishee, B. S. (Mit.) Intermarriage within the Sugotr Supindu* is forbidden, and with a female of another Caste, P. C. (Mit.), and besides the Wiroot Sumbund or prohibited degree of connection within seven degrees, marriage is forbidden with the following Usogotr supindu connections; a parent's sister's daughter, a mother's brother's daughter, and a sister's daughter.—A former connection by marriage between the two families is not objected to, B. Of such relations the common ancestor must be within seven generations. Supindu offerings are made both for relations and connections by marriage, but the spiritual benefit to the deceased is supposed to result from the nearness of the relationship. In an undivided family, the Ekadusee and Supindakurum ceremonies are to be performed on the 11th and 12th day after a father's death, by the eldest son only; the first 10 days' ceremonies, and (in case of necessity) the annual Sraddh by each son separately. In a divided family the Supindudan and 12th days' ceremonies are to be performed by the eldest son only, or in default the youngest. In the former case the whole expense is a charge on the estate; in the latter, each pays his own; and though there be no assets, sin is incurred by non-performance, B. S. B.

Sraddh ceremonies are performed on the anniversary of a father's death. The Puksh ceremonies are performed subsequent to the 1st year after a father's death, at some time during the month Bahadrapud. There are also daily and monthly offerings for the benefit of a father and ancestors deceased.

In the Supindakurum small heaps of rice are named according to the ancestors and relations of the deceased within certain degrees, as Sugotrus, or connections by marriage; and are mixed together with his. After Marriage a wife's Gotr becomes that of her husband.

8. The prescribed period for the marriage ceremonies are the months of Margsirsh, Magh, Phalgun, Wysakh, Jesht. To the N. of the river Gunga or Godavery, marriage may also be celebrated during the month Ashad, provided it be previous to the conjunction of the Sun with the Zodiacal star or nakshatr Ardra, the 6th of the 27 lunar mansions in the constellation Gemini (See Sir W. Jones on the Antiquity of the Hindoo Zodiac). During the period of the planet Jupiter's remaining within the Lion constellation (one year in twelve), thence called the Sinhust year, it is forbidden to marry on the N. of the river Krishn or Kistna. There are some sacred places (as Sreevenkuteswur in the Carnatic near Goottee) at which marriage may be celebrated at all times and seasons, B. S. (Nirunesindhoo).

Ceremonies

9. The ceremonies enjoined to Brahmuns are the following. 1, Poonyuhawachun, recitation of Muntrus. 2, Nandeeshraddh, offering of food to ancestors. 3, Deoprutishtha, consecration of the marriage god on its being deposited in the house, (suptumatrikstapun). 4, Mundupprutishtha, consecration of the canopy, &c. 5, Muddoopurk, gift of dhce and honey to the bridegroom by the father-in-law, with other presents. 6, Untuhput, in which a veil or curtain is interposed between the bride and her husband. 7, Kunyadan, gift of the daughter to her husband. 8, Soubhagyuwayundan in which the husband

Mrit-sootuk, or mourning ceremonial, consists in sitting apart and abstaining from worldly business for a certain period on the death of a relation. The sootuk on the death of a father is prolonged to the 14th day. On the death of a relation within the degree of dushantil bhow, that is, if the common ancestor is within seven generations, to 10 days; if within 14 generations, to 3½ days; and if the common ancestor is beyond 21 degrees, ablution only is necessary.

This concludes the regular marriage, after which the contract is indissoluble, B. S. (Nirunesindhoo Narayunbhutee). On the second or third day it is usual for the Seonmookh or first interview between the boy's mother and the girl to take place; this is not prescribed in the books. The Sare follows, in which the girl's relations commit her to her new family in the hope of obtaining progeny (wans-patr-dan). In conclusion, the bride is conducted to her father-in-law's house, where the Lukshmee-pooja is performed; the marriage-god is dismissed by the ceremony of Deokstapun: and the Mundup is removed. (Mundupstapun) B. S.

10. The bridegroom receives from the bride's father the Mud-doopurk at the time of marriage, (Mit. II. 48,2,5. Tr. 268), and what other presents may be then given him, he is entitled to receive as separately acquired property. So presents to the bride at marriage constitute part of her Streedhun, B. S. P. C. On the death of a husband without sons, the wife takes the jewels and clothes; and on the death of a childless wife, the husband is entitled to them. P. C. (Mit.)

A false accuser of a girl is finable, and penance is awarded in cases of irregular marriage P. C. Should it be discovered after marriage that any muntrus have not been properly recited, Prayuschit must be performed, and the words repronounced correctly. Should the husband prove of lower Caste, provided the Gurbhadhan has not been performed, the girl is to perform Prayuschit, [and be remarried, and this is the only case in which a woman can be married a second time, B. S. Nirunesindhoo.] She ought in such case to be repudiated with maintenance, P. S. The first case refers to the husband's proving of very low Caste. B. S. But if the Gurbhadhan has been performed, the wife must remain with her low-Caste, husband. Should the wife prove of lower Caste, the husband must perform Prayuschit, and she may be repudiated with maintenance, but her child is not legitimate, B. S. (Myookh.) Should the parties prove to be within the prohibited degrees of marriage (see paragraph 5), the wife must be repudiated with maintenance, and expiation performed. B. S. The children are illegitimate and lose Caste. A discovery of irregularities in astrological calculations is of no consequence. B. S. A marriage concluded without consent of parents is not void, if the prescribed ceremonies have been performed. P. C. (Nirunesindhoo.) A marriage is not annulled by the discovery of leprosy or other like disease, or impotence, or barrenness. B. S. (Myookh).

MARRIAGE.

13. A husband is legally permitted to marry a second wife, and supersede the first married or elder wife, in the event of the latter proving barren, bearing daughters only, or being incurably diseased. Also if she be of expensive, abusive, mischievous or drunken habits. Yasn. C. Dig. 2,418. Mit. I, 9,2,1. The last is expressly assigned as a sufficient cause of supercession to a Soodru. The consent of the elder wife is however essential; B. S. (Hureedut teeka), and is as it were purchased by giving her a present equal to half that assigned to the second wife on her marriage, or (should the former have received no Streedhun before) an equal present. Yasn. C. Dig. 3,17. She must be maintained and kindly treated (Yasn); but may be confined or abandoned if she leave the house in consequence of such second marriage of her husband, Munoo. C. Dig. 2,421. Antiently a Brahmun might marry a wife of each of the four Castes; a Kshutriy three wives; a Wys two; and a Soodru one, of course of his own Caste. B. S. (Mit.) In the present age each is limited to his own Caste. The second marriage of a wife or widow, though antiently allowed in case of a brother's dying childless, and some others, is considered prohibited to twice-born Castes, at least in the present Kuleeyoog. See Munoo. Dig. 2. 473.

14. Of several wives, being of the Brahmun Caste, the one first married enjoys the precedence; if they are of different Castes, the Brahmune is considered the elder. The elder wife sits by her husband at Marriages and other religious ceremonies (See Yasn. C. Dig. 2, 405), is head of the family, and entitled to adopt a son on her husband's death without sons.

Precedence

15. A husband is directed to punish his wife according to the magnitude of her offence: the degree varies from a blow, not with a metal instrument, to suspension of conjugal rites and repudiation. In case of aggravated adultery, she may be turned out of the house, and abandoned. B. S. Mit. A female is declared declared to be in perpetual dependance on her legal protectors, whether father, husband, son or brother-in-law; and in default of male relations from whom she may receive food, clothing and ornaments, the Raja is to supply the place of guardian. Munoo. Yasn. C. Dig. 2,381. She is enjoined to occupy her mind in domestic employments, in the preparation of food, and the nurture of children. (Munoo, &c.) Mutual fidelity during life is enjoined to both parties. Munoo C. Dig. 2,497. A virtuous wife will remain with her husband, even should he abandon her society in favour of a low-caste female, and perform his expiation. B.S. For the incidents of Streedhun, or women's property, see paragraph 76. A wife living with her husband can contract no debts without his express order. P. C. A husband or wife is not liable to defray the debts of the other unless on account of Sunsar or necessary family expenses and alms. (B. 2,203.) Except where a man's livelihood chiefly depends on the wife's labour. Yasn. C. Dig. 317.

Mutual evidence.

16. The husband and wife are discouraged from litigation, and on the general rules of evidence cannot be witnesses in each other's cause. If they persist on admonition, justice is to be done, B. S. (Mit). In a period of distress, for the maintenance of the family or the family not opposing, the whole family property may be given away, except property from parting with which the destruction of the family will ensue, as especially a wife or son (or Vritee or Immoveable Property B. S.) Mit. II, 68, 2,16.

Sale of wife or

Murder of either by other.

17. A Brahmun murdering his own wife, or the wife of another man, is not liable to capital punishment, but as in other cases of great crime, to a punishment similar to Death, viz. confiscation of property, shaving the head, mutilation of the ears and nose, and banishment. A Soodr murdering a Brahmun is to be put to death. A woman of any Caste is subject to the punishment for murder as a Brahmun. B. S. (Mit.)

18. In the event of the husband's losing Caste entirely, a wife is permitted to live separately, retaining her property, P. C. (Mit.) A husband repudiating his wife, without a crime on her part, being mother of a virtuous son, is enjoined to provide for her maintenance, to pay her debts incurred on that account, and if rich, to assign to her one-third of his property. Yasn. C. Dig 2, 420. P. (Mit)

band and wife.

19. A husband is allowed to repudiate his wife, without maintenance, only for such offences as may occasion her total loss of Caste, viz. adultery with a man of Caste lower than her own, attempting her husband's death, procuring abortion, eating or drinking forbidden things. Repudiation for such crime of the highest degree (Ootumpatuk) is considered equivalent to death; the woman is turned out of the house and abandoned, and a semblance of her funeral obsequies is performed by burning her effigy composed of durubh-grass, and performing the Sootuk usual on the death of a wife. This ceremony is called Ghutusphot, B. S. Mit. The punishment for adultery (Wyubhichar) in other cases is regulated by the relative Caste of the parties and the means used to effect the object, whether persuasion, mutual agreement or force. 1st, If at the woman's invitation, both being Brahmuns, the woman is to perform Prayuschat, after which she may return to her husband's embraces; if a Soodr woman invite a Brahmun, the expiation is trifling; if a Brahmuneess invite a Soodr, she is to undergo an excessive penance,* the man is to pay a fine, and to be admonished by the magistrate against repetition. 2d, If the parties meet by mutual agreement, both being Brahmuns, both must perform penance: if the paramour be a Soodr, the Brahmuneess is to lose Caste, be exposed and banished, and the man is to pay a fine to the Raja. 3d, If the crime be be committed forcibly, the woman is to perform a slight penance, and a heavy fine is to be exacted from the man, both being Brahmuns: in case of a Soodr committing a rape on a Brahmune, the penance to the latter is heavy, and the former is condemned to mutilation and banishment: and in case of a Brahmun committing a rape on a Soodr woman, he is to be sentenced to a small fine. The principle is the same as regards the other Castes.—In case of adultery with the wife of a Gooroo, Pupil, Friend, Relative, Poojaree, or Magistrate, each of whose wives are considered as a mother, both parties are liable to capital punishment, but commutable as above explained. The penance in such cases consists in branding or other corporal punishment, in the obligation of performing a certain pilgrimage, feeding Brahmuns, or paying a fine to the Gooroo or Dhurmadhikaree, or merely a public admonition. According to the Dhurmesindhoo, the paramour is to pay the expences of the wife's penance, and in case of her not choosing to return to her husband, he must pay the marriage expences to the latter, and keep the woman. Otherwise it is presumed, the husband would defray such charges, B. S.

sence.

21. A man absenting himself, and as to whom no intelligence arrives of his existence during twenty-four years (in case he should be under 50 years of age), or twelve years (in case he should be above that age), is to be considered dead. His wife then becomes a widow, his property is inherited, and his Sraddh performed. Certain prescribed ceremonies are enjoined in case of his subsequent re-appearance, B. S. (Nirunesindhoo.)

1. During his absence his wife, as in other cases of unavoidable separation from her husband, should, if maintained, perform form religious duties and austerities. Otherwise she should live with her relations. Yadn. C. Dig. 2,450. And she may, if necessary, provide for her own maintenance by spinning or other blameless arts. Munoo C. D. 2,404.

23. A widow is allowed to perform her husband's funeral rites, both Kreea and Sraddh, provided he has left no son, grandson, brother or brother's son, B. S.* (Nirunesindhoo). She is enjoined to promote her own and husband's future happiness by becoming a Suttee; or otherwise, by avoiding all sensual pleasures, practising ceremonial worship, chastity, feeding Brahmuns, making charitable gifts to temples &c. and performing pilgrimages to holy places. These constitute the duties of a Bruhmacharyu and Devotee; B. S. (Mitakshura. Nirunesindhoo.) No woman can enjoy property unless living a chaste life, or at least performing expiation for a breach of chastity. Failing to do so, she is entitled to food and clothing only, and in case of Ootumputuk, and consequent degradation from Caste and Ghutusphot (see paragraph 19) she loses all title even to maintenance.

Duties of a widow.

24. The most virtuous mode of becoming a Suttee is to die of grief and affliction on the husband's death. The usual practice is self-immolation on the husband's funeral pile. The pile should be constructed of light grass and leaves surrounding, as is the present custom at Poona. A widow is excused from becoming a Suttee, 1st, If pregnant. 2d, If under puberty. 3d, If she have a suckling infant. 4th, If she have a desire to attain Moksh (absorption into the divine spirit); for a woman sacrifices herself on the pile in view to another happy birth with her deceased

If the sacrifice is made merely with the view of escaping distress from harsh treatment of relations, or want of maintenance. It must be purely voluntary (Swusuntoshit.) B. S. (Mitakshura Nirunesindhoo.)

25. If no partition have taken place between the deceased husband and his brother, the widow is to remain under the guardianship of her son, or husband's brother, receiving her maintenance, B. S. Mit. Tr. 326. 331. She is at liberty to keep her jewels, and to expend the interest of the rest of her Streedhun deposited, or even the principal, for good and charitable purposes; the remainder, if any, descends to her heirs. See an opinion of Pundits in B. I. 425. Gifts of moveables by a husband to a wife may be alienated by her ad libitum, but not immoveable property. Mit. Tr. 254, 273, 375. Ornaments worn by women during their husband's life must not be divided by his heirs. Mit. If a partition have taken place previously to the husband's death, his widow, if she have no son of the age of sixteen, has a right to contract debts, and alienate the family moveables for the family subsistence, or for charitable purposes, and if he have left no son or his representative to the fourth in descent, she succeeds by inheritance to the whole of his share of the family property and acquisitions. But no woman has a right to alienate immoveable property, except her own Streedhun, * even for charitable purposes, without the consent of all the male heirs. B. S. Myookh, B. I. 58. In all cases of females enjoying property, their living virtuously is presumed, a widow guilty of incontinency is to have maintenance only, Mit. Tr. 340. If a man die leaving two widows,

* The Mitakshura, in an isolated text before referred to, denies the right of a woman to alienate immoveable Streedhun given by her husband. Mit. Tr. 354. A fortiori therefore it would appear not to recognize this right as to immoveables inherited by a widow.

In a case mentioned in B. 2. 175, it was held by the Sastrees that a widow could not alienate immoveable property inherited from her own father, in discharge of her late husband's debts, without the consent of her son, after his majority. (16.)

widows, it does not appear on whom the right of guardianship and management devolves ; it may be inferred from the equal inheritance of widows, that the elder has no exclusive right.* B.S.

PARENTAGE.

26. Parents are enjoined to indulge their children until they attain the age of five; from five to sixteen they are to be instructed in the fourteen sciences (Widya) and sixty-four arts (Kulla) or some of them; after sixteen they are only to be verbally admonished. B. S. (Muddunparajat).

The fourteen sciences are enumerated as follows, viz.

The four Veds; Roog, Sam, Yejoor, Utharvun; consisting of expositions of the leading Hindoo tenets, legends, and hymns to deities and others. The last of these is considered generally inexplicable. In the Poona College are Goorooos of three Veds, Roog, Yejoor and Upustumbh. See Ward on the Hindoos and Colebrooke on the Veds, As. Res. vol. 8.

The Oopurvedus, on Medicine, Music, Military and Mechanical Sciences.

The six Ungus Jyotish (astronomy and astrology with arithmetic), Wyakurun (grammar), Chundu (prosody and verse), Ukshyu (pronunciation), and Nirookt (explanatory of the Veds.)

The four Oopungus: 1. Nyayusas'ru, comprising the inquiry into and classification of external objects, their source and annihilation

* See Sir F. M. 25. He states that in case of four widows, two mothers of sons, mother of daughters, and one childless, the two former would be managers till the majority of the eldest son.

annihilation ; the investigation of truth by sensation, inference, comparison, and sensible signs ; The nature of the divine and human soul, the former being exempt from pleasure and pain ; and the avoidance of pain by attainment of union with the divine spirit (Moksh).

Mimansu,sastru, see Ward on the Hindoos. The writers on the Mimansu, Vedant, and other systems hold different metaphysical opinions on the eternity of matter, and of God as the animating soul of the world—Virtue and Happiness are supposed the consequences of virtues performed in a former transmigration, and the forerunners of another, or in its highest degree causing the union of the soul with the divine spirit.

Dhurmsastru.—On customary civil and religious duties, expiation and punishment of crimes, origin of Castes, &c. See the Catalogue.

The eighteen Poorans and eighteen Oopupoorans.—These contain legends of the Hindoo deities and of eminent individuals ; also Cosmography, and the fabulous history of the four Yoogs or ages of the present world.

The sixty-four arts are enumerated as follows ; viz.—

1, Gayunu (singing). 2, Wady (drum-beating). 3, Nrityu (dancing). 4, Natyu (masquerading). 5, Aleky (writing). 6, Sawee (tiluk, putting Sandal on the forehead). 7, (Making artificial flowers). 8, (Making a bed of flowers). 9, (Colouring the teeth and garments). 10, Munibhoomikurun (adorning an earthen floor with seal-impressions). 11, Syuruchunum (making beds). 12, Ooduk,wady (musical sounds from water). 13, Chitryoguluu (drawing pictures). 14, (making necklaces and turbaa ornaments of flowers). 15, Sekrupeeruyojunum (putting on a turban). 16, Nyputyoguhu (artificial jewels). 17, Kurumu-putr, bunguha (staining the face with colours). 18, Soogunduyooktulhee (extracting perfumed oils). 19, Bhooshunyojunum (proper disposition of jewels in dress). 20, Ayindrujalun (alchemy, conjuring earth into gold, &c.). 21, (Making figures of clay). 22, Hustulaguwu (quickness of hand). 23, (Cookery). 24, Chitrsakapoopbukt, wika rukreea (mixing Shirbet, Lemonade, &c.) 25, Soochuwanukurum (Tailoring). 26, Sooturukreeda (paper-balloons). 27, (beating dumroos) (Tamboreens). 28, Pruhelika (swinging). 29, Prutimala (?) 30, (?) 31, (Poostuk, wachun (reading). 32, (explaining the Natuk books Tales in verse and prose). 33, (do. the Kawye books, on rhetoric and style). 34, (flourishing with a sword, bow and arrow, and spear). 35, Turkukurumu (drawing inferences). 36, Tukshun (carpentry). 37, Wastuwidy (building houses). 38, Roopupuriksha (assaying silver). 39, Duhootuwad (do. gold). 40. Muneeragudnayum (do. rings). 41, Akarudnayum (observant action). 42, Wirookshyaveduyoguhu (gardening). 43, (teaching rams, cocks, and quails to fight). 44, (teaching parrots). 45, Oochadunum (jocularly speaking). 46, (arranging the hair, platted, &c.). 47, (talking by signs). 48, Mlechturukuwikulpuhu (?) 49, Desbhashadnayum (speaking the country dialects). 50, (making carriages of flowers). 51, Nimityudnayum (inferring causes). 52, Yuntru, matrika (connoisseurship in images). 53, Darun, matrika (placing images). 54, Somwuchun (speaking well). 55, Manusekawekrika (guessing thoughts). 56, Ubhidankoshu (understanding the Vocabularies). 57, Chundudnayum (understanding different songs). 58, Kreeawikulpuha (understanding funeral rites). 59, Chultupryoguha (doing mischief). 60, Wustrugopunamee (changing garments). 61, Dyootwisheshy (playing at Songtee). 62, Ukurshunkreeda (playing with a bandalore). 63, Balukreedunkurun (arithmetical recreations). 64, Wynayukeenam, wyjeeyukeenam, wyasukeenam, widya (understanding Muntrus, conjuration of snakes and scorpions, &c. and the nature of evil spirits.)

LAW.

Age of majority.

27. Every boy not a student is of age at the end of his sixteenth year. Munoo 8,27. A boy is entitled to sign papers and make oath as soon as he understands their nature, and is capable of conducting his worldly affairs. He may acquire and possess property at any age; after sixteen his consent is necessary to alienations of descended or self-acquired property until a partition take place between him and his father or brothers. B. S. (Mit.) P. C. A girl is considered of age at her marriage. B. S. (Muddunparajat).

Sale of children.

28. Parents are enjoined not to sell their children. The consent of the child is at least necessary, if old enough to understand the nature of what is done respecting it; the sale of children under such age being permitted only in case of distress*, and then not in case of an only son. B. S. (Mit. Myookh. Poorans.) A text in Mit II, 68, 2, 16. excepts a wife and son, allowing all family property to be given away in time of distress, for the maintenance of the family, or the family not opposing.

Deprivation

29. A father has a right to deprive a son of inheritance only as to property he himself may have acquired, not as to descended wealth. Mit. II, 16, 1, 5. The cases of persons incapable of inheriting altogether would appear to be exceptions to this general rule.

Liability to

30. A son is bound to pay all debts incurred by his parents during his minority, and those incurred on account of Sunsar after that period. Sunsar includes the maintenance of the family, the charges of their several Sunskar ceremonies, especially Marriage; also charitable gifts, feeding Brahmuns, building or repairing sacred places, houses, or wells, planting trees, and charges of Pilgrimage, B. S. (Mit.) But a son is not not bound to pay a father's debt, if contracted on account of liquor, sexual intercourse, or gambling, or a fine, or toll ? * (Soolk) or a gift or money promised to swindlers. Mit. See C. Dig. 1,311. With or without property, a son after attaining twenty years of age is bound to pay a father's debts with interest, a grandson &c. may pay a grandfather's debts without interest, Mit. B. S. And a father is in like manner obliged, should his son die before partition, to defray all his debts incurred on account of Sunsar. And a mother in like manner. Parents and children are reciprocally to maintain each other if in want, B. S. (Mit.)

31. The son of the myheshee, or wife first married, is the elder. B. S. (Poorans) But there is no text on this point in the Mitakshura. As to the case of twins, there is a text of Munoo quoted in the Nirunesindhoo, that the son first seen by the father is the elder. In the Bhagwut as quoted in the Nirunesindhoo the last born twin is the elder, B. S. The eldest son of a Raja succeeds to the sovereignty. (Munoo) But if incompetent a younger would exercise the regal office, (Bharut. Rughoowans) B. S. Vritee or hereditary office does not descend to the eldest son, but is partible, B. S. (Mit.)

SONS.

32 The caste of children born of an adulteress is termed Koondugoluk, that of children born during widowhood, Goluk, in case the parents are Brahmuns. The Jatiwiwek details the titles of other Castes of spurious origin, on account of the impurity of the paternal or maternal ancestor, or the illegality of their union. (These appellations of the Wurunsunkur or Mixed Castes will be found in the 2d part of this Summary.) B. S. Legitimate and illegitimate children are not entitled to share equally. P. C. Children

* Money promised to be given annually until a marriage should be procured, was considered stree-soolk, and as such not binding on the Son, being an illegal debt, B. 2,200. See paragraph 61. The word soolk signifies, 1, Interest, 2, Customs-duties, 3, Price of sale, 4, Money paid to a girl's father as the price of marriage, B. S.

Children of a kept woman born in the house, as of a slave, their mother's caste. The father is bound to maintain and give them in marriage. B. S. P. C. (Mit.) Sons of a Soodru by his slave-girl may even succeed to their father's property, in default of sons by legitimate marriage or daughter's son; they may receive a share by the father's gift, and on the father's death shall be allowed half a share of a legitimate son, Yadn. C. Dig. 3, 143. The term pootrprutee-nidhee, signifying the holder of a son's likeness, is applied to a favorite nephew &c. not only to an illegitimate son or boy maintained from kindness.

1. Should the caste of an exposed child be discovered to be Brahmun, the finder should nourish it as his child; should it be a Soodr, he may bring it up as a Das or slave, B. S. Mit.

ADOPTION.

Why adoption is permitted.

34. Adoption is permitted to insure the following objects. 1, To preserve the adopting Parent from Nuruku (the Hindoo place of torment), and to secure his happiness in the future state, by the adopted son's or his descendants' performance of funeral rites (Kreea), mourning (Sootuk) and annual oblations of Rice (Sraddh supindudan). 2, To preserve the adopting parent's good name in the present world by the practise of almsgiving, feeding Brahmuns, pilgrimages, and other Hindoo virtues. B. S. (Koustoobh). Insanity of a begotten son is no legal cause of adoption. An adoption can take place only where no begotten son or grandson exists, or where the begotten son has lost caste. P. C. B. S.

Different kinds of sons.

35. Twelve kinds of sons are enumerated in the Sastrus, all qualified to offer funeral Cakes. 1, Oorus, son begotten in legal marriage. 2, Peetrikasoot, son of a daughter promised at her previous marriage to be transferred to his grandfather.

3, Kshytrij ; of two kinds ; son of a wife, by religious compact with a supindu relation ; or, son by a brother's widow under the order of the Gooroo and relations. This refers to the obsolete forms of second marriage or procreation by appointment. See C. Dig. 3, 196. 4, Gourhuja, son of a wife by an uncertain father, ten relations living together. 5, Kaneena, son by a girl under eight years of age, previously to marriage. 6, Poonurbhow-ukshut, son by a wife married a second time, the first marriage not having been consummated. P. Kshut, son by a wife who had previously to marriage connection with a paramour. 7, Dut, a son given in adoption, one of the ceremonies being that usual in gifts, viz. Julsunkulp, or pouring water on the hands. 8, Kritriha, a son purchased for adoption, (See Sir T. Strange. App. 107 to 167). 9, Kritrimuha, an orphan conducted by the adopter to his house and named heir of his property by shewing to him a house, field, &c. and saying "this is yours." 10, Swyundutuha, a son who offers himself for adoption. 11, Suhordujuha, a son begotten by an uncertain father, but born after marriage, and brought up by the mother's husband. 12, Upuwidhuhu, a foundling, B. S. Mit. Tr. 301. Of these twelve kinds of sons only two are recognized in the present age (in any Caste) the Oorus or begotten, and the Dut, given in adoption, Udityu Pooran. C. Dig. 3, 272. See Sir T. Strange 2, 164. The Myookli however recognizes two species of the latter, the simply adopted, and the Dwyumooshayuna, over whom the natural father retains certain rights. Mit. Tr. 296.*

36. A man degraded from Caste cannot adopt ; no one would give a son in adoption to him. An impotent man could not adopt,

* The rights of obsolete species of Sons to inherit to their own father only, and in what proportion, are variously stated in texts cited in C. Dig. 3, 145 and seq. The Pootrashtu ceremony, and the distinction of Nity and Unity adoptions are not recognized in Poona. See Sir T. Strange 2, 187. The ninth son is called by Mr. Borradaile a son chosen from fancy ; and by Mr. Colebrooke, a son made or adopted by the man himself.

adopt, at least unless after marriage. There is no reason why a man become blind, deaf, dumb, diseased or insane should not adopt, either himself or through his wife, and the adoptee will succeed to all his property descended or otherwise. There is no exception to the case of an adoptee; he may adopt after marriage. B. S.

37. Although there exists no legal restriction as to the adopter's age, it is inferred that he should not adopt until no hope remain of begetting a son. B. S. See Replies from the Poona Sastrees quoted in B. 2, 92. If the Gotr of the adopter and of the adoptee be the same, the age of the latter also is not restricted; but if it be different, the adoptee should be under five years age at the time of adoption. Myookh. Mit. Tr. 310. The latter however ought to be as young as possible, both on account of the supervision of the Sunskars (including the Moonj), as well as the filial and parental relation of the parties. The Poona Sastrees do not however recognize the necessity that adoption should precede moonj and marriage*; the passage so interpreting the law is said by the author of the Myookh to be an interpolation. Mit. Tr. 310. B. S.

38. Any brother's son should be the first selected for adoption; should there be none, or should the boy's parents &c. refuse consent, his place is to be supplied by, 2d, Any boy of the same Gotr, and descended from a common ancestor within three generations (Sunghit, Sugotr, Supindu); 3d, Any boy connected with the family by the female line of connections for whom funeral cakes are offered (Usugotr supindu); such are the mother's brother's son, or the father's sister's son; 4th, Any boy of the same Gotr, descended from a common ancestor within seven generations, within which degree marriage is prohibited

* As appears to be the case in Bengal, See Sir F. M. 139 and 141 to 146. The adoptee from a different Gotr after having received the Moonj in his natural Gotr, is called Unity and temporary, Sir T. Strange 2, 98.

hibited (wireod sumbund). These relations are called the Sugotr dushantil; 5th, Any boy of the same Gotr, the genealogy of whose relationship is otherwise unknown (Sugotr-matr); 6th, A boy of a different Gotr, but of the same Caste (Purgotr). Such are the sister's son and daughter's son who are adoptible in default of the preceding, P. C. (Koustoobh and Nirune-sindhoo). A paternal uncle cannot be adopted, being in place of his father. Nor a maternal uncle, for "an elder relation" (without regard to the relative age of the parties) "cannot be adopted." It is inferred that a younger brother may be adopted by an elder brother, because the latter is "in place of a father" (Ramayun) though he is nowhere enjoined to do so, B. S.*

39. An only son, a youngest, or an eldest son, ought not to be given in adoption, Mit. Tr. 310. Except to his uncle or to the widow of the latter, the children of a brother being considered as one family, Munoo 9, 182. B. S. (Mahabharut &c.) See Sir F. M. 147.

Who are not adoptible.

40. It is necessary to obtain the consent to an adoption of the adoptee's father; and of his mother, provided she be resident with her husband and not insane or otherwise incapable of consenting, Mit. Tr. 309. It is enjoined that notice of an adoption should be given to the relations within the Sugotr Supindut† and to the Raja, though no provision appears in case of their disapprobation, even in adoptions by widows, B. S. (Myookh. Mit.)

* The order of selection is otherwise stated. 1, Bundhoopootr. 2, Sugotr Supindu. 3, Usugotr supindu. 4, Sugotr-matr. 5, Purgotr, B. S. The passage, it appears from Mit. Tr. 311, is very obscure, and variously read and interpreted.

One opinion of the Poona Sastrees quoted in B. 2,99, agreeably to the Koustoobh, excludes the son of a sister, or of a daughter, or of a mother within the wireod Sumbund. (This does not affect Soodrus) See note on Marriage, para. 6. See Sir Fr. M. 149. 154. and Sir T. Strange 71 and 2, 77.

† The word Nyatee is translated by Colebrooke "gentile relations." This is in a restricted sense. It is sometimes held to mean "Caste." See note in B. 2, 450. An ambiguity which is very important.

case of the death of an adopted son (and total loss of Caste is considered equivalent to death) another may be selected and given in the same manner, but a man after adopting one boy cannot adopt another at the desire of a second wife &c. Only one adopted son can subsist at one time, B. S. (Mit

42. Of the numerous ceremonies enjoined in the Sastrus, the following are the most essential. 1, Prutigruhu, the formal giving away of the boy by his parents, and acceptance by the other party, with the form of Julsunkulp or pouring water on the hands. Presents may or may not be given. 2, Mustukawugrun, the placing the boy in the adopter's lap, the latter breathing on his head. 3, Hom, fire-sacrifice performed by the Poorohit or others. This is said to be unnecessary in adoptions of a brother's or daughter's son (or younger brother. B. S.) which are performed by Wakyudan or verbal gift. B. 2, 85. Soodrus cannot perform any ceremonies requiring Muntrus from the Veds (Vedokt-kurum). 4, Deepwarna, the revolution of a lamp, a ceremony at Pooja or worship of the idol. 5, Brahmunbhogun, alms of food &c. to Brahmuns, B. S. (Koustoobh). Myookh, ch. on adoption. B. 2, 85. Such of these ceremonies as require the repetition of Muntrus, as the Mustukawugrun &c., cannot be performed by a female adopter personally ; she must go through the essential form of taking the adoptee in her lap, and supply funds for Brahmun Agency in other respects.† B. S. Mit. Tr. 308. After these ceremonies (Widhan) have been fully performed, an adoption cannot be annulled. B. 1, 78. Pending their performance, another may be chosen, Do. 80. On account of the previous enquiry, few cases can occur of the discovery subsequent to adoption that the boy has not been adopted in the prescribed order, or that his age age exceeds the limit, or that he was an only son, or that the consent of the prescribed persons has not been obtained ; should such discovery be made, the adoption cannot be annulled after the above ceremonies have been performed, and they are not essential where the adoptee is of the same Gotr. But in case of discovery that the boy, being of another Gotr, was not adopted with those ceremonies, or that he was of another Caste, the adoption is null, and the boy is to receive maintenance as a Das or Slave. This is however an inference only, for nothing has been met with in the Mitakshura respecting nullity of an adoption. Previous enquiry is enjoined as a duty. B. S.

43. An adopted son is to be considered in all respects as a begotten son. As he is heir to his adoptive father, so he inherits property descended to the latter from his father or brothers. P. C. Mit. See Sir F. M. 132 &c. He cannot after being adopted claim the family and estate of his natural father, which follow the funeral oblations ; nor is he liable to pay his natural father's debts. See Mit. Tr. 318. Only in case of being adopted by his father's brother, the adoptee is enjoined to perform the Sraddh both for his natural and adoptive fathers, inheriting the property of the former however only in default of heirs in order of succession before brothers' sons.* An adopted son is restricted from intermarrying with any girl of either his natural or adoptive families within the prohibited degrees, (See Marriage, para. 6), and his descendants are under a similar restriction with regard to the former family to the third generation, viz. so long as remembrance may continue of the adoption, B. S. (Koustoobh.) See in B. No. 133, a singular case of an adopted son returning into his own family by regeneration a second time performed.

* Yasn. C. Dig. 3,203, restricts this to the case of the Dwyamooshyayun, or son begotten by appointment on a brother's betrothed, called the son to two fathers. This, though not illegal, as the appointment of a wife or widow, is not practised in the present age. Sir T. Strange 2,94.

the father's property, the former one-fourth, B. S. Mit. Tr.

The share should vary according to the personal quality of the individual (Mahabharut) B. S. No exception occurs of Soodrus, B. S

45. It is preferable that a wife or widow should adopt a son by the order or sanction of her husband, and if the latter has not been obtained, the sanction of her husband's Supindu relations, or Caste (Nyatee) is necessary, B. S. Myookh, B. 2,451. For a woman, according to Munoo and Yadnyawulkya, is under perpetual guardianship. So a boy may be given in adoption by his mother if her husband be absent, or though present incapable of assenting, See Mit. Tr. 307.† If there be two Widows, they ought to adopt by mutual consent; otherwise the elder should have the preference in point of right; P. C. B. S. It is inferred that the younger may adopt by order of the elder, not without it, B. S. Although no text has been observed in the Mitakshura declaring the order of the elder widow essential to the validity of an adoption by the younger; P. C. But, as in other cases, the younger widow cannot after the death of the elder, having adopted a son, adopt another to supersede him during his life, B. S. Neither can a widow adopt while under puberty, B. S. In a case mentioned in B. 2,452, the consent of an adoptive mother-in-law to an adoption by her adopted son's widow was inferred, from her not having expressly prohibited it; here the relation of the parties was similar to that of an elder and younger widow. The eldest son, as in place of his father, should concur with his mother in giving a younger brother ther in adoption.* B. S. With these limitations, including that mentioned in para. 42, the provisions regarding adoption are the same as regards males or females adopting. In respect to property, a widow after an adoption has only a life interest in it, with the exception of her Streedhun, the adopted son being both manager and heir. And should they separate, the widow and adoptee take equal shares, Mit. Tr. 285. See the case in B. 2,452, where the adopted son of an adoptive daughter-in-law obtained from his adoptive grandmother one-half the inheritance, the whole having previously been in the possession of the grandmother.

* According to the Dayabhagu, the adoptee takes in this case one-third, being excluded from inheriting property of Supindus, Colebrooke's Tr. 155. Sir F. M. 137, 151.

† According to the Gour on Bengal School the husband's order is absolutely necessary. Mit. Tr. 308, Sir F. M. 155.

GUARDIANSHIP.

46. In case of a partition not having taken place between the father of a young child and his brothers previously to his decease, the father's brother (Mit. B. S. or by Custom P. C.) called pitruwya, is to take charge of the maintenance and education of the child, and assume the management of the property. Should there have been a partition, the mother or the eldest son, being of age, or in default, friends or nearest relations, will be guardians; the latter giving notice to the Raja or Magistrate, to whom in the event of the child's having no relations, the charge in the last resort devolves. The same order should be observed in appointing guardians of lunatics, B. S. The charges of the Sunskar ceremonies of Minors are to be paid out of the whole estate, where one of a family has died pending community of property, Mit. Tr. 286. In the event of abuse of trust, the Raja would enquire and punish, as he is the ultimate guardian; nothing precise has been found in the Mit. on this point, B. S.

No express mention is made in the Sastrus of dying gifts or testamentary bequests, in this or other cases, B. S. A pupil is to remain in the house of an artificer for the purpose of learning his art for as long a period as may be agreed on, during which he is to receive food and clothing from his master, and deliver to him the produce of his labour. 48. The relation of Master and Servant, independent of pupils and apprentices, results from their mutual contract, the latter performing specified work in consideration of the master's giving him wages of labour either in money or maintenance, and sometimes a share of the profits accruing from his labour. Servants comprise soldiers, husbandmen, and porters or domestic hired servants. The master is enjoined to maintain and treat his servant kindly according to the performance of the service, and to maintain him during temporary sickness; he is authorized to beat or otherwise punish him in proportion to his fault. A master and servant cannot be witnesses in each other's cause; a master has a right to interfere with another injuring his servant, or attempting to punish him, but he is not answerable for theft or other heinous crime committed by the servant. Neither is the servant responsible for losses of property committed to him, if by internal commotion, robbery, fire or flood, without his wilful negligence, for which, and for refusing to perform stipulated work, fines are specified, B. S. (Mit.)

Slaves of different kinds.

49. Slaves are of fifteen kinds. 1, Children of a female slave born in the master's house by any father. 2, Purchased with money. 3, Given by another. 4, Hereditary in the family. 5, Maintained originally in the house to preserve their lives from death by famine. 6, Mortgaged by another. 7, Self-Mortgaged, the the new master being answerable for the debt. 8, Taken in war, the prisoner begging his life from the conqueror. 9, When the party has staked himself as a slave on the issue of a game of chance. 10, Where the party offers himself as a slave. 11, A Sunyasee who has lost Caste. 12, Temporary slavery on condition of some act to be performed by the master. 13, Maintained with food and clothing and kreea performed only (Bukt-das). 14, On agreement with the master of a female slave on condition of connection with her.* 15, Self-sold, B. S. Mit.

50. Of these the master should maintain and pay the marriage expences of the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, and 13th, descriptions, being permanent and hereditary slaves, B. S. (Mit.) The conditions of servitude are easy, but such slaves cannot emancipate themselves without the master's consent. Other kinds of slaves may emancipate themselves, or "take leave of their master," on presenting him with the value of what he has expended in food and clothing on their account. The 6th and 7th are emancipated on payment of the debt and interest. The 12th, at the expiration of the period. The 8th, 9th, and 10th, may enfranchise themselves by offering substitutes. One enslaved by force and sold by robbers is to be released from slavery, as is a slave who saves his master's life from a tiger or robbers; and in case of the master having a son by his female slave, having no other son at the time, the boy and his mother are to be emancipated.† B. S. Mit. Slaves are transferable property on the same tenure, and time is allowed for their examination and trial, as of grain, cattle, &c. Yasn. C. Dig. 2, 3, 10. COMMUNITY OF PROPERTY.

55. There are distinctions in the books between property descended, re-acquired, or acquired de novo. The first species may have been acquisitions by the father or grandfather, and descended to the possessor by inheritance. This is called Pit-rarjit-dhun. The 2d signifies property possessed by an ancestor, since unjustly seized by another, and afterwards re-acquired by the rightful owner. The 3d comprehends all property acquired by a man, whether by his own unaided exertions, or with the aid of his father, or relations, or of inherited property. Acquisitions by unaided exertions comprehend wealth acquired by knowledge, through friendship, marriage, hospitality, (Munoo 9,206) or by arms, service, trade, agriculture or gaming, B. S. property.

Property is also distinguished as immovable (Sthir-Drewy) and moveable (Chur-Drewy). In the 1st chapter of the translation of the Mitakshara is considered the abstract question whether property is of a temporal or spiritual nature.

56. While a family retains its property in common, the father, son, elder brother, or younger brother (the former being dead, or unoomutees nyogyu, viz. incapable of managing affairs), or other male relation capable, is to be recognized as the manager, such manager (kurta, karbaree) is to be obeyed as a father and consulted on all occasions, enjoying precedence; he is entitled to an equal share of the descended family property, B. Tr. 286, 268. Wealth acquired by learning, presented to a guest, given by a friend, or received at or on account of marriage, is reserved by the acquirer (Munoo 9,206) and is not partible except by the owner's consent, Munoo, C. father's wife are entitled each to a son's share, a grandmother to food and clothing. B. S. Mit. and as in other cases (see para. 25) they may alienate moveables, for subsistence or charitable purposes, without the consent of the male relations. See texts cited in C. Dig. 3, 13, 17, 31, 82.*

The share of a sister is to be in proportion to the property, and to the brother's share's viz. one-fourth of the latter, to provide for her marriage expences, Mit. Tr. 287. Hence she is not entitled to receive it if her marriage have been previously performed.

62. Of property to be partitioned between a father and his sons, that which is immoveable and inherited from the grandfather, as well as that gained by its means, cannot be alienated by the father to one son, or (a fortiori) to a stranger by (will, or) deed of gift, without the consent of all the sons.† Mit. * Whether the mother takes this property on a life interest, or absolutely, (viz. with full power to alienate it without the consent of the next heirs) and whether there is any distinction between immoveable, moveable, ancestral and acquired Property, are points on which contradictory texts have been cited in Bengal. Sir F. M. seems to recognize no distinction in the two latter cases, and thinks that females generally taking a life interest only, cannot without consent of the next heirs alienate any but a moderate part of their property, and that for necessary subsistence, or religious and charitable purposes, 11 to 25, 32. Of course this does not prevent the gift by a widow to her husband's next heir, even of ancestral immoveable property, 308. But she cannot settle property on one heir while another may be subsequently born, 318. Sir F. M. thinks that mothers of daughters and childless wives are entitled to maintenance only, 59. Mothers of sons are entitled to share only on a partition between their own sons, or their descendants, not on that between their own sons and other relations, 42. A mother of one son cannot share with him, but she may with his sons as grandmother, 54. Even if a woman's great grandsons are among the partitioners, she may share provided some one or more of her more immediate descendants are parties to the partition, 31. The Dayabhagu infers that Partition among brothers can only take place after the mother's death, or by her consent, Tr. 57.

† Sir F. M. considers the sister to possess a claim rather than a right, 56, 98 to 106.

‡ See texts cited in C. Dig. 3, 15 and to 36. The question according to the law-books current in Bengal seems an exceedingly perplexed one, Sir F. M. 242, 266, 291. It had been decided by the Sudur Deewanee Udalut that a father has the power of unequally distributing among his sons ancestral immoveable property, if formally given and possessed, though the act was considered immoral. A contrary decision is quoted in p. 277, but it depended on the construction of a local law. Another in p. 285, unless it turned on the point of no possession having been allowed, is also contrary. And an opinion of Pundits quoted in p. 300 denies the validity of the gift of the whole of such property by

279. P. C. Nor are the sons justified in consuming ancestral immoveable property, although with their father's permission, Mit. Tr. 254, B. S. On a partition the father and sons take equal shares (Sumu, wibhag) of all descended property. The father is at liberty to give to his sons (wishum, wibhag) unequal shares of moveables and acquired property, B. S. The father may reserve to himself one extra share of all property acquired by his own exertions, Mit. Tr. 259; and as respects that property, he may even deprive his son of succession to it, but the son has an indefeasible right to inherit descended property.* P. C. Mit. Tr. 257, 277. A son having a competence from his own occupation may debar himself and descendants from his share, receiving a trifle to prevent future discussion, Munoo, C. Dig. 3, 67. Mit. Tr. 262, B. Tr. 281. B. S. Sir F. M. 109. A mother and son may make partition in equal shares, father to a younger son during the life of the elder. The power of a father to distribute ancestral immoveable property unequally among his sons, by will, has been recognized in the Calcutta Supreme Court, and its alienation to a stranger would on the same way be held valid, though immoral, 274.

So also the Dayubhagu, which limits to cases of extreme family distress the alienation of immoveables, Tr. 30.

Sir F. M. observes, that if possession at the time is essential to the validity of a gift the right to bequeath property is denied, and the decisions of the two courts in Calcutta are at variance, 296.

* According to the Dayubhagu, the father and sons take equal shares, or the former a double share, of ancestral immoveable property, the father being at liberty to distribute all moveables and immoveable acquired property ad libitum. Tr. 27, 29. See texts in the 3d Vol. of C. Dig. where rules are given for the father's unequal distribution of his wealth among his sons; he is directed to give a larger share to the eldest son, to a son of great virtue, to one who has a large family, and a less share to a disobedient and vicious son, being guided by a just judgment and not by partiality for a particular wife or child.

The commentators differ as to whether the sons have by birth a vested right in their shares, and consequently whether a father is fineable for a capricious exclusion, Sir F. M. 243. An opinion of Pundits quoted in p. 266 extends the father's optional disposal even to ancestral immoveable property. The Hindoo Law in Bengal recognizes a distinction between legal and moral wrong. In the former case the act is null, in the latter (as in a majority of mere injunctions) though incurring a taint of sin, it is valid, and cannot be set aside, Dayubhagu, Tr.

63. After the specified reservations, the property of the father is to be divided in equal shares among the sons, or their lineal male representatives to the fourth in descent; or in default of the latter, according to the prescribed order of succession hereafter stated, P. C. Although rules for unequal partition* are to be found in the sacred ordinances, they are not to be followed, because the practice is abhorred by the world, Mit. Tr. 264. But property acquired by one brother, through his personal exertion, without the aid of and without detriment to his family or the patrimony, may be wholly reserved by the acquirer. Any one who assisted him ought to receive his proportion, B. S. (Mit.) See paragraph 30 on the liability of sons to pay their father's debts. Generally, sharers of property are bound to defray the debts of the late possessor, according to their ability, (Mit. Myookh,) and the payment is demandable from the manager. If a debt remain unpaid from the poverty of a debtor, the creditor ought to believe that he had in a former life unjustly detained property from the debtor, or that it will be repaid in a future transmigration. So treasure-trove is to be considered the payment of a debt due to the finder's ancestor in a former stage of existence, B. S. But the non-payment of debts contracted on account of Sunskar ceremonies entails impurity not expiable by the heir's performance of funeral rites, and the deceased is supposed to remain in Nuruku, B. S. (Mahabharut. Summut-Koomar-Sunhita Pooran.)†

* These rules may be seen in C. Dig. 3. They refer to inequality of shares on account of the caste of the mothers, of the different descriptions of filiation, of the different qualifications of the sons, as primogeniture, prodigality &c. Mit. Tr. 291 Dayabhagu Tr 30.

† In the Calcutta Supreme Court, a representative has been held liable for debts of the predecessor to the amount only of assets which have come into his hand, Sir F. M. 599. Parceners were considered liable before partition for necessary debts jointly and severally contracted; after partition, for the proportion of such debts to the amount of their respective shares.

71. The supreme dignity of Raja, is to be held by the eldest son. Other species of property are subject to the rules mentioned in paragraph 65 as impartible, and a separate acquirer of property is entitled to the whole of it with these exceptions, in case the sons on the father's death choose to separate, and provided the father died subsequent to partition with his father or brothers, his property is to be shared by the sons in in equal shares, or by their lineal male representatives to the 4th in descent.* (B. S. P. C. Mit. Tr. 331, 2) subject to the provisions of reservation on Partition noticed in paragraph 61.

72. In default of sons or their lineal male representatives to the 4th in descent, the divided property of the deceased is taken by his widow, or shared by his widows, if more than one, Mit. Tr. 324. Females however possess a life-interest only in immoveable inherited property, and cannot therefore alienate it without consent of the next male heirs, B. S. Myookh. A text of Munoo referred to in the Mitakshura (Tr. 365) enumerates inherited property among Streedhun, and it might therefore be inferred that although a widow remain under her male relation's guardianship, he or they cannot controul her absolutely as to disposing of her property, as if the immoveable wealth were entailed to the male heirs; but, this interpretation is not recognized, and property inherited by females after their death is held to follow the order of succession to property of a separated brother,† and not that of succession to Streedhun.

* Sir F. M. states that an estate cannot descend to a great-grandson unless there an intermediate heir living at the period of the death of the last possessor, 3.

† The Myookh, which is also followed in Goozerat on this point of law, admits varieties of Streedhun besides those quoted from Munoo in Mit. Tr. 365, but restricts a woman from alienating such property without the next heir's consent. The Sastrics in Goozerat do not include property inherited by women among Streedhun, B. S. The Dayubha, expressly states that a widow's inherited property is shared on her death by her husband's heirs, Tr. 181. The widow may mortgage or sell it, under her relation's guardianship, for subsistence or religious purposes (as her husband's obsequies) 184. Sir F. M. however states that one widow's share is to go on her death to her daughters, not to other widows, and that a widow inherits whether her husband were of a divided or undivided family, 5, 6. It was decided in the S. C. at Calcutta, amid a variety of opinions, that a widow has a life-interest in all property to which she is heiress, but that she may alienate it to a moderate extent without consent of the next heirs, even for other than religious or charitable purposes. It is enjoined however that she should in preference give it to her husband's relations, or for the good of his soul, 11 to 25. Sir F. M. is of opinion that the Courts should secure the principal of a widow's property for the next heir, giving her for life its annual produce, 74.

The ambiguous answers seem partly to arise from a desire on the part of Brahmin Sastrics to relax the strict rules of entail in cases of gifts to their own Caste, for the endowment of Temples &c. (Dan-Dharm).

9. Daughters

73. In default of a widow, the daughter of the deceased takes his property, but for life only. An unmarried daughter is preferred to a married child-bearing daughter, Mit. Tr. 391; the estate therefore devolves on the latter after the former has held it for life (see Case, B. 1, 91); a widowed daughter is last in order. All the daughters being single, or child-bearing, or widowed, they inherit in equal shares, and on the death of each, such property being held to be Streedhun would descend to the daughters of the deceased,* and, in default of issue, to her husband, B. S. Mit. II, 11, 31. But it is inferred from the Myookh (held of superior authority on this point) that such property would go to the next heirs as property of a separated brother, viz. on the death of each daughter to her sons &c. but not to her husband, See para. 74, 76, and if immovable, the daughters cannot without their consent alienate it.

In default of all the above, the pupil and fellow-student and heirs; should there be none, the property of a deceased Brahmin should be given to Brahmuns, and that of any other Caste to the Raja.*

All connected in an equal degree by funeral ceremonies take equally.

* The above is the order prescribed in the Mitakshura. That in the Myookh is in some points different; it interposes the sister between the paternal grandfather and grandmother. In a case mentioned in B. 1, 71, of property inherited by a man from his maternal grandfather, claimed by his paternal uncle's widow, his sister was declared heiress. The principle however in this case avowed by the Sastrees seems rather to have been the acquisition of the property through the female or maternal line.

After parents, Sir F. M. gives the following order of succession. Uterine brothers, brothers of the half-blood, sons of uterine brothers, sons of brothers by the half-blood, grandsons of uterine brothers, grandsons of brothers by the half-blood, sisters' sons, and their heirs, paternal grandfather, his widow, sons and heirs &c. 1, 2.

See C. Dig. 3, 439 to 489. Some texts prefer the brothers to the widow, but these refer (as explained in 477) to an undivided estate.

To the property of a Wanuprust or jungle-devotee succeeds his fellow student. To that of a Sunyasee his virtuous disciple, and to that of a Bruhmachary, his Gooroo, Mit. Tr. 354.

75. If no partition have taken place between the deceased and his collateral relations, the above order of succession will apply to his acquired property (they not having aided in the acquisition,) and ancestral property &c. will be shared by the collaterals in the same order, but reckoning from the ancestor receiving his share on the last family partition, or the separate acquirer of hitherto unpartitioned property, instead of from the deceased, Mit. Tr. 276.

76. Streedhun is of six kinds: 1, 2, Gifts to a woman by her father and mother at her marriage. 3, Do. by her brother on her first going to reside with her husband. 4, Do. by her husband on his marrying a 2d wife. 5, Do. by her maternal uncle after her marriage. 6, Do. by any other person at any period, B. S. (Mit.) According to Munoo, it consists of, 1, What was given before the nuptial fire; 2, In the bridal procession; 3, Out of affection; 4, By a brother; 5, By the mother; 6, By the father, Munoo 9, 194. Other enumerations are given in Mit. Tr. 365 &c. Property acquired by inheritance, purchase, partition, seizure, or finding, is classed among Streedhun in a text of Munoo, but the interpretation is not recognized, See note on paragraph 72. The Myookh excepts from Streedhun Property acquired by a woman by Oopadhu (in War &c;) or given by way of deposit &c. at any other time than above specified by her husband father or brother; or gained by virtuous accomplishments, as drawing &c. A woman may recover by judicial complaint the value of her Streedhun taken by her husband for any purpose except in time of famine, for necessary purposes of religion, in sickness; or in imprisonment, Mit. II. 16, 1, 5. B. 1, 371. But the husband possesses the right of alienating the the wife's Streedhun in those cases,* Mit. Tr. 374. although the husband's creditor has no right to seize it, and the wife's power of unlimited alienation is held to extend to moveables only viz. her wearing apparel and ornaments.

Succession to Streedhun.

The succession to Streedhun is different from that to ordinary property. An unmarried girl's Streedhun descends, 1, To her Sodor, i. e. her uterine brothers and sisters ; 2, To her mother ; 3, To her father. And if betrothed, the betrother may on her death retake his presents, paying charges incurred on both sides, Mit. Tr. 374, Sir F. M. 239. A married woman may give away her Streedhun during her life, to her daughters, for religious, charitable or other purposes ; and on her death, after payment of her debts, it descends to her

property.

77. It has been seen that a father, son, or brother in community may without the consent of his next heirs alienate property acquired by himself, if wholly unassisted in the acquisition; and that females have the power of so alienating their Streedhun and inherited property, to the extent of moveables. In distress, for the maintenance of the family, or the family not opposing, the whole family property may be given away except a wife or son. But not to the extent of the whole of a man's estate if he have issue living, nor what he has promised to another, Mit. II, 68, 2, 16. In ordinary cases, descended property cannot be alienated by brothers in community without the consent of the next heirs, being capable of contracting; nor can such property, if immoveable, be alienated by a father without the consent of his sons or next heirs. The heirs are not bound to surrender such property to a claimant under a bequest, unless their signatures were affixed to the deed (Danputr,†) P. C. On the alienation of Vritee Sthirdrewy, and members of the family, see paragraph 16. In gifts, a moveable should be received by the donee, with the ceremony of Julsunkulp or pouring water on the hands. A house should be shewn to the donee, and pronounced to be his before witnesses. Enjoyment (Oopubhag) by the donee exclusive of acceptance (Prutigruhu) is not essential, Mit. The latter implies enjoyment

* Some commentators assign a different order according to the various kinds of Marriage now obsolete, and according to the different species of Streedhun. A more minute specification may be seen in the Mit. Tr. Int. VI. or Sir F. M. 239 ment of a part of the thing given, though temporary. Gifts to a son-in-law on a daughter's marriage, during community of property, not immoveable, are valid, and the moveables so given descend to the children by the marriage. But if no Dan-putr has been signed by the relations, their claim on immoveable property ceases on the expiration of the Smart-karl or Smurun-wishae, viz. the period to which recollection extends, interpreted to mean three generations or one hundred years, Mit.

No distinction is recognised in the books between Gifts and Bequests. Mr. Colebroke has interpreted the law of gifts in Jimootavuhuna to extend to wills, but the latter is not a Hindoo institution.*

CONTRACTS.

78. A person is incapacitated from signing contracts, or witnessing documents, or giving evidence, by old age, by the passions of anger and lust, intoxication, idiocy, insanity, or minority. Loss of Caste and devoteeship are a civil death. Slaves can only contract by their master's permission, B. S. The mind of the party must be in a sound and intelligent state, Mit. Sales by a drunken, insane man or idiot, or for a base price, or by a dependant, are to be annulled, (Myookh) B. 2, 118. In such cases the intent of the party cannot be presumed in favor of the transfer.

* The Calcutta Supreme Court recognize the validity of bequests as to property that might be given during the Testator's life, viz. all acquired property, and Moveables descended. A will bequeathing the whole of a man's property to an idol was set aside, and a partition ordered, Sir F. M. 322. More limited bequests, for similar superstitious purposes, and to a large amount, have been frequently allowed, 347. 376. The abstract right to bequeath even ancestral immoveable property was recognized in a decree, 341. A will bequeathing the whole of a man's property to brothers, excluding a childless widow, and another similar will excluding a widow and two daughters, were held valid by the Supreme Court, 360, 361. A widow becoming a suttee was held to have died simultaneously with her husband, and her legacies therefore lapsed as part of the testator's estate, 374. A father would not be allowed to prevent his descendants partitioning property unequally bequeathed to them, at their option, 327. See also Cases in Sir T. Strange's Chapter on the Testamentary Power.

LAW.

79. On the same principle, a document, the signature to which has been obtained by force or fraud, or in any way contrary to the intent of the party signing, as by mistake, or for an illegal object, may be annulled on positive proof of the fact. Witnesses to the signature of a party giving a bond, if friends of his or otherwise incompetent, would not be admissible to prove it. So a bribe may be returned although the unlawful act have been performed ; otherwise the contract would be void property and unless he has suffered the limited period to expire without giving notice to the owner and obtaining his permission to retain it. He must replace it, if lost by other means than Rajkrant, and if damaged by his fault the amount of the damage will lessen the interest. But if it perish naturally in course of time another pledge must be given by the debtor. The owner may obtain his property on demand, even before the period fixed on has elapsed.

81. Pledge is of two kinds; 1, Gopyu, of gold, silver or other moveables for custody. 2, Bhagyu, of land and houses for use. The party receiving the property in pledge is supposed to keep it in his custody, and to enjoy its proceeds or revenues, if susceptible thereof, in discharge of the debt and interest for which it has been pledged. As to loss or damage of a pledge, vide suprà on friendly deposits for use. It does not appear that if the borrower be robbed of his money the pawnee should lose the debt, though the contract of pledge is reciprocally advantageous. See Macnaghten on Moohumudan Law, p. LXVIII. A pledge for custody may be used after the period fixed for its redemption has passed by default of the other party; and a pledge for use may in the same case be sold and the proceeds applied in discharge of the debt. The party enjoying the pledged property is directed to give notice to the owner if it receive injury, and it is to continue in his custody only in the event of the owner then giving permission to that effect. A pledge is alienable strictly on the same tenure. In the event of a house &c. being mortgaged to two or more persons, the right is with the prior party who entered into possession, not with the prior contractor. It is the fault of the 1st Mortgagee if he have not taken possession implied in all Hindoo Pledges. In all Civil Cases, except Mortgage, Gift, and Sale, the posterior act is of the greater validity; but in pledges, if Priority be not ascertained, he has a right (in case of a house) to enjoy its possession who first entered and fastened the door; if several thus entered ed on possession at once all must enjoy the property equally. case is not altered by a deed of sale given by the owner to a new party, prior possession under the tenure agreed on being held to prevail. There is no limit to the right of ownership of property pledged by lapse of time; heirs of the original pledger may always claim it on repayment of the debt and interest. It is not allowed to use a pledge after twice the principal has been realized from its enjoyment, nor, according to Munoo, to receive at the same time a sum for interest greater than the amount of the principal.

paddy.

82. On Loans for consumption, as money, it is prohibited to take from Brahmuns interest on interest, i. e. compound interest (Chukr, vriddhee). 20 per cent per mensem is the highest limit of interest; and that to be taken from a Sea trader. 4 per Cent per mensem may be taken from a Soodr. 3 per Cent is the maximum to be exacted from a Wys. $1\frac{3}{4}$ per Cent from a Kshutriyu. From a Brahmun 8 annas (was-thwik, just); 12 annas (Sumany, moderate); to $1\frac{1}{4}$ per Cent (Nidan, inmoderate). Higher interest is allowed if no pledge or security have been given, if in a period of distress, or if there be any extraordinary risk. Grain, and some other articles may be doubled, tripled, &c. on repayment. There are also particular injunctions relative to different countries and seasons, to the nature of the loan and the thing lent. It is prohibited to take interest from a Gooroo or a friend; or on articles given with the donor's free-will. Property lent and refused to be retaken on tender, may be deposited with a 3d person, and bears no interest afterwards.

83. The sons of a security for payment are bound to pay the debt without interest if required, and if the debt be first proved against the principal. The sons of a security for appearance are not bound to produce the person for whom their father was security. Joint securities for payment are answerable severally for the whole sum, unless there have been an agreement to make each answerable for a share.

84. A purchaser is bound to pay interest from a day specified, on taking away the article bought without paying its purchase money, but paying the seller earnest money (wisar), on special agreement to that effect. A person agreeing to purchase and afterwards refusing to take the property, is bound to defray the owner's loss on a re-sale provided his agreement be proved by his having given earnest, by a written document, or by witnesses; not on the owner's simple word only. A person agreeing to sell afterwards refusing to give the property is in like manner, on similar proof only, bound to make up the other's loss. The earnest is forfeited by the buyer if the fault be on his side (Mit. II. 25, 1, 12), and if on that of the seller, the buyer receives from him double the value of the earnest. It is prohibited to purchase goods of a thief; purchases must be made after giving information to the sirkar; or to 3 or 4 traders in the bazar: goods stolen, and purchased subsequently without such precaution in the street or bazar privately, must be restored to the owner on his recognizing them. If within a certain number of days after sale, the period varying for different articles, the seller discover the thing sold to have been of greater value, or the buyer discover a defect in it, the sale may be annulled. Fines are also specified for various frauds.

Purchase,
Barter or Ex-

85. It is at the pleasure of the person who has to repay debts either to give the priority of payment to a mortgagee, or to a prior debtor in point of time, or to pay all his creditors in equal proportions. It is allowed to a creditor to prevent his debtor from eating (Unusun), and from following his accustomed occupation (Karyerodh) but not if the debtor be a Brahmun. On the obligation of heirs to pay debts, see Paragraphs 30 and 61. Profit and and loss among partners are directed to be in proportion to the stock of each, according to agreement, Yasn. C. Dig. 2, 5. One partner is to make good losses incurred by his negligence or in disobedience to the orders of others, and to receive one-tenth of all recovered by him when endangered by rajkrant, Yasn. C. Dig. 2, 12. A nominee may act for an incapable partner, and in case of the heir being incapable, will succeed.

PRESCRIPTION &c.

86. A man after failing to demand for 20 years (having the power to do so) cannot claim the value of the proceeds of an immoveable deposit for custody or gift, from the bailee, (B. 2, 373) donor, or their representative, and after smart-karl (the period beyond which recollection does not extend, viz. 100 years) he loses his ownership in the property. So after 10 years he cannot claim the proceeds of a moveable, and after twenty years he loses his ownership; in both cases, by neglect to prosecute his own right, the other party obtains prescriptive possession. If the heir of the last proprietor cannot prove his title by documents or witnesses, he cannot displace one who has actually enjoyed the property. But where default of the legal owner has been unavoidable, prescriptive possession will not avail against proof of ownership after any period.

trove.

87. Should a superior Brahmun find property in a jungle, the Raja is directed to give him the whole; if a Brahmum of mean capacity, he is to receive one-third; any one finding property in his own field has a right to the whole; brothers before partition taking the whole, and the finder being entitled to an extra share on partition. The rightful owner may receive his property on claiming it within three years. There are many other distinctions. See Sir F. M. 435.

88. A boundary dispute is to be settled by examination of, 1, Land marks, as stones, trees, charcoal or rice husks buried in the fields; 2, Witnesses from the neighbourhood; 3, Enjoyment by either party; 4, Kreea or Ordeal. disputes.

EVIDENCE.

89. Evidence is of two kinds; 1, Manooshyu, of men, whether written or oral; 2, Dyw, by divine demonstration viz. the injury accruing to a false speaker after his undergoing the Kreea or ordeal. Of these the oath or ordeal is only to be administered in the absence of proof of the 1st kind. There are many kinds of oath and ordeal mentioned in the books. See Sir F. M. p. 461 &c. Asiatic Res. vol. 1.

90. The following persons are held incapable of giving evidence. One under sixteen years of age; one who has become a devotee &c.; one whose word is not believed by any one; one who from extreme old age, as eighty years, has become imbecile in mind; or who has lost his memory; one who gives evidence for money; one who is a friend of the party for whom he gives evidence; an unseparated brother; (Mit. Tr. 377) or a relation; or dependant of the party; one who from enmity gives his evidence; one who has lost his energies of mind by dissipation and drunkenness, insanity, or disease; &c. &c. the Hindoo law carrying to the extreme the principle of incompetency. See Sir F. M. p. 446. tent wine

91. There is not a minimum to the number of witnesses. One man of character on one side is to be preferred to many false witnesses on the other. Written documents are to be proved by examination as to the time and place of their alleged execution, and by comparison of the handwriting of witnesses. Written and oral evidence.

92. Women not dependant on their relations, but on whom their families are dependant, and those of dissolute character, may be summoned as evidence. Mit. In default of other evidence, that of an old man, woman, child &c. is admissible (Munoo 8,70.)

For a more detailed exposition of the Hindoo Law on these subjects, may be consulted Halhed and Colebrook, or the concluding chapter of Sir F. Macnaghten's work. They are merely curious as affording evidence of the similiarity of Law and Custom in Civil Judicial Procedure, and the simplicity with which such investigations have immemorially been conducted in this country.

On the subject of contracts, prescription, and evidence, the incidents of which are settled by custom on principles of natural equity, and on which little variation exists in the law of different countries, it has been in general thought sufficient to transcribe the quotations from the Mitakshura examined by the Poona College, without other reference.

II.—CASTES.

II.---CASTES.

The following enumeration has been prepared partly from the Brahminical books consulted on the subject, and partly from local enquiries. It is to be observed that those Castes only which are known to exist in or near Poona come under the latter denomination. The relative order of the whole is settled agreeably to the criteria mentioned in the Preface, to which the reader is referred for further general information.

The Brahmun Caste ranks higher than the others in general estimation. It contains however a variety of subdivisions, among the individuals of which restrictions exist as to marriage and eating in company, chiefly arising from their relative strictness in diet or other religious observances.

Rank ac-
Books.

The Punchdrewir sects of Brahmuns consist of the Drewir (with 6 varieties), Maharashtr,* Undurtylung (8 varieties), Kurnatuk (7 varieties), and Goorjur (84 varieties). The Punchgour sects of the Saruswut, Kankoobj, Gour, Ootkul and Mythil are chiefly residents in Hindoosthan. The Senwee Brahmuns, being confined to three Kurum, or religious Duties, and being less strict as to diet, are not invited to the houses of these ten subdivisions.

Individuals of these subdivisions bear the name of some one of the numerous Rishis or antient Saints of the Caste, according to their descent. Except among the Kokunust Brahmuns (containing 14 of these Gotrus or family names) there is no limit, nor are

* The varieties of the Maharashtr Brahmuns are Desust, Kokunust, or Chitpawun, Deorookhee, Madyandin, Kunaw, or Prutumakhee, Kurare, Ubheer, Mytrayunee, Senwee, Tirgool. The Desust consider themselves superior to others. The Kurare are accused of human sacrifices, but are invited by the other sects, are particular Gotrus confined to particular subdivisions. It is prohibited by law to intermarry within the same Gotr.

The Sastrus distinguish four titles of Brahmuns, according to the different periods of life ; 1, the Pupil ; 2, the Gruhust or householder ; 3, the Wanuprust ; and 4, the Sunyasee. The two last professing religious austerities are still found in the character of Heads of Muths. Bhikshook or professional beggars may be Gruhust, and may marry and have children, which the Sunyasees may not. The various ceremonies enjoined to the former in the Sastrus are more or less observed among the Brahmuns of the present day who engage in worldly occupation. Those prescribed to all Brahmuns are

1, 2. Yudn,yejun, or Hom Sacrifice. This is now usually performed at marriages and other occasions by an Ugneehotree Brahmun who has no other occupation.

3, 4. Udhyyun, reading the Veds. The few who read are merely acquainted with the meaning of the original (if at all) through a Teeka or Commentary. All Brahmuns however reckon themselves as readers of one of the four Veds, and there are priests at places of pilgrimage who by custom are attended by Brahmuns of one Ved only. This distinction however appears merely to occasion a difference of ceremonies, and does not affect their intermarriage or eating in company.

5. Dan, giving presents of food &c. to other Brahmuns, a duty constantly inculcated, especially on occasion of pilgrimage.

6. Prutigruhu, the right to receive alms from all Castes.

Ceremonies of general observance are the Pooja to the Household or other God, consisting of ablution, offering of food, and recitation

recitation of prayers before the idol,—the various ceremonies on account of deceased relations,—Marriage, and other Sunskars. Almsgiving, receiving guests, building temples, tanks, wells, &c. are duties less extensively performed, depending mainly on the means of the individual.

The son of any Brahmun may choose his profession, whether Sunyasee, Acharyu, Gruhust* or Bhikshook ; (Wydik or Loukik) and in general there is no refusal on this account either as to marriage or eating in company.

According to the Deities held in peculiar estimation by individuals, Brahmuns are classed as Vishnoobukt or Siwbukt &c. There are various minor ceremonial distinctions between them, and occasionally enmity, and in some parts of the country violent quarrels. Men of learning hold also different opinions as to the nature of the deity, and the human soul—some maintaining the doctrine of Maya or illusion—but in general agreeing in the efficacy of religious abstraction from worldly pleasure to procure after death a spiritual union with the Deity.

In this part of the country there are besides the Senwee, other varieties (Tirgool, Sopare, Sowase, Kast, Ubheer, Deorookhee, Pul-ee) with whom the pure Brahmuns of the Maharastr, Kur-natuk and other subdivisions do not eat, nor with the Goorjur and Hindoosthanees. Gour Brahmuns do not invite the inhabitants of Gya to eat with them, except on the day of Sraddh during their pilgrimage to that place.

According to the Sastrus the Wanuprust, and still more strictly, Sunyasee, devotes himself to religious abstraction, professing carelessness of pleasure or pain, living on alms of food, wandering from place to place, bathing often &c. The practice engage in every occupation except those of very low Castes, as selling spirits &c.

tice of such devotion being in high esteem among Brahmuns as well as other Castes, there are often to be found wandering mendicants who travel to different places of pilgrimage in the real or pretended hope of obtaining after death freedom from future transmigration and union with the divine spirit. They are attended by Sishy or disciples, the most eminent of whom, either by his Gooroo's bequest, or election, succeed to his rank and honors after death.

Brahmun devotees are distinguished by different names; according to the Veds they profess to read, there are, 1, Kooteechuk; 2, Hans; 3, Bhowduk; 4, Purumhans. According to their affected mode of life they are termed Urunyupad (inhabiting the Jungle), Purwutupad (do. Hill), Asyumpad (do. Muth), Teerth, pad (do. place of pilgrimage), Bharuteepad &c.

Of Sunyasees the holders of Muths are the most important, as the head Sunyasee, Yutee or Swamee exercises jurisdiction over all Brahmuns of particular descriptions throughout large tracts of India, levying, either during personal circuits, or by deputation of disciples and agents, fines often to a large amount on the infringers of Caste discipline. These Muths are endowed with Jageer Villages, Enam lands and other revenues, besides enjoying the oblations of their votaries, part of which are expended in sacrifices to the idol worshipped and in jewels to adorn him, part in alms of food to stranger Brahmuns, and part appropriated by the Swamee and his disciples. The service of the temple is conducted by numerous priests, besides attendants of both sexes on extraordinary festivals.

There are four great Muths or Sunsthans of Brahmun Swamees called by their names; 1, Sunkurachary* whose jurisdiction

* This saint is said to have been an Awutar of Siw living 1400 years ago; the intent of god's incorporation being to preserve the world from the errors of the Jyns or Materia.

n extends particularly over the Smart, Arhattee or Siwbhukt Brahmuns. These wear the longitudinal mark on the forehead. 2, Mudwachary, supreme among the Kurhattee or Wishnoobhukt Brahmuns. These wear the perpendicular mark on the forehead. 3, Ramanoojachary, the disciples of whom call themselves brethren of Rama; 4, Wulubhachary, supreme among the Subordinate to these, but exercising jurisdiction over Brahmuns of particular sects or places, are the Dhurn,adhikarees. The Brahmun of this name is a Wuttundar; he has authority to inquire into alleged infractions of Caste discipline and custom, prescribe penance, levy fines, and ordain exclusion from Caste. When unfit for the office, a hereditary successor is sometimes put aside in favor of one more competent,—or Goomashtas may be appointed to perform the duties.

The office of Wywharee Josee is held in some places by a Wuttundar, in others by a Sirkar Goomashta. This Brahmun exercises the priestly office in his own and other Castes (where his authority has not been superseded by the Caste priests as in the Langact, Purbhoo and Sonar). His duties are thus enumerated: Huwe, worship of Deities,—Kuwe, Sraddh, and Puksh ceremonies in honor of ancestors,—Wanumuntrun, attendance on invitations to entertainments,—Sunskar (especially Marriage),—Punchung, keeping the calendar and forming astrological calculations of birth, fortune, and propitious times,—Dan,dhurn, almsgiving. The Wywharee Josee is entitled to fees of office, and may prescribe fine and penance. In Poona among the Yejoorved Brahmuns the Wywharee Josee officiates at funerals,—among the Kokunust, Desust, and others, the the payment of Huks is not limited to one person, they are generally given to the Koolgooroo.

In Poona the Wuttun of Dhurmadhikaree is farmed out by the Wywharee Josee, he being professor of both Wuttuns, which are alienable on general rules.

A Bhut exercises duties similar to those of a Wywharee Josee. The term, though strictly applicable to readers of the Veds, is also applied to Bhikshook or mendicant Brahmuns, Pooranees or reciters of Poorans, and is often prefixed to the names of individual Wydyus (physicians,) Punchungees (professional astrologers), Poojarees in different temples, Gosaens and others. If a hereditary Wuttundar, he may receive huks in certain villages, or in parts of them; and from all Castes, or particular Castes or subdivisions of Castes, according to local tenure—and may appoint a Goomashta to act for himself. In some places, as on occasion of a resumed Wuttun, the late Government appointed a salaried Goomashta to perform the duties.

Dhurmoopadhyik is a title applied to receivers of huks or fees on account of Dhurm; viz., on occasions of building temples or other charitable appropriations. In a general sense the term signifies the performance of religious and moral duties according to Caste rule. Brahmuns with this title usually live at Kshetrus (or places of pilgrimage) and are Wuttundars. These are termed Teerth,oopadhyik: they also exercise in villages the duties of Wywharee Josee or Dhurmadhikaree.

Oopadhyuha, signifies a reader or domestic Tutor. A teacher of reading entertained in a family is termed Udyapuk. Brahmuns of this title are occasionally Wuttundars, they are also salaried teachers to their patrons' children, or subsist by begging. When also performing the religious ceremonies of the family, and the worship of the household deity, they are termed Koolgooroo. Oopadhyu and Poorohet Brahmuns, when Wuttundars, appoint Gomashtas who act for them, receiving specified haks or a fixed salary, and performing selected duties.—Their children by marriage succeed to the enjoyment of the Wuttun, sometimes taking the haks in turn, year by year. Some are entitled to haks from particular families, others from particular villages (Gram-oopadhyu) others from all Castes &c. Some hold Wurshasuns or Nemooks from Government.

Kshetr-oopadhyu, and Teerth-oopadhyu, are temporary and local spiritual guides to visitors at places of pilgrimage, all ceremonies on account of the pilgrim being performed there by him. Individuals of particular Caste, Gotr or name, coming as pilgrims, attach themselves to a particular Teerth,oopadhyu; their names are kept in a book as a memorial, which may be transferred by gift or sale to another Oopadyu possessing the same claims; occasionally several relations divide the leaves of the book, taking their chance of visitors; or the total proceeds are divided among the relations. Women becoming entitled to such Wuttuns by inheritance may adopt; or appoint a Goomashta, as in other cases—and on the commission of a great crime by the holder (as murder of a Brahmun &c.) the Wuttun may be resumed by Government and a successor appointed.

The title of Ugneehotree is properly applied to a possessor of materials of the Hom sacrifice—all Brahmuns are directed to perform this ceremony, but it is usual to employ an Ugneehotree who lives on alms and receives fees and presents. He may also be a Wuttundar.

CASTES.

Acharyu is a term implying superiority applied to the Wyshnoo Priests or Bhuts; to the South of the Krishn it is used to distinguish Brahmans performing religious duties from those who follow worldly occupation—Acharee in the Sanskrit signifies a domestic Brahmun, entertained as cook.

In a Nuggur Panchaet Case (No. 25) a claim was preferred before a Punch of four Brahmans to eight Roosums payable to the holder of the office of Oopadhyik Josee of Kopergaon: 1, Juladhikar, on the pilgrim's performing worship and ablution in the river Gunga, and giving alms to Brahmans; 2, Seladhikar, Do. at his place of residence; 3, Gram,adhikar Do. in the village; 4, Koolulekun, dues on calculating Nativities of children; 5, Bruhmasunum, Do. on performing the Hom sacrifice at marriages; 6, Dund, fines from Brahmans for infractions of Caste discipline; 7, Poorohet, dues on pronouncing prayers during Pooja of the river; 8, Jyotish, on telling lucky and unlucky days for agriculture and all other occupations. Also to the Somwuttee (the right to all rupees, pearls, &c. left by women in their making circuit round the Peepul tree on occasion of the New Moon falling on a Monday.)

It appeared that the villagers had originally determined that every pilgrim should pay his own Josee, disputes to be settled by ordeal of the river. The plaintiff's ancestor subsequently passed ordeal before Sunkurachary, by laying hands on that holy man's wooden shoes—whereupon defendant's ancestor, who had been supported by a relation (Dewan of the Powar family) and had put his opponent out of Caste, lost his cause.

This decision of Sunkurachary is in the form of a written Mandate, and runs thus. "To my dear disciples in Kopurgaon. After obeisance to Narayun—Radha Ram Bhut Josee, having through ignorance of the Sastrus, omitted to perform the ceremonies of Sraddh and Sootuk on the absconding of his brother's wife (whether she have lost Caste or no) and having

having thereby fallen into disrepute had supplicated Choudree Widwans to allow him to perform penance and obtain purification,—who through avarice proposed a written grant to himself to Roosums on the Gunga Pooja, thereby acknowledging the superior title of Radha Ram to those roosums. The said Radha Ram having in consequence besought purification at this Muth, I have decided that no penance is necessary for the alleged fault. But as he has on account of the disrepute into which he fell omitted his prescribed purifications for three months, let him perform the Kritsur Prayuschat, and feed Brahmuns.

To the above effect the disciple Barlsastree was sent with a letter to Kopurgaon, Nasik and Trimbuk; but the said Choudree still refused to eat with the complainant, and used improper language to Barlsastree through covetousness of the Roosums.—Wherefore, should the said Choudree come among you, you are to deprive him of his office of Josee.—Dated Margsirsh Sood 9, 1185 Fuslee.”

The following order was produced by the plaintiff, issued by the Peshwa's Government. “To the Patells of six villages, Kopurgaon &c. Madhoo Row Pundit Pradhan.—In the year () 1190 Fuslee &c.—In the case of the dispute relative to the office of Teerth Oopadhy in Kopurgaon between Gunes Bhut Tobre and Govind Bhut Josee, and Janum Bhat Widwans and Bapoo Bhut Choudree, the office was resumed by Government pending enquiry—Suntojee Naik and Ragoo Puthar Khidmutgar are now sent to enforce an order to the Moamlutdar to allow the Punka to be again enjoyed by the first named parties, and give them no reason to come with complaints in future.

In this cause the defendant's documents were declared by the Panchet “to have no life in them.”

The Rajpoots, Maratha chiefs of the Sattara or Bhonsle and Kolapoor families, also the Patunkur, Ghorpure, Gcharge, Sirke and other houses lay claim to the title of Kshutriy and wear the Jenwa.—But they are considered Soodrus by the Brahmuns.

Wys, called in the books Umbust superior to the Wys: but their religious customs the same—Duties, Archery, holding the flag, Surgery and Medicine.

All Ca-tes now follow the profession of Wydy or Physician.

Wys: rather inferior to the Kshutriy,—allowed their three Kurumus—Duties, cultivation of the land, rearing of Cows, and trading in general.

There are no pure Wys in this country. Beyond the Toongbuddra there are some Castes professing the name, who perform the Moonj &c.

Josce or Mahishy, descended from a Kshutriy father and Wys mother. Kurum the same as the Wys—Duties, to read the Jyotish and Musical Sastrus, and gain a livelihood by the 64 Kuluha (see Parentage.)

This occupation is now followed by all Castes except Brahmun.

Sooryaoopasuk (S.) Magadh—from a Brahmun father and Pooship,sekur mother—Duties, to perform Pooja to the sun &c.

A Caste of this name is said to be in Hindoostan, sellers of embroidered cloth.

The following Castes are known to exist at present.

Kast—Their genealogy is not found in the books—they assume the name of Brahmuns, but are not received into their Pungut, nor received any Dukshuna under the Peshwa's Government, nor do they perform in their houses the Ugneehotr ceremonies. Their customs are not different from Soodrus, and their touch to Brahmuns equal Spurs-dosh.

Koondugoluk—descended from a Brahmun father and mother by adulterous intercourse, estimated rather above Soodrus; in one or two books their Kurum being that of Moordawusikt, in others that of Soodrus.

Of the Goluk Caste now existing in Poona the descent is not known whether from the Brahmun or other Caste—some profess astrology—others are Karkoons, Suraffs &c. Brahmuns consider their Spurs-dosh equal to that of a Soodr.

Rundugoluk—Brahmun father and mother (being a widow)—estimated below Kundugoluk.

Sonar.—The following genealogy of this Caste was given by the Brahmuns in Poona. (S.) Parsuwu—Brahmun father and Soodru mother, estimated superior to Soodru—allowed to perform perform ablution, to wear the Dotee, and manufacture gold and articles of jewellery.

Of the Sonars now existing, the Kanure, Panchal, and Kokunust Sonars, wear the jenwa, bath and re-dress after going abroad, and wear sola or silk Dotee in religious ceremonies,—they shave the heads of their widows, who do not remarry by Pat—They trade in gold and jewellery &c. &c. and many are brokers.

It appears from a statement communicated by Mr. Wilson that the Sonars, Kayusths and Vyds of Bengal, and even some Koles of Orissa, wear the Poita (differing from the Jenwa applied with the ceremony of Moonj in some particulars) and are invested with it by Ved Muntrus.—But Brahmuns, receiving the Huks, perform the ceremony.

In Nuggur and Poona the Kanuree, Panchal, and Kokunust Sonars perform the Ved Kurum through Bhuts of their own Caste, whereby the prescriptive dues of the Wywharee Josee have fallen off.

The following statement asserting the descent of the Ruthkar Sonar Caste, and their right to the Vedokt Kurum, was communicated by Jugunath Sunkurset of Bombay. These Ruthkar Sonars deny that they are the Parsuwu of the books above mentioned.

Five different origins are attributed in the several Hindoo law-books and the Veds to the Ruthkar Sonars or Goldsmiths: from which the Kokunust Dywudnyec Ruthkars are descended.

The Siwagum states that from the five mouths of Siw were produced five Oop Brahmuns called Panchal viz. Munoo, Muya, Twasta, Shelpree, and Dywudnyu.

CASTES.

According to the Rudriumul and Skundpooran Brumaha was the father of Petamaha Munoo who was the father of Prujaputee. The latter had eight sons known by the designation of Wusoo. One of these named Prubhas had a son with five mouths and ten hands called Wishwakurma—to whom were born five sons having the same names, occupations, and rights as those above mentioned viz. Munoo, Muya, Twasta, Shelpee and Dywudnyu.

Agreeably to the order of Wishwakurma, Brumaha assumed the form of Virat, and from his mouth was produced Swayembhoo Munoo, from whom six Brahmuns and four Oop Brahmuns had their origin. The eldest of the latter, Silpayen, had five sons, the first Munoo, the second Muya, the third Twasta, the fourth Shelpee, and fifth Dywudnyu. These five learned the five Veds from the five who were produced from Siw's mouth, and their names, profession, rights and qualities were the same as those of their teachers.

From the Deity Fire were produced a man and woman, who were termed Dywudny Goldsmiths.

The above four had a pure origin, and were authorized to perform the Vedokt Kurums, and also the six rites called Shudkurn viz. Yejun, Yajun Dhuyen, Adhayan Dan, and Prutigruhu.

The Mahishi or Sunker Rutikars are of Unoolom origin, and although this origin be not equally pure with the four above stated, still they are entitled to the performance of the Vedokt Kurmu. Their title to these rights is proved in many Hindoo law-books—and the Rushi Brahmuns always required their assistance in the solemnization of Yudnyus or sacrifices.

Rujpo —Kshutriy and Soodru—Duties, to fight bravely in battle, inspire dread, acquire glory,—and perform the Kurmu of Soodrus. At the order of the Raja, to punish criminals and receive maintenance from him.

Many Hindoosthanees are of this Caste, and residents in the Nizam's districts, in Poona, and Indapoor,—chiefly soldiers by profession.—They refuse to eat with every Caste but their own. Some few are traders.

The Caste of Yejoorvedee Wajusnee Brahmuns, resident in Bombay, referred to in page 87 as the Pulsee Brahmuns, claim the prescriptive possession of the Ushtadhikaree Wuttun there. In the above page, line 22, after the word "eat," read "publicly."

Kayust or Purbhoo—Wydychu and Mahishy—to the northward they are termed Kayust, in the Dekhun Purbhoc—allowed the performance of Sunskars, to wear the Sendee, the Jenwa and red coloured clothes, and to maintain themselves by writing or in the military profession. Three kinds are specified, the Kayust or Purbhoo, Upurkayust, and Purbha, the Kurum of all being the same.

Upurkayust—Kayust Purbhoo and widow of the same.

Purbha (Dalbhi)—incestuous intercourse of Kshutriy, twin brother and sister—estimated below Soodrus.

These distinctions are not now known—there are in Poona the Chundrusenee Kayusth Purbhoos, who claim descent from a posthumous son of Chundrusenee Raja, and thence the right of performing the Kshutriy Kurum of Yejun, Udyyun and Dan—Many practise in consequence among themselves the Vedokt Kurum (ceremonies enjoined by the Veds) as Brahmuns—others eat fish—there are two other sects of the Caste, not in Poona, the Putanee* Purbhoo and the Downee Purbhoo—the latter are found in Goa.

The

* These are the Purbhoos resident in Bombay, Surat and Cheool; so called from their antient residence in Puttun, where they are said to have received a Srap from Bhroogoo Rishi. They practise the three Kurumu, or Kshutriy Kurum, through claim of descent from the Solar Kings.

CASTES.

The Brahmuns do not allow of the alleged descent of the Chundruseenees from the Kshutriy Raja of that name, and consider the Caste below Soodrus—Koonbees have been known not to eat with them.

There are in the city of Poona numerous traders known by the names of Marwarree and Goojrathee Wanee, whose religious tenets vary, some being of the Jyn Dhurm, according to the rules of the Parusnat Muths, others are worshippers of Vishnoo—These are termed Wysnoo Marwarree, Wysnoo Goojrathee, or Kurtewale. The latter worship Krishn according to the rules of Walubhachary—do not remarry widows by Pat, and in other respects their customs are similar to Brahmuns, and of purity superior to the Soodru Castes.

The Jyn and Srawuk Wanees have lately built two Temples in Poona, which they were not allowed to do under the late Government.—Besides Marwarree and Goojrathees, there are some Mahrattas and Kanurese of the Jyn persuasion.

The Jyns, as such, do not rank so high in the list of Castes as the Marwarrees and Goojrathees.

The Jyns in Poona possess 40 or 50 houses; they stated that their number is small in the Mahratta country compared with that existing in Hindoosthan, Goojrat, or even the Karnatak.—Besides Marwarrees, other Castes, as Ugurwale, Bugurwale Oswal &c. consider the Jyns in a light similar to that in which other Hindoos view Brahmuns. The Jyns themselves said they have eighty-four varieties, of which five only are known in Poona, and they refuse to intermarry or eat together—their names are the Setwal Jyn, Punchun, Dhawul, Chutoor, and Lar Jyn.—No other Caste is included in theirs, but any Hindoo professing the Jyn Dhurm may become a member of their Caste.

The Jyns of the present day have however lost much of their authority from omitting their prescribed Chum, and betaking themselves themselves to worldly occupation: still however obedience is paid to their Gooroo, resident at Latoor in the Nizam's Country, (Balaghat) named Visalkirtee Swamee, and his mandates. He makes circuits like Brahmuns and Lingaet Swamees, levying contributions from his Caste, coming to Poona every five or ten years in person, or otherwise sending a Pundit, Wydik or Oopadya as a legate to collect the money and punish infractions of Caste-discipline. These fees vary from two or four Rupees from every Jyn, &c. according to the ability of the donor.

The titles of rank in Caste among the Jyns, also of the Sunskars, are the same as among Brahmuns; they have Gotrus also. They stated that Brahmuns here receive the Huks on Sunskars which elsewhere they pay to their own Priests. The Jyns in Poona generally consult Brahmuns in all disputed questions of law, but they stated that books exist of their own, different from those of the Brahmuns on the Dhurmsastr. Such are the Poonyawachun, Ubbishick and others, sometimes consulted on occasions of Penance enjoined by the Jyn Oopadya.

The Jyns affect to be descended from the sun, and to worship that luminary. They worship also a deity named Paru-nat, whose names are 24 in number, and whose image is without clothes or ornaments—Hence their Dhurm is styled Digumburee viz. clothed with the Ushtdik, or points of the compass i. e. naked.—They also worship a boy-god, said to have reigned during his youth, whence his image is decorated with ornaments. His name they call Situmburee.—All these, they stated, are different names for the same deity—Jutees, or devotees, dress in white, carry a black stick (Krishndund), use earthen pots, do not shave the head, reply Dhurmlabh as a blessing, keep the mouth covered with a cloth to prevent incurring the sin of swallowing minute insects (Aliwsa) and consider a Mhar's touch pollution.

Jyns are enjoined to fast on the 2d, 5th, 8th, 11th and 14th days of every fortnight. Except children and invalids, they neither eat nor drink when the sun is below the horizon.—They have a great abhorrence of killing animals; hence they strain water several times through a cloth before drinking it.—This they carry to so absurd a length as to pay poor wretches money to lie in a room exposed to the bites of vermin; they also establish a kind of hospital, by general Puttee or subscription among themselves, for blind and maimed men and animals outside a village. Individuals among them are bound not to eat or drink particular things, nor to go in the direction of a particular point of the compass (disa); an obligation which it is said no bribe could tempt them to swerve from.*

The Jyns in the Southern Mahratta Country stated that they came originally from near Delhi—they only knew they were of antient origin, and that seven or eight of the 84 varieties of their Caste were to be found in the Kurnatuk.

They stated that their Supreme Muth is now at Delhi; three subordinate to it being at Mulkher, Bijnuggur, and Hombus. They described the stages of probation necessary to become a Sunyasee viz. 1, Unoovrut, like the Brahmacharee, professing celibacy; 2, Mahavrut, who never feeds himself; 3, Neervandeeksh, who, if Digumburee, wears no clothes, and begs for subsistence.—Swamees called Situmburee wear white clothes; both descriptions are prohibited from marriage, and succession in Muths is continued by disciples, as in Brahmun Sunyasee Muths, among Lingaet Junguns, Gosaees and Byragees.

They stated that the name of their God is Ahuruntu or Nirakar—and that they profess a Dhurm dusalekshun (10 varieties of of duty) among which is the Suptamon, or prohibition from speaking during worship, bathing, eating, and other occupations.

* These answers were obtained from the Jyns in Poona, and bear marks of ignorance of the tenets of their religion.—It appears from an account of the Jyns published in the 9th vol. of the Asiatic Researches, that they have the distinction of four Castes, and of Gurbust and Sunyasee, like the Brahminical Hindoos. Like the Buddhists, they reject the Veds and Poorans reverencing a number (24) of Deified Saints, and confess the belief of the eternity of the world. The Jyns also bury their dead.

10 Ugurwale—This title is assumed by Hindoosthanees Traders of the Wymoo persuasion.—Their customs are equally pure with those of the Marwarrees and Goojrathees.

19 Johuree—These are also Hindoosthanees, trading in Jewellery.—There are about fifty houses of this Caste in Poona.

12 Komtee—This Caste resemble the Soodrus in their Customs: they trade, make necklaces of toolsee, and manufacture snuff.

Bruhmukshutriy—This Caste are chiefly residents in the Nizam's country and Kurnatuk. They take water at a Soodru's hands—some of them form Pat, others not; some eat flesh, others not.—They wear daily Clothes damped and dried (Sola.) They practice trade in cotton cloth, as Suraffs &c.

Note—The Goojrathee and Marwarree Wanees, Ugurwale, Johuree, Komtee and Bruhmukshutriy, have not been found in the books.

13 Kasar (S.) Kansikar—workers in the metal-kans, (compound ed of Just (zinc), Tamba (Copper), Kuthil (Tin), and other metals). Descended from Senapee Kshutriy, of the Kartiwarree family and a Kshutriy wife—Estimated higher than Soodrus in

They worship the Goddess Kalee—are manufacturers of Copper, Brass and other metal utensils.

Their customs are of superior purity to the Soodrus: they wear Sola &c. but it is not quite certain whether the Kokunee Kasars of Poona are the genuine descendants of the Kasikars of the books.

Lingaet—Descended from a Wraty Wys (a Wys who had lost Caste from not wearing the Jenwa) and a Wys woman by adulterous intercourse—Their sons were,

Soodunbachary,

Bharoosh,

Wyjimma,

Mytre,

Satwut.

Considered rather superior to Soodrus—Directed to sell Chourees, salt, assafoetida, Kumlees &c., to wear the Ling bound round the neck—One sect only, the Jungum, allowed to perform Pooja—the rest directed to perform Pooja to their Ling, and to officiate as spies and intelligencers in an enemy's country.

There are at present five subdivisions of this Caste, Jungum, Punchum Wance, Bungur-Wance, Tilelee Wance, and Gool-wee Wance.

Of these the Jungums are the Priests and devotees of the order.—Like Sunyasees, they profess religious abstraction, worship the God Siw accompanied by the Buswu or bull Nunda, and fasten a ling round their necks, abandon the Sindee fashion of their hair, wear reddish-colored clothes (Blugwee) and usually reside in Muths, abstaining from marriage, and keeping up the succession of superiors by electing a disciple to supply his place after death.—The successor is in some places appointed by the Swamee previously to his death, in others the appointment of the disciples and Caste is subject to the confirmation of the neighbouring Zumeendars and of the Sirkar. Such superior Jungums have authority to levy fines on irregularly binding the ling, adultery, or other infractions of Caste discipline.—They also receive fees on second marriages of women—Superior Jungums (Virukt,swamees) in the Kurnatuk country often possess great property, and make pilgrimages or circuits round the country, receiving alms and exacting fines; their disciples also are employed in collecting huks and writing answers to references in Caste disputes.—A punchayet of Jungum Swamees (of several Muths) is not unusual on such occasions.

There are in the Kurnatuk some Muths of married Jungums.—In these the wives and families may reside in the Muth—a son may during his father's life be appointed Puttadya with his consent: if not his son, the consent of the disciples, and sometimes of the Sethees, Zumeendars and Sirkar is necessary to appoint to, or in all cases to deprive of office. In general however they remain unmarried, having liberty to visit a selected Kulawantin (dancing girl) named Pyateebuswee—The Aya of a Muth has permission to eat in her house.

The Lingaets in Poona being comparatively few in number, follow in many respects the customs of other Hindoo Castes. Many of them however do not sit apart on occasion of a birth a death occurring, or oblige their women to do so pending their monthly purification.

Exclusive of Jungums, the four varieties of the Lingaet Caste are chiefly traders and shopkeepers.

It is not uncommon south of the Krishna for Lingaets and others of low Caste to devote their sons to serve in the Ayas' Muth, on the success of a vow for the birth of a son, recovery from disease &c. Occasionally a clever boy is adopted by a Churuntya, and succeeds to his office on his death.—Others are married by the Muths, who retain some authority over their families. D. Individuals of other Castes are also sometimes purified, and adopted as servants or disciples. D.

All property of individuals is the property of the Muth of which the Aya is manager. D. K.

Koonbee—descended from the pure Soodrus of the books—Directed to serve the three superior Castes, and employ themselves in husbandry—allowed to bathe, to wear the dotee, and and gold rings—to pronounce the name of Bhugwan in ablution &c. (Nam, muntru), The other two Muntrus are Ved and Pooran, both appropriated by Brahmuns.

The following Koonbees are distinguished here,

Marathe Koonbee,

Koonbee Wanee,

Kanaree Kamatee,

Tylung Kamatee,

Hindoosthanee, { Lodhee Purdesee, { Chuppurbund.

Koonbees are chiefly employed in agriculture; some trade (Koonbee Wanee); others serve as sepoy; others as servants to other Castes.

Such of them as are High Maratha (as the families of the Sattara Raja, and other houses of pure Maratha descent) do not allow their widows to form Pat—Their children by slave-girls are termed Kum-usul and Sinda.

The Kamatees of Poona are rice cleaners and grinders of corn, and cutters of sticks; they also sell snuff, and some serve as tent or gun-lascars.

Lodhee Purdesees keep carriage bullocks, selling Sya leaves and grass for Chuppurs &c.—The name of the Chuppurbund bespeaks their occupation.

CASTES EQUAL IN ESTIMATION TO KOONBEES.

Kasar bongar—Brahmun and Ambust—Estimated in the book equal to Soodrus—To worship the goddess Kalee, and manufacture utensils of the metal-kans.

This Caste at present sell bangrees, and manufacture pots and utensils of various metals.

Tambut—Parsuwu and Kshutriy—Equal to Soodrus—to make and sell copper utensils.

The Caste still exercise this occupation.

Acharee

Acharee—Soot and Wydehu—Equal to Soodrus—To cook food for the four Castes.

At present each Caste keeps men of its own Caste to cook their food ; Brahmuns' cooks are called Acharee ; Soodrus, Randhuna ; and Moo-sulmans &c. Yewun Baburchee.

Chutrdhur—Brahmun and Wydehu—To hold the umbrella of the Raja, and fetch water for the four Castes.

This Caste is not now known here—Koonbees and other Castes carry umbrellas and aftarbeers ; and generally each Caste has its own water-carriers.

Burbhoonja and Hulwaec—Wydehuk and Soodru—make and sell sweetmeats and confectionary.

These Castes are to be found chiefly in the country between the Jumna and Ganges, and at Ayoodya (Oude.) The occupation of the first is preparing rice, gram &c. for confectionary (pohe or chewre).—Hulwaecs prepare various articles of food and confectionary with sugar, grain, cocoanuts, milk, spices, &c.

Bhat Rujpoot or Kuvce, }
Bhat Koonbec. } Wys and Kshutriy—To recite the praises of Brahmuns and Rajas—and compose songs—To speak various languages—and contrive the amusement of their patrons.

The former name still exists in Hindoosthan, where the Caste attend the presence of Chieftains, and at marriages and festivals, to tell stories.

Bhat Koonbees are found in the Mahratta Country, as attendants of Brahmuns and Mahratta Sirdars, Desmookhs and Despandes—Some also are cultivators.

Dharee or Jangur—(S.) Wytalik Charun—occupation to sing early in the morning and awaken the raja, the god, and the Brahmuns.

The Caste is very numerous in Hindoosthan, where they sing in processions of chiefs, and act as Bards.

Byragee—These are described in the books as of five kinds:

Byragees of the four first kinds are directed to sing various kinds of Songs (Purbund, Doha, Uslok &c.) in honor of Wishnoo and Siw—The fifth to perform the gods' pooja and apply gopee-chundun &c. to their foreheads.

At present Byragees under one general appellation perform the Saligram pooja and sing Songs in honor of Wishnoo;—some apply teeluk, moodia, tripood to their foreheads.

They do not exist as a Caste by descent. Ramanund and Nimbadi are mentioned as the founders of Byragees, as they now exist, receiving disciples from any of the four principal Castes.—They do not marry, disciples succeeding to their teacher's station and property, and performing Sraddh and Sootuk for him as for a father. A successor is chosen by the disciples and Byragees of neighbouring Muths by putting on him the necklace of his predecessor,—either on the latter dying, or departing on a distant Pilgrimage.

Byragees on being excluded from the privileges of their sect marry* and are called Bhat Byragees—Some of these trade, others sing Songs,—their wives exchange earthen pots for old embroidery and gold or silver fringes.

Occasionally Kanojee Brahmuns, Koonbees, and other Castes, either from choice, loss of Caste, or difficulty of procuring subsistence, take the profession of Byragee—They abandon their families

* It appears however there are some female Byragees. See Appendix B. on families and subsist by begging, especially near sacred rivers or trade, making profitable pilgrimages round the country.

Brahmuns becoming Byragee do not wear the Sindee nor jenwa—Byragees put the Gopeechundun mark on their foreheads, or wear a necklace of Toolsee-wood—they profess the worship of Vishnoo, give as a blessing the word Jysreeram, and consider the touch of a Mhar pollution.

The Ryuts of a village sometimes built a Muth and endowed it, with the approbation of the late Government. No instance is known of the sale of a Headship of a Muth.

For an account of the Gosaens, see the Appendix.

Rajgooroo—they are directed to teach the Rajas' sons the use of weapons.

This Caste is very little known—the title is found as an adnam (affix name) among some Koonbees, but not connected with the profession—Such teachers to chieftains may receive this name, or the general one of Wustad.

Gooruwu—Siw-oopasuk Brahmun and Soodr Kulawantin.

To be estimated below Soodrus—Directed to perform the Pooja of Siw, to apply bhusm (ashes of cowdung) and Roodrakshurdhan to their bodies,—and to receive offerings of food, grain &c. brought to the god Siw by his worshippers.

On this last account the Caste is to be held lower than Soodrus.

At present this Caste act as Poojarees, receiving the offerings brought to Temples of Siw, Marotee or Hunooman as food for the god—such offerings are termed Nywedy—The Poojaree or Urchuk is not every where a Wuttundar or Goomashta. The ceremony of Ubhishek (ablution) four times a month is usually performed by an Oopadya Brahmun, receiving Wurshasuns &c. for the duty—others beat drums &c. in the Ootsaa when Brahmuns are invited and fed, and tales in honor of the god recited—others sell prepared leaves for Brahmuns' dinners.

The Poojarees of Bhyroba are generally Koonbees or Gosaeens—Those of Venkoba, Vitoba (Vishnoo) and Gunputtee, usually Brahmuns only.

Brahmunjaee—Brahmun and Soodru—(S.) Daseepootr. 34

The Dhor Caste manufacture pukals, well-buckets (mot) and hand-buckets (dol), and dye leather—Kutaces are cobblers,—they also work on tents and eat animals who died naturally—Dup,lgars make oil bottles &c. and eat flesh of animals who have died naturally—These are of the lowest Caste.

- 145 Hulalkhor (S.) Chandai—Occupation, to officiate in the capacity of nightmen—They also take the clothes of dead persons.

Hindoos and Moosulmans both follow this occupation. Mhars are occasionally called Chandai in Hindoosthan.

Mhar (S.) Swupak—Occupation, to take outside the village and eat the flesh of dead animals.

Another variety (S.) Untyu-wusydong—Occupation, to receive dues from the family of a person dead, and to sell the wood of funeral piles.

Another (S.) Plubuwusteer-Sanee—Occupation, to carry outside the village and eat the flesh of dead horses and asses.

Another (S.) Kouwyadee—Occupation, to watch the ashes of funeral piles, and keep the boundaries of villages: also to act as village watchmen.

CASTES.

Another (S.) Hustuk—Occupation, to catch birds with bird-lime, and sell them.

Another (S.) Kayuk—Occupation, to clear away the sewers of a village. 128

Another—(S.) Heshuk—Occupation, to take away the clothes and wood from funeral piles. 129

In the houses of Somusee Mhars the goddess Bhadulee is worshipped at present.—The Tilwun, Wun, and Aduwun Mhars are found in Hindoosthan near Benares, descendants of the Dong. —

Mhars or Dhors exercise all the above occupations, and are distinguished by various names in different places.—In the smaller villages one Caste of Mhars generally is found. Exclusive of the Dong and Heshuk Mhars, all the others above mentioned are met with.—They also bury low-Caste men who have no friends to perform the office, act as Begarees, receive huks at marriages, perform village service under the Patell's orders, such as assembling the ryuts, carrying letters, collecting rents, and receiving Bulloota.—They also hold enam land (Hudola, Hurkee), officiating as guides and preservers of the village boundaries, besides following all the above occupations mentioned in the books.

Neech Mhar—(S.) Chesh—Occupation to act as executioner by the Raja's order, cutting off the limbs of criminals, afterwards carrying about from house to house the severed limbs by way of example, and receiving huks on the occasion.

This variety is not at present distinguished—The occupation is followed by Mang

Mang—(S.) Svupuch—Occupation, to make ropes &c. of skins. 131

There are at present four or five varieties of Mang, Boonde Oochle, Gaon, Dulawar and Bokuiwar—They act as village servants and are entitled to Huks and Bulloota—of the two first varieties some are village watchmen, and others thieves—They are found in the Balaghat country—The two last varieties are of lower estimation than the rest.

Neech-Mang, (S.) Matung—Occupation, to conjure evil spirits from the bodies of possessed persons.

Garoore Mang, in the Mahratta country—Potraj and Dankun, in the Tylung and Konkun—The women of the Dankun Mangs sing or beg—they place the Kookoon mark on their foreheads.

Adum-Khor—(S.) Teka and Much—Occupation, eating human flesh, and trafficking in slaves.

This Caste is not known to exist here at present—They are said to be found in the countries of Pegoo, Bokhara and Sumerkund.

1.—ON EXISTING LAW OF USAGE, AND THE ESTABLISHMENT OF NEW RULES IN THE DIFFERENT CASTES.

1.—Answers from the Castes resident in Poona.

Fifty-six Castes stated that they have no written documents or books to which they refer as authority in points of disputed custom. Antient usage, as determined by the Caste on creditable evidence,* is the general guide. In cases of extraordinary difficulty Brahmuns are called in, who decide according to the ten law of the Dhurmsastru.

In disputes among Brahmuns, the assembled Caste profess to be guided by the decision of Sastrees. The Konkune and Kanure Sonars, and the Kayusth Prubhoos, have latterly made the same assumption.

The Lingaet* Castes obey the others of their Gooroo, as laid down by an order of Balsastree Nyayudhish in the time of the late Peshwa, and since followed by our Government.

The Castes do not recognize the establishment of new customs.

There are no written rules. The Jumayut is guided by the usage of each Caste. Before any new rule can be established, the elders of the Caste, and learned Brahmuns, must be consulted.

3.—Answers from Sattara.

There are no written rules but the Sastru—Cases unprovided for are determined by an assembly of the Caste, whose decision becomes in future a precedent equal to law. Custom has sanctioned many things in opposition to the Sastru.

Of these, many were contemporary with the first establishment of the numerous Castes and sects now existing, which probably originated in prohibited intermarriages, or in the refusal of an obstinate minority to submit to Penance for infractions of custom. The introduction of new customs is much facilitated under our Government, by the mixture of foreigners with the Natives, by the diminished authority of the Brahmuns over other Castes, and by the non-interference of the magistrate in the punishment or Penance assigned for infractions of Caste custom.

Many

from Wamun Sas-

Many customs not warranted by the written law refer to various articles of forbidden diet ; others to sexual intercourse ; others to religious ceremonies ; others to prohibited degrees of relationship in marriage ; others to morality, as lying without due cause, concealing from parents property acquired, disobedience to parents &c.

The chief distinctions observable between the law and existing custom on points of civil jurisdiction will be gathered from the following abstract.

II.—ON THE CONSTITUTION OF ASSEMBLIES OF CASTE FOR THE DECISION OF DISPUTED POINTS OF CUSTOM, PUNISHMENT OF OFFENDERS, EXCLUSION AND READMISSION.

1. Answers from the Castes of Poona.

All persons capable of managing their own affairs, being entitled to Caste privileges and inhabitants of the place, or (in points of importance) of adjacent places, meet to decide on disputed points of customs.

Shawee, Booroor, Kulee, Cham-

The Swamee, in the Lingaet Castes, is accustomed, in cases of doubt, to associate with himself four residents in the neighbourhood, as a Punchayet.

It is not the custom to appoint deputies or Wukeels ; occasionally a man sends his son or a Poorohet* to the assembly to speak for him—And the Caste, if necessary, appoint a Wukeel to communicate with the Sirkar, or an absentee of great experience in matters of custom.†

Ten Castes‡ stated that a large majority is sufficient to decide a question—two, that a seceding (tul) minority is not regarded§—several, that all difference of opinion is terminated by successive meetings of the whole Caste.¶

Under the Government of the Peshwas the judicial office was exercised by a Nyayudhish, and included Braminical supremacy in disputes of Caste custom.—This office was held by Ramsastree, the justice of whose decisions is much respected even at the present day, and at a later period by Barlsastree, Sudasco Mankeswur, Gokle, and others. The Nyayudhish used to assemble such other Brahmuns who were noted for their knowledge or integrity, and with their concurrence pass decisions; after which any recusants were punishable by that officer with fine and the usual penance.

2. Ragwacharee, Principal of the College.

At present it is usual in Poona for the Brahmuns to assemble on the requisition of any Brahmun of repute for his superior knowledge as a Sastree (frequently of late Neelkunt Sastree) at the Toolseebagh, where they pass orders of exclusion from Caste privileges, enjoin penance, fine &c. In a dispute among one sect of Brahmuns, all Brahmuns are admissible, but to prevent confusion, several of the particular sect usually decide on points affecting their own customs, and larger assemblies pass decrees affecting the whole Caste.

It is not considered necessary that the decision should be exactly according to the letter of the Sastru; though a conformity of the written law with the custom of the Caste is thought preferable. Under the Nyayudhish unanimity was of no practical consequence: at present those who assemble invite the absentees whose countenance and support they consider advisable, and on their declining to attend come to a decision without them. A wukeel is occasionally sent, but a man of eminent authority is expected to attend himself, or send a written opinion. Should there (as often happens) be a difference of opinion, the majority endeavour, by prescribing penance to the recusants, to render their decision effective; but if the minority can by persuasion or bribery assemble another meeting, both parties will proclaim the justice of their own cause, and the dispute remains, in effect, undecided. B. S.

2. From Khandesh.

The Castes deliberate in a body, and all persons who have arrived at years of discretion are entitled to vote. Should a deputation be assembled, the deputies are chosen from the elders and men of experience in each Caste. No particular majority is necessary.

Absentees are allowed to appoint a person to vote for them.

3. From Sattara.

Women, children, and idiots, are excluded. The most respectable persons are appointed as a deputation of the Caste. A majority carries a question—Absentees are not considered, unless they are parties concerned.

3. The Choudree succeeds as a Wuttundar to his hereditary office ; he enjoys Man-Pan and precedence superior to a Wuttundar.

4. In our Caste the Patell and Chougola receive superior Man-Pan to the Wuttundars. [Note. In large towns the Caste has a Patell of its own ; in small villages this answer applies to the village Patell and other village Officers].

5. In our Caste the Sette enjoys Man-Pan superior to the Wuttundars—his office is hereditary. [Note. These Castes have Settees of their own. The Settees of a village, or of different Peths in a large town, is a Wuttundar established at the period of its first population, enjoying Huks and privileges given or recognized by the Sinkar—Such Settee possesses no authority over particular Castes, but is the agent of the traders with the Government Revenue Officers, and as such possesses much influence.]

The Mehitra of the Mahratte Telce, besides receiving Huks, is entitled to exemption from the Ghurputtee (house-tax) butchupae (stamp tax on weights and measures) and bigar (serving as a begarree) and receives a turban from the Sirkar on the Dussera.

The Mehitra of the Mhar Caste is not entitled to a larger share of the Enam land and Bullottee Huks possessed by others of his Caste. He receives Man-Pan.

The Mehitra of the Nhawee Kusbekur does not enjoy land in Poona, though he does in some other places. His Huks from Nhawees have been resumed by the Sirkar. He takes Man-Pan at Marriages &c.

2. The Choudree enjoys no Enam or other land but is entitled to Huks. In the Goulee Lingaet and Ahir Castes he is exempted from paying Mhusee (Buffalo-tax) and but-chupaec, and he enjoys a Huk of two Rupees on a Pat or widow's marriage, and Pan.

PARTICULARS OF THE HUKS AND PRIVILEGES ENJOYED BY HEAD MEN OF SOME CASTES IN POONA.

Koshtee.—The Mehitra's wife is invited to the entertainments on Marriages. He receives a piece of Cocoanut, on occasion of a wife being sent home to her husband's house. His wife is invited at entertainments called Gondhul (when tales of the gods are recited, with music &c.) He receives a turban on occasions of adopting a son, and of a Gotae (entertainment given to the Caste on readmitting an offender.) On every occasion he receives a double allowance of Pan; the sandal (gund) is first put on his forehead, his signature is first written in all Documents in which the Caste are concerned; He enjoys exemption from the Government tax on houses and some other items; His signature is affixed to Deeds of Sale.

Gooru.—The Mehitra and his wife are invited to Marriage entertainments, entertainments on adoption, on Widow's Marriage (Pat) &c. and receive Pan previously to the other Guests. On a Gotae, he receives a Sela and turban.

Soolar.—On Marriages &c. the Mehitra receives Pan. On adoptions and Gotae a turban &c. according to the parties' ability.

Nhawe Kusbekur.—The Mehitra is exempted from Mohturifa and house tax. On the 4th day of Marriages, when turmeric is applied to the persons of the boy and girl who are married, the Mehitra's wife is invited and receives turmeric, the mark on the forehead called Koonkoo, and Pan. On the day of Marriage, the Mehitra receives water previously to eating, Sandal on the forehead, and his wife Koonkoo and Pan. The bride and bridegroom being seated on the raised floor under a canopy, the Mehitra performs the lamp evolutions before them, as at Pooja, and throws a pice over them. On the application of the turmeric, the Mehitra receives some old clothes. At Gondhul entertainments the Mehitra gives money to the Gondhulees (performers) previously to the rest of the guests giving their present. At a Gotae, he receives Sandal (choo) water in the hand, Pan, and a turban &c. according to the ability of the parties. At Pat, Sandal, choo, Pan, and a turban or a few pice. At Funerals, the Mehitra on the 13th day ties on the turban of the deceased's eldest son. At adoptions, he receives a Sela, turban &c.

There may be one Mehitra over the Caste in one village; or a Sur-Mehitra over the Caste resident in five or ten villages—The Sur-Mehitra receives from the village Nhawe one Rupee and two pylees of grain—In the Poona district there are 260 villages over which this right (whether resumed or still enforced is not clear) is claimed by the Sur-Mehitra of Pona.

The Sur-Mehitra receives the orders of the Sirkar, and transmits them to the other Nhawees—On the sale of a Mehitra Wuttun, or on the new appointment of a Mehitra by the Caste, the last possessor dying heirless, the Sur-Mehitra attends and receives a Sela and Turban from the new Wuttundar. In all assemblies of the Caste, the Mehitra is first invited.

• The

The Mehitra attends the circumcision (Soonta) of Moossulmans, performing the ceremony and receiving a Sela and Turban—He shaves Brahmuns on their investiture with the thread (Moonj) and receives a similar present—On the Festival of the Nag Punchmee in the month Srawun, the Mehitra performs Pooja at the Warool or Cobra-capel's hole. (This Man is at present discontinued, pending a dispute between the relations, sharers in the Mehitra Wuttun.)

Malce.—The Mehitra puts rice (sej or seth) on the forehead of the bride and bridegroom, receiving previously to other guests sandal (Gund or tila) and Pan &c.

ig Sarlee.—The Mehitra merely receives first in Entertainments the sandal and Pan.

Konkune Goulee.—At Marriages the Mehitra has his feet washed, and receives with his wife rice, dal, wheat, flour, ghee, goor, sooparee, pan, a cocoanut, the turmeric and red mark on the forehead, lamp soot (kajil, a substitute for antimony for the eyes), chiksa, a composition put in women's hair at the Nahun (first appearance of puberty), consisting of almonds &c. Goolal, red colour thrown on the clothes at the Hoolce, a Phunee, or comb, papuru, koolwundee, and other dishes.

Simpee.—At all Caste assemblies the Mehitra is invited to the house of the party where the festival is held, and thither invites all the guests; at Marriages he receives koolwundee, Papuru, Telchee, Polce &c. The girl's parents going to fetch the bride, carry her rookhwut (50 kinds of dishes and sweetmeats, of which the Mehitra receives a part, and his wife a slice of Cocoanut, an invitation to the festival, Pan &c.) Occasionally he receives a Turban. The Mehitra's rank however is less than the Setee of the peth or Village.

Marathe Telce.—At Magune, the Caste with the future bridegroom's parents being assembled at the bride's father's house, the guests divide Pan, and the Mehitra takes it first; his wife has priority in receiving the sandal, &c. At the Dewuk Gondul (Entertainments on occasion of family worship two days before Marriage) the Mehitra and his wife are invited and receive sandal and eatables.

More or less of the above huks and privileges are enjoyed by Mehitrans of the other Castes; among the presents received may be added Sugar-cane, Copper pots &c. The Mehitrans of the Mhar and Mang Caste besides are exempted from Ghur Puttee (House tax.)

The

The right of precedence in tying and throwing the Polee at the Hoolee festival, and [making Pooja thereon, is the frequent subject of judicial dispute or personal combat.

Ahir Goulce.—At Marriages and Pats the Choudree receives two Rupees. In all Caste assemblies he receives a double allowance of Eatables and Pan. At the Hoolee and Devalee the Choudree gives his Caste two Rupees for sweetmeats, occasionally more.

Kamatee Tylung.—The Mokuddum is entitled to $\frac{1}{4}$ th of every fine levied on offenders at a Gottee, and to precedence in receiving Pan &c.

Ghisaree.—The Chouhan &c. receive no Huks whatever, and merely conduct the business of the Caste.

Burhase.—The Choudree receives Sandal, and Pan, and double eatables. The Sukhee has no Man-Pan. The Bughut receives a Dhotee, Pan and Sandal on occasion of a Gondhul or Bundara (given by Byragees and Gosaceens.)

Hulalkhor.—The Gooroo of the Goojrathees, and the Sur Mehitra of the Dekhunees, receive fees in money &c. at marriages &c. Of the 40 Rupees fine levied in cases of adultery 20 Rupees go the Caste, 5 Rupees to the seizer of the defendant, 5 Rupees to a clever manager in the Caste, and ten Rs. to the Mehitra. The Mehitra of the two Peths (Mongulwar and Bhowanee) of Poona have also Huks and precedence, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ Rs. in cases of adultery.

Moolamgar.—At marriages the Choudree takes Rs. five in the name of the Caste, which sum is kept in deposit and expended at his pleasure.

Dakote Josee.—The Singar, Guroor &c. merely are entitled in receiving Pan to priority.

Rawul Jogee.—Suntojee receives Pan and Sandal before others at marriages. He enjoys exemption from payment of house tax and shop-tax on shops for sale of tape and strips of cloth for Cummurbunds. He receives annually from the Desmookh of Poona two sheep, and from the Koolkurnee, Mahajun and Sette of Poona a one khun Cholee annually, who also invite him to dine with them on the Festivals (Eeds)—In the Peshwa's time they used to give at the Dussera five Khun Cholees and Hulud Koonkoo.

All the other Castes who have Head men have given the particulars of their respective huks and privileges which are on record in Mahratta; it has been thought sufficient to give above an English translation of the most remarkable. Much difficulty was often found in obtaining the answers, there being disputes subsisting in many cases between the Head man and his Caste. In such instances the rights of the former are held in abeyance pending the decision.

1. Penance is enjoined for the following crimes.

Brumuhuty, comprising offences considered of equal guilt as killing a Brahmun, such as striking or abusing him, &c.

Streechnuty, killing or severely beating a woman.

Ubhuksha bhukshun, eating prohibited food.

Kreca Kurum Ukurm, abstaining from performing Funeral rites of deceased relations.

And other great offences of a similar kind.—After performing the penance as enjoined by a Brahmun, the offender will be received into his Caste as purified.

2. Penance is prescribed by the Jungum to offenders above mentioned, and they are readmitted after such purification. To the above list should be added,

Soorapan, drinking spirits.

Matragumun, incest with a mother.

Gooreotulpuk, connection with a Gooroo's wife.

1. Kolarree.

3. Offenders above named, together with persons eating with men, or having connection with women, of another lower Caste, are readmitted after giving the Caste a meal with sweetmeats.

4. Offenders named in 1 are readmitted on performing penance enjoined by a Brahmun, persons eating (unuwiwhar) or having connection (Gumun) with a lower Caste are not re-admissible.

5. Offenders

CASTES.

5. Offenders of all kinds are readmissible on performing the penance that may be enjoined by our Mookhy Swamee. 1, Jya.

6. Among dancing-girls (Kulawunt) should a girl be disobedient to her parents or quarrel with her husband on account of the possession of her child, she would be excluded by a Punctaet, and prohibited to wear her ankle-bell—she is readmissible on payment of a fine.

7. Offenders guilty of a great crime are not readmitted on penance. For a slight offence, as eating with persons of another Caste, the offender is ordered to feed Brahmuns, or make ablution in the Gunga, and feed the Caste, or beg pardon of the assembled Caste. 1, Ugurwale.

1. Children born previously to their parents losing Caste may, provided they have not ate with Mhars or Moossulmans, be received into Caste on performing Penance or feeding the Caste, otherwise they remain excluded. Children born subsequently to their parents losing Caste follow their example, whether re-admitted or excluded. The Purbhoos profess to be guided by the Sastrus.

Inferred from the answers of

Readmission into Caste generally depends more on the ability of the party to pay fine, or provide an expiatory entertainment, than the enormity of his offence; but long association with very low Castes, or Castes not Hindoo, is stated to be a bar to the readmission of Parents and Children.

2. Children who after the period of their infancy leave such parents and reside with a relation (as their maternal uncle) may be readmitted. If after years of discretion they continue to reside with their parents, they remain excluded with them. 1, Marwarree.

3. For a first offence, the offender is prescribed a Pilgrimage or other Penance, and a repetition disqualifies him, if the crime be heinous, from being readmitted into Caste. 1. Wotaree.

4. Keeping a woman of another Caste and eating at her hands (as of the Castes Chambhar, Bungee, &c.), Gotru-huty, or killing or striking one of his own family name, Incest with a son's wife, daughter, brother's wife or his daughter-in-law, or mother's sister; eating [constantly] with one of a low Caste—such are the causes of exclusion from the Caste by a Punchact. A man so offending is in some instances readmitted on 'Teerth-yatra or other penance; a woman never. 1. Marwarree.

5. Penance and absolute exclusion from Caste on account of feeding with other Castes &c. are not practised among dancing girls. 1. Kulawunt.

For other offences a fine is usually levied on the offender, which is expended on feeding the Caste, if imposed by them, or taken by the Gooroo if he have passed sentence. The offender also undergoes various degrees of penance, such as pilgrimage, branding, fasting, pricking the tongue, drinking the Punchguw, shaving the moustaches &c. The relative guilt of the offence is in estimation various. Under Ootumpatuk (crimes of the highest supposed guilt,) are legally reckoned murder, especially of a cow, a woman, a child, or a Brahmun,—Incest, stealing gold, drinking spirituous liquors.—The guilt of adultery is estimated according to the relative Caste of the parties, and the means used to compass the object. Robbery and striking are also amenable to Caste punishment; eating the numerous kinds of prohibited food, associating with or touching persons of low Caste, and disobedience to the orders ders of the Gooroo or head of the Caste, are subject to different degrees of penalty.

During the period of exclusion from Caste privileges, the offender is not allowed to eat with his Caste, nor frequently to enter* their houses—Persons associating with the excluded person are all liable to fine and penance. Fines and penance are in the first instance imposed by Brahmuns, in most Castes, the Hindoo ceremonies being in general performed by them only on payment of customary fees.

Puschatap or repentance is followed by Prayuschit, and is held the chief requisite in procuring expiation—Prayuschit is specified in the Sastrus for every imaginable offence, and it is apparently from the unwillingness of the party to submit to it rather than from that of his Caste to readmit him on such condition or its equivalent, that long association with Moossulmans or Mhars and Christians (See Castes, 122) is the only offence which involves utter degradation from Caste privileges.

In the Hindoo Criminal Law, higher Caste, and sometimes rank, entitle the offender to a diminished rate of punishment, except in cases of theft. Offences against the peculiar ordinances of the Hindoo Sastrus are classed, as of equal enormity, with breaches of universal morality. The Oath is in fact a trial by ordeal, characteristic of a superstitious people.

Of their punishments, some are prescribed on a principle of retaliation, others on a supposed analogy to the crime. There are however some precepts which denote considerable refinement in legislation, as in the scale of punishment to instigators, participators, and frequent offenders; in modifying rules by the sex and abilities of the injured party, and in prescribing compensation for various injuries in persons and property.

It may be observed that offenders denying their guilt are on proof

proof to be punished in a greater degree, while confession is encouraged by shewing less severity towards those who plead guilty.

The prevalence of falsehood among the Hindoos is consistent with its legal permission for particular objects, although false evidence, generally, is stigmatised as a crime of the greatest magnitude.

Although the Hindoo Criminal Law, and Judicial Procedure, have been modified and improved by the Regulations of Government, the opinions of the people are, as may be supposed, in many respects in accordance with the principles laid down in their religious books.

A person does not by exclusion from Caste forfeit property or right of inheritance.

Answer from

Do. But a holder of an office of religious service as a Hindoo, would forfeit it by changing his religion.

The Johurees have two subdivisions, Dusee and Bisee ; they do not intermarry, but eat together. The Koonbees state that children by their domestic slaves go by their name, but they do not eat nor intermarry with descendants of such children for several generations.

The Patrawut Punkur and Salkur do not eat nor intermarry.

The Marwarres comprise numerous sects. Those among them of higher Caste profess to eat and intermarry with those of high Caste descent (oothum usul) only—of other Castes they consider Brahmuns highest in estimation—next Mahajun, Kshutree, Rajpoot and Kayast—after them Ahir, Malee, Simpee, Kasar ; lowest of all Bungce, Dhobce, Bulhaee, Chambhar.

It appears from a Punchaet Case in Khandesh (No. 7) that Telees are admissible into the Koonbee Caste.

The Kykarrees have two subdivisions, Kocchar and Bootwale, the latter call themselves Kykarrees, but there is no intermarriage or eating together between the two.

The Ugurwale and Lukherce eat Pukarusace (curds, sweet milk &c) with some other Castes ; they eat Kucharusace and intermarry with their own Caste only. The

MARRIAGE.

1. The ceremonies prescribed by the books are by no means universally observed at the present day. With the exception of those performed at Birth, Marriage and Death, at the Moonj of males and the maturity of females, the Sunskar rites are often neglected even by Brahmuns and the higher Castes who imitate them. The expense of feeding Brahmuns and providing an entertainment usual in all such occasions naturally operates to abridge the frequency of their occurrence; although a man of any Caste does not scruple to incur a ruinous load of debt in obtaining funds for an extravagant display at a Marriage, or, occasionally, at a funeral in his . . .

kara.

2. The 1st species of Marriage mentioned in the books, the Brum, is the only one now practised among the higher Castes. There are some trifling distinctions in a man's 1st and 2d Marriage. The lower Castes often receive money on the marriage of their females called Hoonda, which is the characteristic of the 5th (Usoor) variety, and it is suspected that Brahmuns occasionally, in the present avaricious generation, incur sin on this account. All the lower Castes admit the 2d Marriage of Wives in particular instances, and of Widows, the ceremonies at which differ in many respects from those at a 1st Marriage, as hereafter detailed.

3. Among the Brahmuns, Purbhoos, Sonars, &c. the Betrothment is termed Wagnschya. It takes place shortly before Marriage, after full inquiry into the Caste and family of the . . . is seldom retracted, although the promise is not considered irrevocable until after the Hom sacrifice has been performed. (P. D.)

According

According to some Castes a simple agreement only is necessary. (See the Replies from Dharwar in the Appendix.) Cocoanuts and other articles are sometimes given. Asses are given in the Johuree, Caste. P. The intervening period before Marriage is undefined in many Castes, (P. S.) often 3 or 4 years, (D.) It is short among the Johurees, who betroth after maturity.

In the Ugurwale Caste presents are sent to the intended husband at the Magune, which takes place immediately before Marriage, (P.)

The engagement may be dissolved and the parties married to others, in the event of its being discovered, 1, that either party has lost Caste or is of a lower Caste; 2, that on an astrological calculation of their birthdays the conjunction is unfavorable; 3, that the man is impotent; 4, that the parties are of the same Gotr (87 Castes P. 51. C. P. 1 & 2;) 5, the same result takes place if the parents withdraw their consent (25 C. P. consulting the Caste); or 6, if the man becomes incurably blind or diseased (Marwaree) Do. 1, 3, 6, D.—Do. 1, 3, 5, K.—Do. 1, 3, 6;—and 7, if just before marriage any near relation die; or 8, if a former betrothed is still living, S.

In the case of betrothment to one, and marriage in his absence to another, the girl may, in the Koonbee and lower Castes, be given up to the first if the signs of puberty have appeared; or the 1st may formally resign her by giving a Chhor Chittee to the 2d, K. The same case may occur from avaricious motives of the parents, B. S. S. D. A Punchaet would generally make the girl over to the 1st, sometimes even after she has had children; occasionally however she remains with her last betrothed or married husband, she with her children losing Caste, D. In this case, the girl's parents pay the marriage expences of the 1st, 4 C. P. K. D. S. (unless there has been neglect on his side, S.) On which ever side the fault is proved to be, that party party returns to the other the jewels and money advanced. No Divorce takes place till after marriage.

The Caste levy a fine on a man causelessly breaking off an intended Marriage, 3 C. P.

It is not customary among the Brahmuns, Purbhoos and 14 other Castes (P.) to give jewels before Marriage. On a dissolution of the engagement, the jewels and presents given are returned to the man, (56 C. P.), but not if his Caste be deficient, (13 C. P.) or the fault, generally, be on his side, (8 C. P.)

The engagement is indissoluble and the jewels are not returnable, 5 C. P. It is dissoluble only by an order from the Suptusring goddess, 1. C. P.

In a Punchaet case in Khandesh (No. 1) the Plaintiff had agreed to marry his son and daughter to the daughter and son of the Defendant. Defendant's daughter afterwards died, and Defendant did not claim Plaintiff's daughter until after the time fixed for the marriage. The Punch decided that the agreement was properly valid, but as the girl's mother had threatened to destroy herself and her daughter if the Marriage were persisted in, they declared it void, and directed that Plaintiff's daughter should be given in marriage to whomsoever her parents might choose, K.

4. A male may be married among the Brahmuns, at any time after the Moonj; and among other Castes, at any age, S. K. riage.

The female's age on marriage should be less than that of her husband (53 C. P. D.) She should be married before the signs of puberty have appeared (rootoo, nahun, shanee) except from unavoidable delay, (45. C. P.) In that case being liable to Penance (18 C. P.) or exclusion, (10 C. P.) Brahmuns, Bunyas and other Castes marry their females under 10, otherwise they undergo Penance (K. D.) Brahmuns, Senwees.

wees, Purbhoos, Sonars, Bunyas, Komtees, Rajpoots, and Maratha chieftains are positively forbidden to defer the marriage of their females till their shance, on pain of exclusion, S. The high Castes irretrievably lose Caste on discovery, and the female is to be exposed and considered as dead, D. Less strictness exists in Poona on this point ; 7 Castes stated that girls might be married after maturity, P.

In the Kconbee and lower Castes females are sometimes not married till 12 or 16, (K.) but such marriage after puberty is disreputable, and generally the Nikah or widow's marriage ceremony is performed, D. In the Lingaet and other Castes betrothment before puberty is sufficient, D.

Sometimes Parents defer a daughter's marriage, when the relations interpose with the Gooroo or Headman of the Caste, D.

5. The consent of the Parents on the girl's side is essential, and on the boy's it is considered necessary on a 1st marriage, and is always advisable, K. Otherwise the nearest relation present, or friend acting as Guardian with the concurrence of the Caste, gives the necessary authority for a girl's marriage, P. A marriage concluded without the consent of parents is not annulled, 5 C. P. if concluded with the consent of other relations, with persons of proper Caste and with the regular ceremonies 12 C. P. In the father's absence, the mother ; on the death or insanity of the parents, the uncle, give a girl in marriage, K. D. The girl has no voice, K. But in the Kconbee and lower Castes a girl after maturity is at her own disposal, K. There are contradictory opinions from D. as to the validity of a girl's marriage without her parents' consent ; one states it to be valid if concluded by her own choice. So also the Ugurwale Caste, P. And if married by compulsion, the offending party would be fineable by the Sirkar.

To the consent of parents is added the opinion of the Sasree as to a legal intermarriage, S. or that of the Gooroo and Caste, D.

Among

MARRIAGE.

Among the Caste or profession of Dancing girls, a son is always married ; a daughter may either be married to a Moossulman or Hindoo, or be introduced at once to her profession at her parents' pleasure. Marriage is concluded according to Caste custom, and the wife may remain in private creditably under her husband's protection. A girl born of such marriage is under the orders of her parents, and need not follow the profession unless from choice, P.

6. The parties must be of the same Caste, and different Gotr or family stock, P. Brahmuns are prohibited from intermarrying with all Supindu relations, and descendants of their Rish's brothers, and connections within 3 or 4 degrees, * P. Intermarriage with cousins and nieces is prohibited (53 C. P.) but occasionally take place from poverty, P. D. So with aunts and their children, Sugotrus and Suprubhurs, and of course with daughters, mothers and sisters, D. A brother's children may however marry a sister's children, not being Sugotr, D. First cousins intermarry in the Wys Cast, D. Komtees give their children to nephews and nieces, D. Other exemptions in particular sects of Brahmuns and other Castes are mentioned, P. D. Some distant affinity is however preferred, (D.) as intermarriage with families who have intermarried for several previous generations, 20 C. P.

7. In all the Castes, it is the object of parents and relations to secure the marriage of the young females of the family ; from poverty or other causes the marriage of boys is frequently deferred till a late period, and sometimes altogether omitted. The elder is first married, agreeably to the Sastrus.

It is generally paid by the girl's family, if rich; if poor, they receive Hoonda, though the practice considered in the light of a purchase is held disgraceful, P. D. Presents in jewels and clothes or furniture, (the former more especially) held the wife's property, are common in all Castes according to the parties' ability, P. The nonpayment of Dowry agreed on does not affect the legality of a marriage D. A poor family, to avoid the disgrace of receiving Hoonda, will sometimes marry their daughter into a family of similar circumstances; or an intermarriage may be agreed on on both sides.

Marriage

* Every month is divided into fortnights, the days in which are numbered consecutively. The 1st is termed Sood, the 2d Wud.

† The expence of a marriage may be as low as 25 or as high as many lacs of Rupees, averaging from 100 to 2000. The expence of a pilgrimage to Benares, or of a Moonj, may be half that of marriage. The average charges at a Funeral are 20 to 200 Rupees, but may extend to any amount.

11. The girl's residence is usually at her father's house during this period, P. D. her duties remaining those of an unmarried daughter, K. According to the Sastrus, the husband may compel his wife to reside with him after marriage, K. D; and in all cases after her maturity, D. Mutual assistance is occasionally given from affection, but is it not usual for Parents to contribute to their daughter's maintenance after she quits them, D. Cohabitation before the Shancee is punishable by Sastru, K. S. D. with Penance, or an absolution at the Gurbhadan, S. It is however common except in the Brahmun Caste, D. Shanee, nor by a girl's representing to her Gooroo that her marriage was performed without her consent, or by compulsion, K. D. Nor by a discovery before the Shanee that the astrological conjunction was unfavorable, 72 C. P.

Among the Brahmuns and higher Castes if it be discovered that the parties were of the same Gotr, or different Castes, the marriage is annulled, the wife being maintained by the husband, but connexion would be deemed incestuous (The husband must maintain her as a sister, 2. C. P.) S. D. The woman and her children are permanently excluded from Caste, D. Minor omissions of ceremonies are followed by penance only, D. In the lower Castes, in which previous inquiry is not so strict, if the discovery be made before the girl's Shanee, or even before the birth of children, she may be married to another by Pat, S. D. The marriage is not annulled by the discovery that the parties are of the same Koolee, 70 C. P. If the husband be discovered to be of a lower Caste, both are excluded temporarily, and readmitted on paying a fine to the Caste, only in case of his Caste being a little lower one. If the wife be of the lower Caste, she is alone excluded; and if not readmitted is only entitled to maintenance, P. K. S. As, if the discovery be made after the birth of children, D. Otherwise, in Castes which allow Pat, the husband may at his option give his wife a Chhor chittee and she may form Pat with another; but this is not customary after the Shanee or birth of a child, D.

On the discovery of the husband's impotence before the Shanee in the Brahmun and other higher Castes the wife remains with him, K. D. In the lower Castes she may with the concurrence of the Caste perform Penance, and form Pat with another man, 77 C. P. D.

In the three previous cases, the Caste must be consulted before annulment, D. Marriage expenses are to be paid by the party who is the cause of the annulment, K. Presents already given are not returned; Hoonda promised to be paid, is on the annulment sometimes paid, sometimes not, 44 C. P. If

If before the Shance either party die, among Brahmuns &c. the jewels remain with the husband or his relations, 6 C. P. With the survivor, 94 C. P. Hoonda, if already paid, is not repaid, and if unpaid it is not exacted, 58 C. P. If a wife die before the payment of her dowry, it must be paid to the husband or children, or expended in charity, (K). To the children, D.

In this case the husband is at liberty to marry again; the girl can only form Pat, (79 C. P.) and that not among the higher Castes, (Brahmun and 16 C. P.)

Should it be discovered that a girl has been married before, the 1st marriage is binding, the 2d null,* S. D. The Caste of the girl is not affected, but her parents repay the 2d husband's marriage expenses. Should it not be discovered until after connection, the woman is excluded, maintaining herself by manual labour separately from both, and her Parents pay the 1st husband's marriage expenses, D.

Failure of a contract to pay Dowry does not affect the validity of a Marriage, D.

13. A man may marry as many wives as his inclination or circumstances allow, P. K. S. D. Marriages in succession in consequence of the death of a former wife, are very common (P.); but Polygamy is not usual except on account of the barrenness &c. of the 1st wife, K. S. * In a Khandesh Punchayet Case (No, 3) Plaintiff married Defendant's niece and left the country—afterwards her father died, and her mother sold her to a Despande (as his mistress). On his death her release was procured. But the Plaintiff's father refused to receive her, and gave a Chor-chittee on his son's behalf. The girl was married therefore again, and lived with her 2d husband till his death 12 or 13 years after. Plaintiff then agreed to take her back as his wife, but absënting himself for 2½ years under pretence of consulting his relations, she married a 3d husband.

Punchayet decreed that the Plaintiff's consent was necessary to the Chor-chittee given by his father; that his marriage was not thereby done away with; and that he should therefore receive back his wife from her 3d husband, on paying that person the expenses he had incurred on marrying her. Failing to prove that defendant received money from the 3d husband, that claim of Plaintiff was disallowed.

the life of the 1st there are some peculiar ceremonies. The conciliation of a man's parents is not so essential on his 2d marriage as that of the 2d wife's relations, and of the 1st wife and son, if any, D.

In a Punchayet Case at Nugger (No. 39) in which the Plaintiff was brother-in-law of Defendant, both Koonbees, (the Punch consisting of 2 Brahmuns, 1 Moosulman, and 2 Koonbees) Plaintiff claimed the value of jewels taken away by his wife on her going to reside with her brother in consequence of his 2d marriage. Her funeral he had since performed. The claim was allowed by the Punchayet, deducting for expenses of medicine furnished by her brother, and subject to future examination as to the value of the jewels.

Among the lower Castes, widows and wives under certain circumstances are allowed to form the inferior contract termed Nikah, Pat * (P.) or Oorkee (D.) These circumstances are— if the husband prove impotent 76 C. P. S. K; or the parties continually quarrel (72 C. P.); if the Marriage were irregularly concluded; if by mutual consent the husband break his wife's neck ornament, and give her a Chor-chittee, K. P. After which Divorce, with the concurrence of the Caste, the wife may form Pat with another man, S. Sometimes even without their concurrence. And if after 12 years' absence a husband continue unheard of, his wife may form Pat: should he afterwards return, she must return to her 1st husband; or live with either at her option, the party deserted being reimbursed his Marriage expenses, K. D.

On a woman's forming Pat, she gives up all her property and jewels to her former husband's relations (P.) except what had been given her by her own parents (K.) In default of which her second husband may be compelled to give up such property to the creditors of the first, K. S. The children, except infants, are given up to the first husband or his representative, P.

Ceremonies

Ceremonies of Pat are different from those of marriage, P. S. A widow's Pat is considered more honorable than a wife's, K. Women forming Pat are excluded from preparing food at sacrifices and festivals, and from being present at marriages, even of their own children, S. P. But children by Pat are equally legitimate with those by marriage, S.

The Castes in which Pat is admissible are specified, K. S. D. and those in which women cannot remarry includes Marathia chiefs, S. K. 9 C. P.

In the Caste or profession of dancing girls, girls of beauty and accomplishments are made Naikins by the ceremony of applying Misce (a powder made of vitriol) to their teeth—cardamums are distributed to the guests, turmeric is put on the girl's person, after which a religious ceremony is performed in honor of the Gods, or Peers. The Caste are feasted, the Misce is applied by several Naikins, one of whom, of hereditary office and repute in the Caste, takes the girl on her lap and presents her with a Saree. A girl of another Caste may be made a Naikin; in general expence is incurred by obtaining the sanction of creditable Naikins. The Misce of a daughter precedes that of a Paluk-kunya or adopted girl.

The ceremony seems distinct from the Shanee, at which period a few guests or the Caste are feasted—also at the 1st connection. But no Deodhurm or religious ceremony is then performed, P.

the wife would not lose title to receive maintenance and presents. By expulsion from Caste a woman loses all title to property, K.

Constancy on both sides is commanded by the Sastru, D. It is not however considered criminal in a married man to have connexion with a slave girl, Kusbin &c. K. D. though penance would be incurred by keeping a low-Caste mistress or any concubine, 23 C. P. D. A wife has no right to complain of her husband's inconstancy, K; nor to demand payment of presents made by her husband to a kept mistress. A virtuous wife will not leave her husband on any account; a wife may however demand a separate maintenance if her husband illtreat her on account of a favorite wife or mistress, but she has no right to claim a divorce on account merely of her husband's inconstancy, S. But the wife's chastity and dependency on her husband are essential virtues, K. D.; and her inconstancy is punishable, according to her Caste and circumstances, with loss of Caste, repudiation or penance.

The husband is answerable for the wife's offences against Caste, K. not for a criminal offence, S. (as prostitution, murder, robbery, D). She must perform any service directed by her husband, K. D. He may beat her for faults, (K. S.) or other reasonable cause, not wantonly, D. A husband is bound to maintain his wife while faithful, and if sick or disabled from performing her domestic duties, D.

While a woman resides with her parents, they are responsible for her debts; and after she resides with her husband, he is responsible, S. D.

It is disreputable for a husband and wife to complain of each other, D. But a husband may be judicially compelled to assign maintenance to his wife, if faultless, P.

P. This is not universally enforced, P. The Caste may levy a fine, P. In case of seduction by a low Caste man, the woman might remain out-caste and the paramour be fined; but a wealthy seducer of the same Caste may with the concurrence of the husband, Caste and Sirkar obtain a divorce, paying the husband's marriage expenses, without affecting the Caste of the woman, D. If of another Caste, the woman must perform penance, and give alms. If the paramour be of low Caste, she is excluded—he pays nothing, P.

In the lower Castes besides adultery, &c. above mentioned, the husband's impotence, or simple disagreement of the parties, even against the advice of the Caste, is sufficient to cause a Divorce, D. She may treat for her children's marriage, K. The eldest son, on becoming 18 or 20, becomes head of the family, if they remain in common, his mother resigning to him authority and property, and he being bound to support her, S. The son has no absolute right to succeed to a father's authority on coming of age, but if the family do not separate, he may provide for his brothers' and sisters' Moonjand Marriage expenses, K. D.

Each widow is guardian of her own children, and may after separation live with any one of her sons ad libitum, K. Among several widows the wife first married is the head of the family, and has charge of the property. Among several widows of sons, the widow of the eldest son has that authority, K. and a mother-in-law living with her son's widow takes the management, though they are joint-heiresses, and should the latter refuse to reside with her mother-in-law she can receive a maintenance only, K.

Should a husband die while living in community with his father or brothers, they take the property, and provide for the widow, K. She however retains sole right and control over gifts made made her by her parents or husband, K. Do. as to her own property (Sonars), 3 C. P.

Should she have a child, the relations will give her her husband's property in charge for her son; and if she wish to live separately, she may claim a $\frac{1}{2}$ share, K. There is no regular share given. The sons of the deceased (being co-heir and co-partner with his brothers at the time of his death) would share equally his portion of the joint stock, S.

Should she have no sons, the widow is entitled to a provision for life only, her husband's share reverting to the joint-stock of the family, S. She can only claim food and clothes if she have no child, K.

In case of the husband having made partition with his relations before his death, and dying without sons, the widow (or widows jointly) is heiress to the husband's personal property. She holds the real property for life, appointing a Goomashita for it, but not having the power of alienating it, K. S. She may adopt one of her husband's relations, with their concurrence and that of the Caste, who will be her heir, S. Otherwise the husband's brother or relations on her death pay her daughters' marriage expences, and take the property and settle who is to be her heir if she die without children, K.

Among the Brahmuns &c. (P.) the husband's brothers take his share of the Wuttun, maintaining his widow and daughters, and providing for the Marriage expenses of the latter. The widow may however adopt if ordered to do so by her husband before his death (Brahmuns P.) and give money away in charity (out of the produce of the Wuttun.) Neither is she to forfeit her right to maintenance by living separately, (Do.)

Among the Sonars (P.) after deducting the daughters' marriage expenses, the widow takes the deceased's share of the family Wuttun. The widow is heiress, 18 C. P. M.* &c., until she form Pat with another man, 58 C. P. Do. and may give away

The widow is entitled to give away a small part of her property, 7 C. P. Do. M., she being under her brother-in-law's authority. Such as presents in Dhurm, alms &c. (Brahmun and 8 C. P.

If a widow live separate, she is only entitled to a maintenance (18 C. P.) forfeited by her leaving disorderly, Do. A woman cannot insist on a provision if her husband have willed away all his property, K.

PARENTAGE.

* The proportion of educated to uneducated boys in Khandesh appeared by returns made in 1825 to be one to 18. Of the 2022 scholars 311 were Brahmuns, who were taught to read the Veds and Sastrus ; 65 Moossulmans were instructed in Persian ; and of the remainder attending Elementary Schools, 486 were Brahmuns and 267 Bunyas or Shopkeepers. The general state of education was at a similar low ebb throughout the Dekhun.

to maintain him after that age, unless incapacitated by natural imbecility, in which case the parents must maintain their child for life, K. If a son separate from his family, his father need not give him a stipend. A boy may make oath at 12, and at 16 may manage his own affairs and be answerable for debts and promises, K. In the higher Castes a woman is considered to be always under tutelage.

28. This is practised in seasons of famine and distress to a great extent, as a means of preserving the lives of parents and children. Parents may not sell their children unless reduced to the last extremity. The latter are well treated by the purchasers, and are considered as redeemable slaves. See Slavery, K.

29. A father can prevent his son's enjoying hereditary property during his own life (16 C. P.) and may deprive him of a part of the inheritance (K.) but not of the whole, P. K. The father is bound to pay his son's debts (those for maintenance with interest) while living with him, unless incurred after warning on his part to the lender, D.

30. A son must obey his father's commands whether living with him or separately, K. He is bound to defray the father's debts, especially those incurred on account of the maintenance or necessary ceremonies of the family, P. He ought to take charge of the family affairs if his father become prodigal, insane, or otherwise misconduct himself, 1 C. P. D. If the father become poor, his sons are bound to support him, and if by agreement a sum is assigned for the father's income, after the death of one, the survivors must defray it, K. D. A son is bound to receive and maintain his mother applying for his protection, though she have quarrelled with his father and taken away her jewels, K. D. sons.

31. The son of the wife first married, though born subsequently to a son by the younger wife, is entitled to the privileges of the Burepuna, 85 C. P. There is a discrepancy on the point both according to Sastru and custom, Brahmuns, P. 14 C. P. state that the first-born son is entitled.

The same discrepancy exists as to the eldership of twin sons. Brahmuns P. 71 C. P. state that the last born is entitled to the Burepuna, 26 C. P. give the privilege to the first born, and 2 C. P. to the son whose face was first seen by his father.

These privileges vary with different Castes (see Appendix A.) They are, the right to hold and place the family Idols, to sign an attestation first in order, to possess the right side of the house, to take first share on partition, to enjoy precedence in receiving Pan &c. at marriages and other festivals. The law of Primogeniture in Inheritance prevails only among a few families, and some district Wuttundars, and confers on them rather a right of Supreme Management and of making assignments of maintenance than an exclusive title to the whole property. In the D. Josee Caste (P.) the elder is entitled to three Rupees in addition to his share.

Illegitimate

32. Posthumous children receive their share of Inheritance, S. They are not reckoned illegitimate unless born above ten months after the husband's association with the wife, K. The same limitation of time is applied to the case of absentees, K.

Children

Children by Lugun or Pat enjoy equal shares of inheritance, but the former are entitled to the Burepuna and Manpan, 87 C. P. 9 C. P. do not allow the practice of Pat. Children by Lugun and Pat are equal in all respects, K. 8 C. P. The child by regular marriage receives three Rupees more than the child by Pat, 1 C. P.

On mutual separation of the parents. See para. 20.

Children by kept women are not entitled to share property nor to sit with the family at meals, nor (in general) to Caste privileges, 35 C. P. Do. K, if the father be a Brahmun &c. They can only receive presents from their father, 19 C. P.; and are considered as slaves not purifiable in Caste for several generations, 3 C. P. But it is usual to leave legacies to mistresses and their children, S. The father is obliged to support his natural son, he performing the duties of a servant, K. In some cases, where the parents are poor and have no other son, the natural son succeeds to the property, K. He is treated as a child, 1 C. P. 26 C. P. stated that the custom is unknown among them.

Natural children are maintained by the father (55 C. P.) who pays their marriage expenses, after which they must maintain themselves, K. Such maintenance to the children depends on the good conduct of the mother, 15 C. P. It is the father's duty, but the mother may do so, 1 C. P. A natural child cannot, in the Brahmun and higher Castes, demand maintenance from his father's married wife, nor in general from his heirs unless during youth, K.

In case of a legitimate daughter and illegitimate son living under the same roof, either succeeding to the property must give a share to the other, K. Lower Castes give natural children a share of the property, K. They inherit the mother's property only (Brahmun) 10 C. P. They inherit the father's only in case of there being no other heirs, (57 C. Illegitimate children are of the mother's Caste, 62 C. P. Do. if the mother be of low Caste, otherwise they are purifiable, 3 C. P. Girls only, 1 C. P. If the mother be of low Caste the children are burun-sunkur, of mixed Caste. A child by a slave has no rights of property, M. and 2 C. P.

Children by an irregular marriage are considered the illegitimate children of which ever parent was of lower Caste, and their offspring to three generations do not regain the Caste privileges of legitimate children, S.

Children of a woman living in adultery have no Caste, 49 C. P. On the mother's readmission they may regain Caste, 13 C. P. If the mother remain excluded, the children are so also, and are considered as the offspring of slaves, 23 C. P. They are of their father's Caste (5 C. P.), or considered the "Goluk" of their father's Caste, K; and are excluded from inheriting the property of their mother's husband, K.

Children of dancing girls are of their mother's Caste, and are entitled to inherit her property and settle her debts. During her life, the mother has a right to the daughters' gains. They have no claims on their father, though occasionally the girl's husband or paramour will provide for them, P. But a son is heir in preference to a Paluk-kunya or adopted girl. The latter is heiress if neither son nor daughter is alive, P. Daughters inherit the mother's property in preference to sons. They cannot inherit other property, but may acquire it, K. If one in a family die, leaving a young child, the rest provide for its maintenance until of age and understanding sufficient to conduct affairs.

33. The parentage of exposed children should be if possible ascertained; otherwise they would be held of no Caste, nor would any one be obliged to maintain them. They may serve in a temple or Muth, K. or obtain maintenance as slaves. See Slavery.

ADOPTION.

34. Adoption is allowed in order to secure the performance of obsequies after death, the succession to Wuttuns and property, and assistance during old age, 98 C. P. Nine Castes have not the custom of Adoption.

Why adoption is P

It is allowed in case of a begotten son becoming out-caste, (Brahmun) 2 C. P. or insane, or otherwise becoming incapable of conducting the family affairs, 38 C. P.; such adoption is in the name of the son, 1 C. P. A madman is however seldom married, and an out-caste is often readmitted, 2 C. P. No son can be adopted during the life of a begotten son, K. (not disqualified as above.) No son can be adopted if a begotten son have no natural disability to succeed to property. See Inheritance.

35. The only distinction now observed is between the Ourus-pootr or begotten, and the Dut-pootr or adopted son.

Two kinds of sons.

36. An insane man cannot adopt without the consent of relations. An out-caste man cannot adopt (Brahmun and Sonars) 7 C. P. Neither can adopt, (Purbhoo) 2 C. P. His wife, if free from such disability, may adopt, 10 C. P., with the consent of the Caste, 72 C. P. Previous insanity is no bar, if reason afterwards return, M. An unmarried man cannot adopt, D.

37. The age of the adopter is unlimited, P. It should be above 40, or the period of begetting children, M. The adoptee should be young on account of the mutual affection of the parties, 5 C. P. M. He should be adopted previously to the performance of his Moonj (Kan. Sonar. Purbhoo P.) or Marriage, riage, at least if not a near relation (Purbhoo) P. His age should be between 5 and 12, 7 C. P. Any period between 1 and 25, 47 C. P., under 20, 21 C. P. Between 5 and 25, 5 C. P. under 30 or even 50, 3 C. P. There is no limitation as to age (Brahmun) 3 C. P. The adoptee should be not older than the adopter.

38. The following relations are to be selected in order; 1, Brother's son; 2, Paternal 1st cousin; 3, Paternal 2d cousin; 4, one of the same Gotr; 5, one of the same Caste, P. Should the party first in order be refused by his immediate family, the Caste may advise, and if they fail to persuade the party, another boy is with their concurrence to be adopted, P. In case of Surinjamdars &c. the consent of the Sirkar is necessary, P.

The son of the nearest relation is to be adopted; but should his father not consent, a stranger may be adopted with the consent of several respectable persons, K.

39. Of three sons the second is to be adopted in preference to the eldest and youngest, P. An only son is not to be given in adoption, 60 C. P. But an only son may be given in adoption to his uncle in order to secure succession to his Wuttun (Brahmun, 2 C. P. M.) or acquired Property, 18 C. P. An only son may be adopted with the concurrence of both parties, 10 C. P; but such adoption seldom takes place, K. D.

40. The free consent of the parents of the adoptee, at least of his father, is necessary, P. S. Also of the adopter's brother if before partition (5 C. P.) The signature of the relations should appear on the adoption Deed, K. The consent of the near relations is necessary, 51 C. P. Also of the Caste (43 C. P.) or inhabitants of the place (5 C. P.) Should the proper party refuse consent, after an ineffectual attempt on the part of the Caste to persuade him, another boy, being the relation next in order, may be adopted with their sanction, 11 C. P.

The consent of the Sirkar is necessary to adoptions by Wuttundars, 3 C. P. K. Purgunnah Wuttundars 3 C. P. The Sastrus should also be consulted, 3.

Enamdars, exclusive of dancing girls, in making adoptions, must obtain the consent of the representatives of the granters, or if the Enam land were granted by Government, of the Sirkar. Nuzzurs were paid to the Native Government on occasions of granting permission to adopt, P.

41. It is not customary to adopt a 2d son during the life of the 1st adopted, 14 C. P. K. Only one can be adopted. S. If two were adopted, they would share equally, (45 C. P.) the 1st adopted taking the Burepuna, (Sahookars of P.) Such an adoption was permitted by the Peshwa on one occasion only, when he received a Nuzzur of some lacs of Rupees, but it gave great offence to the Brahmuns, being in opposition to the Sastrus, Do. P. A man may adopt two sons, one to each wife, (Wys Sonar, P.)

adoptions

A boy maintained in the house, married and advanced in life, whether a son of a relation or stranger, is called a Paluk Pootr, and is not entitled to share in any property de jure, P. See Paluk,kunyas, 43.

42. At an adoption a festival is held, to which are invited relations, friends, and leading men of the Caste. Presents are distributed among the Head men of the Caste, village officers, relations and guests. The fact of distribution of Sugar, coconut, and Pan is evidence of an adoption, P.

In the Brahmun and other Castes, in which the Sastru ceremonies are performed, the placing the boy in the adopter's lap is considered an essential ceremony, P. Occasionally an adoption Deed is signed by those present, or an entry is made in any any books* which the parties may have, 1 C. P. P. Adoptions may also be proved to have occurred by ascertaining the relations in the new and old families whose Kreea and Puksh have been performed by the adoptee.

Adoption
how annulled.

An adoption concluded agreeably to the Sastrus is not annulable, 49 C. P. S. It is not retractable among Brahmuns after the Hom ceremony has been performed, nor among lower Castes, K.

But if concluded contrary to Sastru or Caste Custom, unknown to the Caste at the time, it is afterwards annulable by them, 70 C. P. Examples, Adoption of one older than the adopter, or of a father's brother, 25 C. P. Or of a sister's son, or a cripple, or one deficient in understanding, or of one adopted without the consent of his parents or relations, 5 C. P. Or of one adopted without the established ceremonies performed by the Oopadya Brahmun, 1 C. P. Or the adoptee is afterwards excluded from Caste, K. Sonars P. Also if he is afterwards proved to have been of a lower Caste.

Though the adoption be not annulled, yet should the adoptee not perform his filial duties, he separates from his adoptive father receiving some share of the property, K. Sonars P. as one-tenth of the property, not being liable to pay debts, Ling. Wane, P. He receives a maintenance only if he turn out of dissolute habits or unfit to manage the property, Purbhoo, P. See Separation between father and sons.

The adoption of a Paluk-kunya as a dancing girl may be annulled if she does not conduct herself at the pleasure of the adopter, P. See 43.

The Ugurwale stated, that in case of a man maintaining a relation's child, writing a Deed to the effect that he should not be Heir, and afterwards adopting him, the subsequent adoption would bar the effect of the Deed, and the adoptee would be heir, not the widow, P.

43. An adoptee performs the ceremonies of Kreea and Puksh for his adoptive father and relations, only in case his natural father should die without any other son or near relation, when he would perform them as a Dhurmpootr, S. (Sonars 19 C. P.) An adoptee performs Sootuk for his natural family according to their adoptive relationship, P. K. D.* In other respects, he is on the footing of a begotten son, S. P.; even if, contrary to custom, more than one boy should be adopted.

Adoptions are sometimes made by Nuncupative will at the point of death: such an adoptee sometimes receives a part only of the deceased's property, D.

The Caste is competent to decide on the question of a legal adoption, P. If unsettled by them, it may be referred to the Sirkar, B. S. P.

Among the Caste or profession of dancing girls, Paluk-kunyas are sometimes given from friendship, or taken on receiving a present. Their Misee is performed after that of born daughters, but in other respects they have equal rights with the latter, in a manner analogous to adopted sons, P.

The adopted son receives whatever the adoptive father gives him during his life, obeying and kindly treating him, and succeeds to his property on his death, being answerable for his debts, P. He can only inherit from his natural father in default of other heirs in previous order of succession (49 C. P.) in virtue of his adoptive, not his original relationship, S. He cannot intermarry with either his natural or adoptive Gotr, D.

After the father's death, an adopted son is bound to provide for his mother in food and clothing: she is not entitled to a share, Ugurwale, P. In the lower Castes a partition sometimes occurs, but the adoptee is heir to his adoptive mother, and generally manager during her life.

44. In

* Example, If a nephew is adopted, should his natural father die he should perform the Sootuk prescribed for a Uncle; if a stranger is adopted, no relationship is held to after adoption between him and his natural father, P. K.

Consequences of a son afterwards born or appearing after

44. In this case, both the begotten and adopted son would inherit the father's property in equal shares, but the former would be entitled to the honor of primogeniture (Bura-puna), and (78 C. P. K.) Precedence (Man Pan). The latter being considered as a younger brother, S. The begotten son would be entitled to a larger share of property, 8 C. P. even two-thirds of the whole, as in the case of his reappearing, 1 C. P. He is considered superior to the adoptee (Purbhoo P.); sharing the father's bad as well as good fortune, M. The adoptee is entitled to Man Pan, 1C. P.

In some places, the two boys share all property equally; in others, the former takes two-thirds, in others three-fourths; in others, the father on the birth of his begotten son gives the adoptee a present according to his ability and separates him from the family, and in consequence he takes no share; in others, the adoptee obtains nothing without a complaint to the Sirkar. The former is entitled to management of hereditary property, and if an Enamdar or Wuttundar to the Dust-khut (right of signature), Sikka (Seal), Naonagur (mark or signature of a Patell), and other privileges of eldership. Sa-hookars of P.

Adoption by males.

45. A wife, in case of her husband's continued absence, when no hope remains of child-bearing, may adopt by his written order, P. K. Or after the period has expired when she puts on the appearance of Widowhood, she may adopt as his Widow. See Widowhood.

A Widow is permitted to adopt, if by her husband's order and after consulting his relations, Brahmuns, P. In default of the husband's order, the consent of relations and Caste is necessary (79 C. P.) The last requisite is not universal.

A widow without heirs may adopt (42 C. P.) with the consent of her Caste (40 C. P.) The Brahmuns stated that she must have her husband's order, and must consult his relations previously to adopting, P.

A widow whose husband has died before her puberty, may adopt, if she have her husband's order, and after consulting his relations (Brahmuns), or with the consent of the Caste (1 C. P.) or with both (1 C. P.) Five Castes mention the consent of relations as essential. The same, if no other heir, 4 C. P. To preserve the succession to property and a wuttun (5 C. P.) such immature widow may adopt if not desirous of forming Pat; the adoption should then be celebrated after her Shancee (38 C. P.) Do. with the consent of her relations and Caste, (33 C. P.)

Of two widows, the elder is to adopt. Should she not listen to the advice of the Caste, the younger may adopt with their concurrence, 73 C. P. The elder is to adopt, but the younger does so in some places, Brahmuns P. The elder has the right, but in the event of her living irregularly, (1 C. P.) the younger may adopt; or both, by the husband's order, 4 C. P. Either may adopt (by mutual consent,) 2 C. P.

The adoptee is bound to provide the widow in necessaries, K. She retains during life the right over her own property, but the adoptee is heir to his adoptive mother, K.

See Separation between father and sons. A son adopted by a widow would be entitled to a greater share of management of property on a separation with her than in case of a separation with a father, but Farikhuts of partition are unusual between parents and children, P.

All the above rules as to selection, consent, age, ceremonial &c. are applicable to widows' adoption.

In a Nuggur Panchaet Case (No. 46), in which both parties and Punch were Brahmuns and Koolkurnees, the widow of an adoptee obtained a decree for the possession of a wuttun given to him by the adopter in opposition to a claim set up by the nephew of the latter according to blood. The Bukshish-nama or Deed of gift was in the names of Venkajee the adopter and his brother's wife, being in community. It contains the names of the parties, their gotrus, and their fathers' names. It states that Venkajee having no son, and having given in marriage his daughter, a son was necessary to manage his worldly concerns and perform his funeral ceremonies—he had therefore requested Ramajee (Defendant's grandfather) to allow him to take on his lap his youngest son (Plaintiff's husband), in return for which he grants to his said adopted son Jee-wajee his wuttun of Koolkurnee, with his house, bullocks, cows, buffaloes, iron and brass utensils, jewels, gold, silver &c. The adoptee to receive and pay all debts, enjoying the property for himself and his descendants; all connection as to property being in consequence broken off between the adoptee and his natural father. This deed is written by the Koo'kurnee, and attested by the district Wuttundars with the mark of a plough. It was decreed that Defendant should keep the property inherited from his grandfather, and that only.

In a case decided in 1190 Fuslee, under the superintendence of Ramsastree of Poona, Rugoohet Bhut, an Ugneehotree Brahmun, claimed his rights as son of Kakun Bhut, who had been adopted by Gunes Bhut with the consent of Babun Bhut and others, defendants. Defendant asserted that Kakun had been adopted forcibly, and that his party did not perform the customary Sootuk at the death of Gunes &c. It appeared, however, from the evidence of the villagers, taken in the Temple by a Karkoon deputed for that purpose, that the signature of Babun was on the adoption deed—that he and the others did perform Sootuk on Gunes's death—and that when on the death of Kakun Bhut, they refused to perform it, the more distant relations refused to eat with them in consequence. It was decreed that defendants should undergo Penance previously to obtaining Purification for this neglect, and that plaintiff should continue to perform the duties and receive the dues attached to his office.

GUARDIANSHIP.

46. Should a wife be living with her husband at the time of his death, separately from his relations, she is the guardian of her children, and each widow of her own ; if she have previously separated, she has the option, K. The mother of course takes charge of infants, though separated from her husband, K. A son of due age may also superintend the ceremonies and marriage of his younger brothers and sisters. See Widowhood.

But should any of the widow's husband's brothers be living with him at the time of his death, he becomes guardian of the children ; or any other qualified relation. A guardian is afterwards responsible for his trust, K.

Should there be no parents, or paternal relations, whether the father died during community or after separation, by his verbal bequest in presence of several witnesses of the Caste, (58 C. P.) Children may be placed with their property under charge of their maternal uncle ; or father-in-law, (4 C. P.) ; or more distant relation, or trustworthy friend or servant, 84 C. P. The arrangement is made by the Caste, (5 C. P.) who are guardians, 1 C. P. If no other, the Patell and Koolkurnee will fulfil the office, 4 C. P. Two Yads or Inventories are made out of the property when the Caste arrange the guardianship, of which one is kept by the guardian and one by a man of repute in the Caste, Ugurwale P.

If no natural guardians are alive, others may be appointed by relations, or by the Gooroo, or by the father before his death. The former cannot be set aside except on a refusal to act. It sometimes happens that there is one guardian of the person, and another of the property, K.

Guardians are entitled to emoluments if agreed upon, or afterwards fixed by Panchaet. They may be called to account by any interested party. They may not manage their ward's ward's property for their own benefit, but may sell or borrow on his account to defray his Moonj or marriage expenses only, with the consent of the relations, K.

Orphans cannot during tutelage dispose of any part of their property without their guardian's consent, K. Tutelage terminates at 16, or, if a female, at marriage, K. On the ward's coming of age, the guardian must prove his Talabund accounts by vouchers to his satisfaction, D.

Cases of in-
prolonga-

Insane persons are often put under the care of a near relation, and taught by gentle means the knowledge of some customs of their Caste, D.

After absence for several years, and in some cases of profligate expenditure, family property may be put in deposit by the relations for the benefit of the children, or otherwise beneficially employed, D. A father sometimes before his departure on a long absence puts his property in deposit, settling a sum for the expenses of his family, D.

In a Panchaet Case (No. 1) N. in which the Punch was composed of one Koolkurnee (Brahmun) and three Patells (Koonbees) it appeared from depositions that the Wuttun claimed (Mokuddimee of a Patellship) had always been enjoyed by the defendant's family (Caste Koonbee) until his father's death, when a relation during the defendant's minority and absence assumed the title of Mokuddim, and received, on account of the Man Pan of the Wuttun previously to his return on the expiration of his minority, Rs. 65, which he deposited with a Marwarree and paid over to defendant. Decree in favour of defendant's right to the Wuttun.

In another N. Panchaet Case (No. 74), in which the parties and Punch were Brahmuns, two youths claimed from their mother jewels and papers the property of their deceased father, a Sahookar in Nuggur, deposited with her in a locked chest by their late brother. The mother objected that her husband had no property on partition with his own family, that all his property had had been gained in trade, through money brought by herself at and since her marriage. It was decided that the shop and trade should be carried on in the name of the sons, by them conjointly with a Goomashta appointed by three members of the Punch, and daily accounting to them and to the mother for all the trading transactions. The keys to be given nightly by the Goomashta to the sons, the latter to sign Hoondees.

The family expenditure was fixed at Rupees 1020 per annum; the 2d sons' food and clothing not to exceed 25 Rupees per month each; the mothers and elder sons' wife together being allowed 35 Rupees.

Expenses of Sraddh and Puksh to be defrayed from the trade. Marriage of the younger son to be defrayed by consent of both. Expenses of a pilgrimage to Benares to be allowed to the two females, if they wish it.

Mooneem or Goomashta's salary fixed at 200 Rupees per annum, Writer's at 100, four servants of the shop (Collectors of Cash &c.) 50 each.

Expenses of Paper and Ink, Sweetmeats, Oil, Alms &c. 200 Rupees per annum. Expenses, after examination, to be allowed for Dhenge (gifts to Sahookars on the Deepwalee and Dussora festivals), Ahir (gifts of a turban &c. to relations on a Marriage), and Siddhy Khurch (a day's food to Brahmun Mendicants).

Should the brothers not attend to the trade, their Nemnooks to be reduced one half. The deceased brothers' widow to live with the mother, and should they disagree, to live separately on an allowance settled by the latter. No one to appropriate money or effects besides the assigned Nemnooks, it being the Goomashta's duty to see every debt and profit collected on account of the trade.

It does not appear whether the Panchaet in this case were relations of the parties. In the absence of relations, the decision of several of the Caste is, in disputed cases, final.

If a servant engage himself on condition of being taught a trade, and learn it, and afterwards misbehave, the master should dismiss him. If a master agree for a certain sum of money to teach a servant a trade, he may turn him off before he is completely qualified, receiving a portion of the money according to the number of days he has been with him, &c. No restriction exists similar to the English law of apprenticeship. The term for learning a trade is not fixed, nor are new-comers prevented from commencing trade in a different village from that in which they have been hitherto educated and resident. The best intelligence, however, subsists among individuals of a trade as to the state of the markets, and the advantages derivable from combination are, it is believed, well understood. The trading classes are far more acute than the cultivators; the Ryuts, unable to read or write, are often at the mercy of the Koolkurnees and Sahookars, to the latter of whom many of them are largely indebted.

SERVICE AND SLAVERY.

48. Personal recommendation, and not a written character, is usual among Natives in engaging a servant, nor is there any system of registry. The sum payable monthly, and the food, clothes &c. to be given, are settled previously to the party being entertained. No definite period as to warning is usual, though it is the interest of both parties to delay a few days after the communication of either to the other that he wishes to terminate the contract, &c. The same custom does not hold good for servants of all ages. A servant cannot go to his village without giving notice notice, but an old servant would not have his wages deducted for doing so, unless he made a long stay, as a month or upwards, K. A servant may quit his service without warning if his wages are not paid, but should he give warning the master is not to maltreat him. A servant committing a fault frequently after admonition may be dismissed without further warning, K.

The ordinary wages of a labouring man are from 20 to 25 Rupees a year, and his victuals twice a day. He comes to his work ordinarily at sunrise or half an hour after, and goes home after dark. During the day he has two intervals of half an hour or an hour each, to eat his food, S. K. If a labourer run away after performing half his work, he forfeits his hire, but cannot be otherwise punished. If the master order an indispensable work to be done, which the servant neglect to do, the master may make the servant answerable for the damage ensuing. If a servant injure any thing of his master's he must pay the damage, K.

The master may have his servant chastised for lying, carelessness, drunkenness, quarrelling and fighting with other people, or other irregularities common to the lower classes. He cannot however stop his pay unless he neglect to come to his work, on frequent repetition of which he will be discharged also, S. A master may deduct his servant's wages during the time he gave him displeasure, and according to his rank may abuse, strike and beat him, K.

A servant cannot be compelled to accompany his master wherever he goes, unless such has been the agreement, K. But if so, and if the servant at setting out refuse to go, he may be compelled to go, or find a substitute ; and if he desert his master without leave, he may be punished, unless he can give sufficient reason, S.

The value of a thing lost through carelessness, after having been entrusted to a servant, may be deducted from his wages, but he ought to be excused if the loss occurred accidentally.

If he strike wantonly cattle put under his charge, he must pay the damage, K.

If a master entrust his goods to a servant, and the latter sell them without his master's knowledge, his master can make him refund the sums he received ; so also should it exceed in amount the sum specified by the master as that for which he was to sell the articles. Should there be a great defalcation, the servant is answerable for it ; he may even be prosecuted for theft after selling articles entrusted to him. A servant sending to a friend articles entrusted to him by his master, whereby they become injured, the master may indemnify himself in money from either of them, K. The servant may recover wages or money that he is entitled to, having laid it out in purchases by the master's order, S.

Pensions and remuneration.

In proportion to the length of a man's service, one-third or one-fifth of his wages are deducted when incapacitated from an injury received in the service for further duty. If the injury be to the extent of a hand or foot, in war, the servant being sent on important duty, the master according to his means should support him for life. If other servants or hired labourers on a trifling business get their arms or legs broken, the master should give them money, K. The servant may demand a maintenance during any accidental injury sustained while in the performance of dangerous work, S.

master.

The duty of a servant is to obey and protect his master, and resent any ill-treatment to which he may be exposed ; a servant after joining his master in a fray would be exonerated from blame, even should he kill one of the opposite party, S.

There is no fine or punishment for enticing away the servant of another, though it is improper. A servant seducing other servants from their duty, should be dismissed, K.

The master is not responsible if the servant without his orders commit any crime, or set fire to a house by neglect ; nor is he responsible for his servants' debts. If a servant die leaving property property without heirs, the master should expend a part in charity, and the rest should go to the Sirkar. The master has no right to succeed to it, K.

A master in the habit of sending his servant for goods to a shop, (not merely occasionally) is answerable for payment of the goods delivered. If the master have not pointed out to the shopkeeper the servant as a trustworthy man, the shopkeeper is answerable, K.

The master may defend a servant who has committed no wrong, K.

The duties of village menials are to watch against robbers and trace stolen property, to clean the horses of strangers, watch by their baggage at night, and accompany them on their journey as guides to the next village. They hold Wut-tuns of which they are particularly tenacious, being entitled to land or huks in grain from the village cultivators. As guides they do not object to carry a trifling load, but the practice of begarries was, until checked by the orders of the English Government, prevalent especially among public servants travelling, or during the march of troops. Such compulsory and gratuitous labour, even of cultivators, would naturally prevail occasionally, as one of the abuses of despotic power.

A Woman convicted of murder, attempt to poison, procuring abortion, sorcery, theft, adultery, beating her family or husband (he not being willing to maintain her) was sentenced to slavery; but was sometimes liberated on the payment of a fine by her relations. The condemnation of prostitutes to slavery, not being sanctioned by the Sastrus, may be considered characteristic of an arbitrary Government, D. It has not been customary, K. It was considered discretionary to ransom a prisoner of war or not, but posterity of criminals were never enslaved, D. Nor criminals (K.) except for a very heinous crime, D.

Insolvent Debtors occasionally discharge the obligation by service to their creditor. He is allowed to treat him under such circumstances as he would any other slave, but the period is temporary in proportion to the amount of the debt. Should the debtor die before the expiration of the contract, his son takes his father's place. His wife does not become the creditor's bandhee, but in the event of no male of his family remaining, the females must discharge the debt by money or service. It is discretionary with the creditor, to accept or refuse ransom offered during the period of service. In some parts of the Kanura and Mysore country, it is customary to enslave even the posterity of a debtor, if a Mhar. The Native Government did not enslave debtors for balances due, D. K.

Famine and poverty often oblige persons of every Caste to sell both themselves and their families. But in general Brahmuns are not enslaved, and Mhars &c. are from low Caste incapacitated from acting as household slaves, S. In periods of distress owners of slaves also sell their slaves, D.

Wandering tribes (Brinjarrees, Kykarees, &c.) and Gosacs, not unfrequently steal children strayed, and sell them. Such children are recoverable by their parents, if boys before 15 or 16, and if girls before their pregnancy, by paying a fixed ransom, or on simply claiming them if their servitude has set off the debt of maintenance, D ; as after 25 years in case of foundlings, K. The same rule exists as to children sold by relations, whether to obtain money, or to get rid of their prior claims to property, S ; and to foundlings, D. K. See 54.

Persons never sell themselves as slaves unless dying for want of a maintenance, when Caste is a secondary consideration. Pending slavery, a man is not considered of equal respectability with a freeman of his Caste, but he may after the famine be readmitted to his Caste on the usual penance. He performs the services allotted to him with reference to his Caste ; not forfeiting it unless from the commission of a Caste offence, D.

Slave.

Of the above descriptions, those recognized as slaves in (S.) are, purchased slaves, foundlings, illegitimate children, and children born of slaves. Those in (K.) are children sold during a famine or taken in war, and children born of a female slave (except Brahmuns and Bunyas,) foundlings being there treated as domestics according to their competency, and not degraded as slaves. Apostates are not enslaved, D. K. but called Bohast, K.

50. The whole of these are treated more like adopted children than slaves ; most persons who can afford it maintain and clothe them better than domestics, providing for their marriage expenses, affording them more or less their confidence, according to their intelligence and ability, and frequently before their death emancipating them or giving them some property. So universal is this kind treatment, that a poor family in times of distress consider it an advantage to get one or two of their children so well provided for. Among the upper classes, almost all the females who perform the drudgery of the house are purchased slaves. However, the labour of hired servants is found much more effective, in consideration of maintenance and the trouble of teaching a slave. Slaves seem to be kept up in rich families more from ostentation than use, S. They were treated with

Emancipa-

A slave owner may at his option receive ransom for a purchased slave, whether tendered by himself or a third person; but insolvent debtors should be emancipated whenever the amount of the debt may be forthcoming, D. The Sahookar must be indemnified; sometimes the Government will interfere and emancipate the debtor, D. Slaves taken in war or purchased in a famine must be emancipated on ransom offered; children born of a female slave or otherwise purchased need not be so. In the first case the children of the slave are emancipated also; in the others, not unless their ransom also is paid, K. The owner or buyer may at his option accept as a substitute the child or relation of the emancipated slave, D. K.

A master may apprehend a fugitive slave wherever he meets him, whatever be his Caste, K. Absence however long does not alter the relation of master and slave; but if the slave be not found till after the master's death, he is not the slave of his heir. And in case of the slave having been allowed by his master during absence to marry a woman of better Caste, his posterity in the 9th generation rise in estimation, D.

A slave owner may emancipate his slave at any time, by so expressing it in his will, and may make him perfectly independent of his heirs, D. K. The manumission of private slaves by the Sirkar, in opposition to the owner's wish, would be arbitrary, K. D. If after being manumitted the slave should be unable to procure subsistence, the master may receive him again as a slave, D. Slaves, if separating from their masters, generally do so by mutual consent. If he save his master's life, he can claim no right of being freed de jure, D. He and his family are freed, K.

Slaves are responsible for the crimes they may commit, but the owners are so for slight breaches of the peace in which the former former may be concerned, D. A master is answerable for debts contracted or crimes committed in his house, only if done with his knowledge, K. Slaves cannot contract debts except with their master's sanction and at his responsibility, D.

A man of the Soodru Caste may adopt his slave, if he have no children of his own, K. Mahrattas and Moossulmans, if without children, adopt those by their Bandhees. Such children are held of inferior Caste, with their posterity to several generations. They however superintend the property, and are nearly on the same footing as children, D.

Adoption

Female children are often purchased on a Khurced-putr or deed of sale, by dancing women for the purposes of public exhibition and prostitution. It is not usual to take such girls from the Brahmun or Syed Moossulman Castes, P. They are taught the usual accomplishments of the profession, and sometimes eventually rise to the head of the establishment. They cannot leave their purchasers without consent of the latter, and the parties generally live harmoniously together. Sometimes the mistress and the slave exchange the appellations of mother and daughter, the latter supporting the former; sometimes the girl's liberty is purchased by an admirer. At others from rivalry, illtreatment, or attachment to a favorite lover, they abscond, and the mistress becoming a loser in consequence complains to the government authorities. Under the Native government the girl was restored with remuneration for the injury sustained to the person who had from infancy maintained and clothed her, unless a compromise was entered into by the seducer, which in the event of his being a man of rank, was not difficult, S. P. A purchased girl is under the orders of the daughters and Karbaree. Naikins may purchase girls, their age and number not being limited. All property acquired by them is taken by their mistresses, through one purchased girl sometimes is heiress to her companion. The son or daughter performs the Kreea of a purchased girl, P. 51. A slave is not considered infamous either as a witness or in any other judicial capacity, (S), if otherwise competent, K. P. From Dharwar opposite opinions were received in answer. The labour a slave performs for his master is an understood exchange for his food and clothing, S. If he realise money when not required by his master, the latter could not with propriety demand it of him, though at his death, without children, it would revert to the master, S. Slaves may inherit and bequeath property which, by their master's consent, they have possessed. On his death the master would become entitled to the whole, as, strictly, he was during his life, but the slave's wife would enjoy it during her life, and bequests to any person or Caste, slaves or others, would generally be carried into effect, D. A slave may acquire property, or inherit it, or take bequests: should he die without children, the master inherits, K. A slave may serve as a soldier, (K.) if otherwise competent, and when permitted by his master, D. Should slaves own slaves, the profits of their labour go to the master, D.

52. In case of a slave complaining against his master, not for insufficient food and clothing, nor on account of his Marriage not being provided for, but for severity of punishment for disobedience, he should not be listened to; and on unfounded complaint should be delivered over to his master for punishment P. A slave cannot make a complaint against his master, Government should punish him for so doing, K.

Should a slave be obstinate or insubordinate, his master may punish him by depriving him of his accustomed food, K. D; or otherwise, or may turn him out of doors, K; but may not take his life, D. The owner is bound to support in age the slave who toiled for him in youth, K. D.

A master may on his departure assign land to a particular slave, and take all the others away, K. Such slave cannot be turned out of it except by their master's losing right of possession. Slaves cannot be obliged by their masters to emigrate with them, if not stationary on their Wuttuns; but slaves of Government Ryuts accompany their owners wherever and whenever they emigrate, D.

53. Children of female slaves (Bandhees,) of foundlings, and of persons who voluntarily yield their freedom, are hereditary slaves, D.

Female children of slaves are given in marriage, hence their lot and that of their children of both sexes is preferable to that of the male children of slaves not so favored. Children of Bandhees by illicit intercourse become slaves, but their descendants rise in estimation in the 7th generation—Children of Bandhees married to male slaves, are the slaves of the father's master. Should, contrary to custom, a free woman marry a slave, the offspring, if enslaved, are the slaves of the father's master—the woman too loses Caste. Generally, however, neither a free woman nor her children are enslaved. A freed Bandhee marrying a freeman, the offspring are free, but are of inferior Caste to the father. A freeman may purchase a Bandhee as a kept mistress, and the offspring are his slaves, generally acting as servants in their father's house. Bandhees are often so kept, or live as prostitutes, &c. D.

Children of purchased females are slaves, and the master may sell them; but as they regain Caste in the 3d generation, the grand child of a purchased slave cannot be sold. Children of male slaves are not considered slaves, but are a kind of apprentices for an unlimited period, S. The son of a male slave is a slave like his father, K.

In case of a slave-owner acknowledging as his own the child of his female slave, such child would generally be employed as his confidential servant, take precedence of the children of other female slaves, and be maintained and married in common with the family. The mother would become free, D. Though not ipso facto, D. The father ought to manumit both the mother and child, K. A person voluntarily becoming a slave is treated more as an adopted son than a slave, and is considered respectable in society while conforming to his Caste customs, D.

Sale of children by parents.

54. Parents may dispose of their own children in time of famine, and a man may dispose of his brother's or sister's children as well as his own, D. But should a person be sold by another who has no right by custom to sell him, the former must be immediately emancipated and the seller made to refund the value received and be punished ;—and if he cannot ransom the slave otherwise, he must do so by his own personal service, D. It is wrong to sell one of a man's own family, but if sold during a famine, a father is not punished, and he may emancipate his son after paying the charges of maintenance, K.

COMMUNITY OF PROPERTY.

Property.

55. Private property is of the following kinds.

1. Land originally granted by Government or acquired by an individual, and which by long prescription has obtained the title of a hereditary Wuttun. The Purgunna Wuttundars or Zumeendars under the late Government superintended the cultivation and revenue accounts, as head Patell (Desmookh) and Koolkurnee (Despande) of the district. They also witnessed contracts and settled disputes. Nuzzurs were levied from them by the late Government. Their Wuttuns consist of, 1, Land waste or cultivated, usually let out to cultivators on an agreement to pay the landlord a share of the produce ; 2, Umuls and and Huks, shares of Government dues or periodical or other payments from the cultivators in money or kind. This property is in some places held free of rent, in others it is chargeable with a rent or tax of one-third to one-half that of the ordinary ground of the village, either payable annually or at prescribed intervals.

Statement of the estates of Village Wuttundars in the district of Poona, varying in different places.

Patells. They enjoy enanland, freehold, or subject to Joree or Tizace enan; Meeras land; House freehold; besides Huks viz. Teewara or Kawee, right to a portion of grain from each field at threshing time; Googree, one wun of grain from each Chahoor of 120 beegahs; Parlbhara, a man's or Tattoo's load of grain from each field when the crop is ripe; Wanwura, one or two strips of garden land, planted with vegetables; Pasoree, a piece of land or money given for a pachoree (cloth for dress); Sirpao, a turban from the Sirkar at the Jumma bundy; right of taking, daily, from the shops, Pan Sooparee, Oil and Tobacco; right of taking Fuskee, a handful of grain &c. on bazar days; right to a portion of grain &c. imported into the village; Lugun tuka, a present on the marriage of an Oopuree or Mohturifa; dues from travelling Merchants who pay per night four pice to the Patell, four pice to the Ramoosses, and one pice to the Mhar for every tent.

Lowazima, viz. right to the service of a Kolee in bringing water for domestic purposes; to that of a Mhar in bringing wood, to that of the Hujam in Shampooing. The Patell also claims of the Dhobee a Puchoree to sit on during dinner; and a Saree on his daughter's marriage; and it is the Naik's duty to precede him on days of ceremony.

Man, viz. right to give Nuzzurs to Government, Precedence in receiving sugar at Marriages, right to receive Pooja at the consecration of the village god (once in one or two years). His wife receives a cholee, and his son and daughter take precedence in Marriage processions. The Patell conducts the ceremonies monies at the Holee and Dussora festivals. On all occasions he receives Pan and Sandal first in order.

Naonagur, right to sign and mark with a plough, khureed putrs (deeds of purchase) of Meeras land or village wuttuns.

The customs of sharing these Huks &c. vary in different places; in some a greater proportion is received by the Mokud-dum, or elder of the family. The amount and value of course vary with the Population of the villages.

Koolkurnees, or Village Accountants, do not in general enjoy Enam land, in some places they have Meeras; or a money salary varying from 10 to 400 Rupees in amount; their Huks are, Mooshara, right to receive one or two seers of grain per beegah from every field; Kagudbaha, do. a sum in money payable from the Gaonkhurch or fund for village expenses; Bikul-mache huk, a fee of one rupee on writing deeds of sale &c. Googree, Parlbhara, Wanwura, are similar to the Patell's Huks. The Koolkurnee's Pan Sooparee, and Palkee are equal to one half the Patell's Huks. The Lowazima of the Kolce, Mhar, Hujam, Dhobee, Naikwara is the same as the Patells. The Man-Pan is the same as the Patell's, but the latter has precedence. The Wuttun of a Koolkurnee is generally enjoyed in turn, year by year by all the family claiming shares in it. In some places the elder takes the Huks and the land is equally shared, P.

Enam.

2. Land and dues granted in free Enam by Government, or independent Jageerdars, or Enamdars, to individuals.

Enams were given under the late Government from personal favor to chieftains, Mootusuddies, Sastrees, Josees, Physicians, Brahmun priests and Devotees, Gosaens and Mendicants, Sahookars, Dancing girls, Artizans, Sons-in-law, friends, dependants &c. The subjects of Enam Grants are the Sirkar revenues or portions of them (as the different Umuls of Mokassa, Babtee &c.) due from villages, and Government land, formerly subject to the discretionary levy of Nuzzurs on alienation &c.

These

These grants were hereditary, and generally freehold. All the sovereign Princes and great Chiefs gave Enams out of their own territories, and generally obtained the confirmation of the Supreme authority, P.

3. Land granted rent-free to Brahmuns and others for officiating in Temples; or granted in Enam to the deity of the Temple, styled the Dewusthan. The Dewusthans also enjoy Wurshasuns and Nemnooks (fixed payments from the Treasury) and Huks or local dues varying in nature and amount. Prescription of twenty years has been held sufficient to allow a possessor of such land to have appropriated part of the land &c. to purposes not intended in the original grant, Heirs of the grantors of Enam to a Temple have right of superintendence P. If the Dewusthan be large, a Karkoon on the part of the Sirkar superintends the revenue and expenditure. In small Temples, the Poojaree superintends the expenses, and the Moamlutdar occasionally sends a Karkoon to examine the accounts. It has been usual pending disputes and trivial claims to resume the revenues pro tempore, appointing an officiating Poojaree on the part of the Sirkar. The Sirkar would appoint a relation (should there be one) successor to a Poojaree convicted of a crime against the purity of his Caste, P.

Dewusthan.

4. Meeras, under which tenure cultivators have a hereditary and exclusive right of cultivation, with the power of transfer to another, subject to the payment of a settled Government rent or tax. The shares of village Land, probably originally divided equally (sthuls or thuls), have become by the long process of the law of inheritance, of variable extent and quality. The Meerasdars enjoy Man-Pan after the Patell and Koolkurnee. Oopurees are tenants at will, without the power of alienating the land which they agree to cultivate. There are others who cultivate land in other villages called Pykarrees and Wywankurees. No cultivator can convey manure beyond yond the limits of the village in which he resides, though he should have a field of another village close to it, S.

5. Dues of the Bullootedars consisting of Grain &c. are received by the village Blacksmith, Carpenter, Astrologer, &c. on different occasions.

6. Houses. After a house has been built on land given by Government, it becomes the property of the grantee, with power of alienation, (K.) and resumption after any interval, provided no new building has been erected. The purchaser of a house is liable to all the usual taxes, not paying them in arrears. Special taxes and licenses of course do not affect the house, but the trading occupant, and are levied on him as a shopkeeper, S. K.

7. Grants by the Native Government in Jageer were either Fouj Surinjam, subject to the performance of Military service; or Jat Surinjam, personal Jageer. The subject of these grants were the whole or particular portions of the Revenues of villages belonging to the Sirkar*. Besides Military chieftains, Jageers have been given to Sahookars, relations and friends of the Prince and others. Usually the grants depended on the pleasure of the sovereign and the fidelity of the grantee, and were liable to the payment of Nuzzurs on succession, partition, adoption and alienation; and it was customary to take a part of the money necessary for the equipment of the contingent, if the Military force was not required. They were not in general hereditary; sunnuds seldom exist; on the 1st grant it was usual to give the grantee a khut or order addressed to the Government officers of the district.

8. Grants from the Hoozoor or district Treasuries to individuals in money were called Nemnooks and Wurshasuns. The grantees were generally religious characters, or performers of Civil and Military Services. Sometimes a Nemnook was given in in commutation of Surinjam or Enam. These grants were of the nature of annuities, but not necessarily hereditary.

* Mokassa, Babtes, Sahotra, Sirdesmookhee, Kusur, Neem Choutace, Nuzzur, Ghasdara, Hoozoor Choutace, Zilbe Umul &c. varying as to name and amount in different places. Land was also given, Dry, Garden or Pasture.

9. Jewels, clothes, household utensils, domestic animals, and money, are included under the general head of moveables.

56. Should the elder of a family (i. e. the father, eldest son, widow, or her husband's brother &c.) be unfit for the management of property, one of the other relations of sufficient skill is chosen in his stead. He generally receives presents of greater value on ceremonial occasions, (64 C. P.) but no greater share on partition, 101 C. P. In a Nugger Pt. No. 16, a younger brother of superior intelligence was manager; and accounts being passed in joint names, no partition was held to have taken place with the elder.

In Enams granted on account of religion, a greater share is in some places assigned to the elder of the grantee's family, on account of the expenses of management, sacrifices &c. In some places the proceeds of land and huks are shared, in others the land is shared definitively. Example. Of the early grants to the Chinchore God (a supposed incarnation of Gunputtee, hereditary in a Brahmun family for eight* generations) one-half is enjoyed by the god, and managed by the elder of the elder branch, who offers Pooja and receives the profits; one-half is shared equally by the relations. All the later grants are managed and enjoyed on the god's account.

In the villages of Teoor, Ranjan and Siduk, called Sumusthans from being supposed to be under Divine protection, one practice is that descendants of the grantees should share equally the old and new grants and bear an equal share in the god's expenses; another, that the elder should receive a large share on account of expenses, the rest sharing the remainder equally†, P.

The right is vested in the manager, but he should acquaint the rest of the family, or the most intelligent of them (Brahmins), 50 P. M.

The manager is at liberty to alienate property without the consent of the rest, 24 C. P. Juniors are bound to respect and obey the elder, M. But they have a right to object, if he make self-interested bargains, or appropriate an undue share to himself, P.

Of widows, she is manager who is of greatest ability and experience, B. S.

The consent of the rest is necessary to alienations made by one of a family, 29 C. P. So also in the alienation by sale or gift of Wuttan property of Desmookhs and Despandhes, P. including pledge of other Wuttans, 13 C. P. an exception is however made should the rest of the family be absent or the party distressed for funds for his necessary family expenses (Brahmins.) 6. C. P.

The consent of the manager is sufficient, 24 C. P. With the same exception as to absence of the rest, and pecuniary exigency, 21 C. P. Other Castes limit such alienation of family property, in any event, to moveables of one or two hundred rupees value (Sonars), 19 C. P. Descended property is considered entailed, but one of several may alienate his own share, K.

Property not saleable without the consent of Heirs may be recovered by them, the seller being obliged to indemnify the purchaser, K.

57. Wuttun or other property acquired by an individual's exerion during community, is brought into the common stock and enjoyed by all, 89 C. P. Zumeendars, P. Enamdars, P. The acquirer before partition can alienate his own share only, K.

partition.

At a subsequent partition, if a district Wuttun, all the relations share equally, in general, especially if they have contributed money or aid towards acquiring the new Wuttun (as under the Native Government, by payment of Nuzzurs &c.) In some cases, the acquirer and manager being brothers, the elder would receive the privileges of Man-Pan and Burepuna as usual, and both would share equally on partition. But in some cases the sons of the acquirer take a large share, P. In the D. Josee Caste the elder takes three rupees more than any other, P. One of a family of district Wuttundars may alienate property acquired by himself, and his relations cannot bar its sale or gift, P. But even acquired property should not be disposed of except on an emergency, K.

In Enam property, an acquirer would take a larger or smaller share on partition of his own acquisitions, in proportion to the amount of assistance derived from his family. Example. If he have taken a small part only of the family property, he would receive one-half the acquired Enam, and his relations take the remaining one-half. If a larger sum, the shares would be two-fifths to the acquirer and three-fifths to the family. Of those three-fifths a larger share might be assigned to the manager, with the obligation of superintending the family at home. Generally however if the acquirer have received no aid whatever from his family or paternal property, he would keep the whole himself, or his elder son would take it, assigning Nennook's for the maintenance of his younger brothers and relations, P.

Property

Property so acquired during community is on a subsequent partition shared equally (Brahmuns and 3 Sonars), 78 C. P. The acquirer is entitled to a larger share (Purbhoo. Kan. Sonar P.) Do. but the amount is not defined, S. Both customs are extant, M. The acquirer takes a larger share of immoveable property acquired and the Burepuna, 6 C. P. Do. the Burepuna only, 2 Sonars, P. The Heirs have the right of pre-emption, in case of such alienation of acquired Enam or Meeras land, or service, S.

In the case of a son acquiring property while living with his father, the latter has no claim on it, nor is it answerable for a father's debts in general, K. D. He can only alienate it in part, or in pledge, D. Or in cases of urgent necessity, K. The father sometimes gives his son separate property to be at his own disposal, the parties still residing together. The father and son ought to act reciprocally for each other in Wuttun and other services, K.

One of several unseparated relations frequently places money in Sahookar's hands for the exclusive benefit of his own children, unknown to the rest: but the latter would claim a share if the fact ever came to their knowledge, 12 C. P. One of several unseparated relations sometimes leaves his family and acquires property abroad, which descends to his own children, the latter neither claiming any thing from their relations nor giving them a share of their own property, 1 C. P. Such absence effects a virtual separation. In a case decided in Fuslee 1189 under Rainsastree's superintendence, two brothers (Gosawees) being in community, one of them obtained an Enam of two villages, and afterwards borrowing rupees 1000 went on a pilgrimage to Benares, with his father, and separated from his brothers. On his return he obtained a re-grant of the Enam (it having been resumed in his absence) with additional land and Umuls in other villages. It was decided, that the son of the acquirer in question should enjoy one-half of the old and the whole of of the new grant on account of his own share, defraying the expenses of the God in the Muth as by custom established, and alms-giving; that the two sons of the acquirer's brothers should receive the remaining one-half of the old grant between them; that the three cousins should defray in equal shares the debts on account of the Benares pilgrimage, but that a debt incurred in recovering the Enam and another on account of the God, should be defrayed one-half by the acquirer's son, one-half by his two cousins in equal shares: Khuts were delivered to the parties accordingly. In another case settled in Fuslee 1185, a similar distribution was made of Enam property among four Gosaweas, brothers. The elder receiving one-half and engaging to perform the religious services; the others receiving the remainder chargeable with deductions on account of the God.

In a Punchayet case, N. (No. 66) the Punchayet were five Brahmuns, and the parties, an elder and younger brother, Sonars, engaged in trade. The elder had obtained certain jewels of which the younger got possession. Afterwards the parties separated and Farikhuts were taken. It was decided that the younger should have no share in these jewels, on the ground that the elder was manager, and had incurred charges in paying debts to which the younger had offered interruption.

PARTITION.

58. Partition of property is not general between father and sons; it occasionally occurs owing to the extravagance of one party, or undue partiality shewn by the father to a younger wife, or one of his sons. Sons are entitled to what the father freely gives them, and one son may receive property from his father and separate, the rest remaining in community, 96 C. P. The father sometimes gives a larger amount to a favorite son under pretence of providing for his marriage; or keeps a larger larger proportion himself under pretence of an intended pilgrimage, D. No majority is necessary, S. P.

Partition between brothers may occur from the quarrelling of their wives, the appropriation of an undue share by one, the Karbaree's partiality to his own wife or children, or the refusal of one to listen to the advice of the rest, 101 C. P. If brothers are young, they should remain in their father's house with their mother under her management; after they are grown up, a separation may take place, K.

tion.

52. Partition is proved to have taken place by the parties cooking and eating separately, and by separate performance of religious domestic ceremonies (Nyweddy and Wys Deo), Brahmans, 2 C. P. Or by Farikhuts, and attestations, 83 C. P. Farikhuts or acquittances are universally customary in the Komtee, C. not usual in 2 C. and described as not universal, S. The distribution of earthen pots to the Caste is evidence of a partition, 1 C. P. If the parties eat and carry on trade separately, they are held to be separated, though no Farikhut have passed, M. But between a father and son, if they separate, a Farikhut must pass, M.

Disputes would be settled by the mediation of relations, by a Punchayet, or by the Sinkaf, K.

In case of a Surinjam or Sumusthan, the debts are generally divided with the other effects; should the manager during community have paid debts, he will recover them from the sharers on partition, D.

re-union.

60. One of several relations may take his share and leave the family, the others remaining with their joint property in community as before, P.

Several relations occasionally agree to live together again, (29 C. P.) on the settlement of the expenditure of each proportioned to his share, 45 C. P. Such re-union occasionally takes place place from poverty, 4 C. P. It is not customary in nineteen Castes, P. The shares may remain as before divided, the new acquisitions or family revenues being appropriated for family subsistence, and the surplus divided in the shares before determined, 3 C. P.

61. Previously to partition, provision is made by Nemnook or otherwise for the parents if living, and for their funeral ceremonies if dead; for the expense of building a Temple or other religious or charitable expense directed by the father, M.; or agreed upon by the surviving partitioners (1 C. P.), as well as for the marriage and other ceremonial expenses of the younger branches of the family, 53 C. P. The amount of the latter may be either placed in deposit or given to the parties in addition to their shares, K. Girls also receive clothes and jewels from their parents or brothers as gifts, D. Brothers also make provision for a widowed sister residing with them, P. Or other female relation. In a case decided under the superintendence of Ramsastree. Fuslee 1173, four brothers and a cousin living in community one of the former died, leaving a son without any widow. The survivors agreed to give her a house, a Nemnook of 150 rupees per annum, and a saree each. The Nemnook to be reduced to 100 rupees should they receive no income from the Sirkar as at present, and the widow to retain her jewels.

Partition is not customary among Dancing-girls, a daughter of ability conducting the affairs of the family; sometimes a son is Karbaree. Should one of the family separate, the rest provide maintenance. In gifts, sales and pledges of property, it is customary for the Karbaree to consult the Naikins before concluding the engagement, P. A family consisting of a mother, son and daughter, on separation, take Farikhuts; the girl living separately provides for her own subsistence, but if in distress, her family will assist her. A temporary separation sometimes takes place. A mother dying and leaving a son and Paluk Kunya, they they may separate sharing debts and property, but it is usual for a family to live together, P. Debts of all daughters contracted on account of Sunsar during community, are defrayed by the rest, P.

Separation
between father

62. Generally, a Wuttun is not divided until the father's death, when if the family separate the brothers receive equal shares, the eldest enjoying Burepuna, 52 C. P.

The father being manager has the power of dismissing a son for ill-conduct, but not of disinheriting him, 52 C. P. On quarrelling he may give the son what he pleases, 86 C. P. The father is absolute as to his acquired property, M. K. Enam lands may be divided at the father's option, K.

The son has no right to demand partition from his father, so long as he conduct himself properly in the management of the family property, 82 C. P. If the father were however to act extravagantly, for example, give it away to a stranger, a separation might take place, P. Or should the father be incapable of managing the property, the son does so in his name, for the preservation of it in the family, 78 C. P. Should the elder son have been dismissed, and the younger manage the property, he may continue to enjoy it exclusively, being however chargeable with the payment of the father's debts, 52 C. P. A son so put in charge of a Wuttun by his father has no power to alienate it, 1 C. P. So also whether remaining with his father, or born subsequently to the dismissal of an elder brother, the son takes what remains on the father's death, paying his debts, 26 C. P. On the father's death the debts and inheritance would be equally divided between a son separated, and one born after such separation (Brahmins), 12 C. B. The son with whom the father has lived is entitled to a larger share; should a son be born after Partition, the divided property ought to be re-collected, and after adding that acquired since, there should be a new distribution, K.

On

On a partition of descended property, a father's and son's shares are equal. (2 C. P. Purbhoo.) The father has a greater share of that acquired by himself; and the sharing is at his option. Vide Supra.

If the parties choose, the property may be sold and the produce divided, K. Services are often performed by the parties in turn year by year, and Haks are annually divided, D. Each may collect the produce of his divided share, or each may take his share of the annual produce; as, of a life estate, or of the profits of land held in pledge, K.

It is usual for provision to be made for the payment of a father's debts previously to partition, but sons are always bound to pay their father's debts according to their ability, if incurred for necessary purposes, K. P. M. But a son being grown up is bound to pay the principal only of debts contracted by his father without his permission, and each son especially is bound for debts contracted on his own account, D.

In Fuslee 1176 a partition of property was determined, under Ramsastree, between a father and his son by the elder wife; it appears the parties had disagreed in consequence of the father's second Marriage, and the birth of a son by the younger wife.

The family property consisted of, 1, The Mokassa Umuls of 29 Villages. These were divided in the proportion of one-half to the father, one-fourth to the elder son separating (the villages being specified from which he was to receive his share of the Umuls) and one-fourth to the younger son remaining in his father's family. 2, Wuttuns, viz. one-half share of a Mokuddimee or Patellship (being Dhaktepuna, or attached to the younger branch) half of the Koolkurneeship of the same Village, and one-half of the Mokuddimee of another village (being the Burepuna, attached to the elder branch). It was settled that the elder son should manage the Patellships, and receive the Man Pan thereon, giving his father two shares of the produce, and keeping one himself; that on the same principle the father should manage the Koolkurneeship two years, and the elder son one year, by turns. 3, House, and Meeras and Enam land. The house was to be divided between the two brothers, a wall being run up the middle. It was determined that all the property on the father's death should be equally divided between the brothers.

63. The general custom is for co-Heirs to take equal shares, 95 C. P.; and if some time have elapsed after a succession to joint-stock property, the parties share on the principle of representation, sons receiving among them their father's share in the event of his previous death, S. In the D. Josce Caste, the elder receives three rupees in addition to his share, P.

In case of hereditary offices equal sharing is also most usual. But in some families it is customary to set apart one-fifth of the whole for the head of the family, dividing the rest equally; and in others the elder or selected manager takes the whole as head of the family, providing for the rest, S. These three modes are in use in Desmookh's Wuttuns. In those of Despandhes, the dufur and enjoyment of the Wuttun are also taken in turn, year by year, P. So also in a Nugger Panchayet Case No. 29, in which the parties and arbitrators were Brahmuns. There had been no regular community nor partition in the family for above forty years. After partitioning equally all property not acquired by individual exertions, it was determined that the family right of visiting, as Bhuts, the Brahmun Householders at marriages &c. should be in future exercised by each in successive years; all dispute about roosums already received was waived by both parties.

In case of an acquirer of Enam property dying encumbered with debt, it may happen that the elder of his two sons retains a small part of it only, while the younger taking the remainder and supperadding new acquisitions of his own, disencumbers encumbers the property. The Heirs of the younger would then take the property, exclusive of the portion originally retained by the elder, P. See Community of Property, (Dewusthan).

Brothers living together but trading separately are answerable for each other's debts, but not for the debts of one of them contracted while separated altogether, K.

In general, debts are distributed in proportion to shares of property partitioned, 95 C. P. Should the assets be small and the debts large, a dividend is accepted by the creditors as in cases of bankruptcy.

On the death of one relation in community with others, his creditors demand payment of the manager, 74 C. P. The debts of one being defrayed by the family, or after partition, by the members of it equally, M. Debts incurred after partition are not payable by the former coparceners, M.

Widows are responsible for their husband's debts if they receive property through him, K.

Widows

Sisters living together are bound to pay the debts contracted by either for subsistence or other purpose, K.

Dancing-girls pay sunsar debts of sisters, (whether ourus or paluk-kunya) contracted while living together.

Danc

Enam grants by Dan-putr to a son-in-law or friend are not shared by the relations while the family property remains in common. On a partition, it is optional with the grantee to give them a small portion, P. Their consent to the gift is however here presumed. After partition, a gift to a son-in-law would bar claims of lineal descendants on it.

In case of one brother living separate from a desire to procure a maintenance, or in consequence of a quarrel, without partition of a hereditary Wuttun, his descendants after 100 years may claim their share in such hereditary Wuttun, first paying their quota of Nuzzurs exacted thereon in the interval, P.

Case proposed.—A father and son divide property; two other sons are afterwards born in the father's house, when he

the three brothers make partition. Answer. After deducting for the expenses of Marriage, Moonj, and other ceremonies from the moveables, the two sons in the house share equally the remainder; although the eldest son may have been in the habit of visiting the family, and must perform his father's Krecā, he does not share, after having taken his share before; and if he before took so large a share as one-half of the hereditary descended Wuttun, a new partition is made, in three equal shares. The father may appoint his two younger sons (to the exclusion of the first) Heirs to a Wuttun or Enam acquired by himself, before three or four witnesses in writing, in default of which appointment the three share equally. Whatever property each of the brothers may have acquired, it is not shared by the other, P.

In a Panchayet held under Ramsastree's superintendence, Fuslee 1187, the father of plaintiff had by his own exertions obtained an Enam grant; some of the papers however bearing his brother's name, and he having given to one brother one of his acquired villages, it was held just that he should assign an equivalent to defendant, son of the other brother. The two brothers had reserved on a partition the share of plaintiff's father; another village was assigned to plaintiff's mother for her maintenance during life.

Farikhuts of partition frequently contain arrangements for the set-off of debts of account, houses and other property being in consequence unequally divided. From the constant partitions among co-Heirs, houses &c. become subdivided, so as to render pecuniary arrangements necessary for mutual convenience between the sharers. Wells, if not assigned to individuals, are shared in due proportion by specifying the number of pruhurs per diem during which such party is allowed to draw water, (Nuggur Panchayet No. 7). Sunnuds remain in the possession of the elder of the family, with liberty of inspection to the rest when necessary; copies only with the rest (Do. No. 29).

In a Nuggur Punchayet Case (No. 13) in which the parties were Koonbees, before a Punch of two Patells and three Koolkurnees, it appeared that the elder (Mokuddum of a Patell's Wuttun) had unfairly divided the patrimony with his two younger brothers, giving them $82\frac{1}{2}$ begahs of Meeras land instead of $22\frac{1}{2}$ begahs of Wuttun. In compensation it was determined that the former should not in future receive from the latter his Goegree on the land so given, nor his dues of Sooparce and cocoanuts on Marriages in their houses, nor his roosums on goods coming to them from other places.

In a decision under Ramsastree, Fuslee 1169, two cousins signed a Sunto-shputr or amicable compromise, in which it is stated that the elder (as his father had done before him) held the Burè-puna while he with his younger cousin were in community, but that on account of the expenses consequent on the residence of one party at a distance, they had separated, taking equal shares.

Form of a Discharge of all demands given by one brother to another on the occasion of a separation and division of property, (S.)

I and my revered elder brother Ramjee and my esteemed younger brother Sudasheo, being all full brothers, have up to this period lived together as one family. It has now appeared desirable that each should take his share and separate. Accordingly of the property which descended to us from our forefathers, and of that which has since been realized, the following share has come to me.

1. In the Pergunna of Wace the sixth portion of the perquisites of the Despandeship belongs to our family; whatever balance of these perquisites remain after paying the necessary expenses shall be equally shared between us three. The duties of the office and the management of the concern shall be conducted by our elder brother Ramjee.

2. The office and perquisites of Koolkurnee of the villages of Balgaum, Pimpulgaum and Chinchore, also belong to our family, family, the duties of which and the management of the concerns of which we entrust to our elder brother Ramjee, reserving to ourselves the right of exercising the said duties and realizing the perquisites of the said office annually in succession.

3. In the village of Balgaum is a piece of Enam land, measuring one chowhr belonging to our family, of this one-third share has been transferred to me in proprietary right.

4. The house belonging to our late father at Wace shall be made over to our younger brother Sudasheo, and the house in Balgaum shall be occupied half by me, and half by my elder brother Ramjee.

5. The bipeds, quadrupeds, specie, grain, jewels, clothes, ornaments, house, furniture &c. &c. have been equally divided in shares, of which I have received my proportion.

6. Of the money due to the family, I am to receive my share when the debts are realized.

7. Of the sums due, I agree to pay according to the share which I have received.

8. There is Luxmy, the widow of our late brother Curesh, whom we are all bound to support by turns, if she chooses to live with us; if not, and she wishes for a separate establishment, she shall receive one hundred rupees annually from each of us. If she wishes to go on a pilgrimage to Benares, she shall receive five hundred rupees from us, of which I agree to pay my share.

9. Our late father having dedicated a Temple to Sree Vishnoo in Wace, at the anniversary of which he expended one hundred rupees, I agree to pay my share annually for the performance of this ceremony.

10. The Household Gods have been as usual left in the possession of our elder brother Ramjee. According to the above I have received my share, and am satisfied. I am therefore henceforward separated from my other brothers, and I have no further demands on them of any description, for which purpose I have given this paper of acquittance.

64. In case of fraudulent concealment, or accidental discovery of concealment of property at the period of partition, the parties aggrieved would be entitled to a new partition, or to such adjustment of the former one as may effect a bonâ fide fair division of the property on the principles above detailed.

65. Modifications of the rule of equal division are not uncommon, though varying in particular cases. See paragraph 71. The partition of houses, and of the right to take water from wells and tanks, is usually laid down with great nicety. It is customary also for parties to retain possession of articles which they have hitherto used, arranging an equivalent.

Impartible

66. Sons or brothers who may after separating from their relations acquire property, individually retain it; nor do sons re-share their divided property on the subsequent death of their father. The partition solely refers to the patrimony, or to their own common property, P. N. So a Zemendare Wattan, acquired by a man's individual exertions, after his separation from his family, and without assistance from them or connection with them, is divided among his sons or their representatives in equal shares. It may however happen (as stated in paragraph 63) that the descendants of one brother living separately without a partition, may even after the lapse of 100 years claim their share of a hereditary family Wattan, on payment of their quota of charges on the property during that period, P.

Separate title by partition.

INHERITANCE.

INHERITANCE.

67. Insanity is a ground of exclusion only while the party remains unmarried, 72 C. P. The wife or relations may manage the share or Wuttun proceeds of an insane or blind person (Brahmins,) 13 C. P. But if without understanding, and having no wife or children, he is entitled to maintenance only. Blind persons if married and having a family may take their shares, 83 C. P., their relations managing for them. 2 C. only state that they are excluded from inheritance. Lame or deformed persons are not excluded 1 C. P., nor are the deaf and dumb, K. Impotence is not a cause of exclusion, 37 C. P. Such a man sometimes receives a maintenance only, 36 C. P., or presents, 4 C. P. If possessing understanding, his relations may manage his share, 6 C. P. Hermaphrodites are excluded from Caste and inheritance, K.

On loss of Caste the delinquent is generally re-admitted on paying fine, when he is not debarred from his share of property, 39 C. P. Or his family are not excluded with him, in which case they would receive it, 35 C. P. His relations manage the property for the benefit of his family, 10 C. P. But a permanently excluded person would receive no share, 12 C. P.

No such cause of exclusion is recognized, 2 C. P. M. An insane or other person incapable of managing his own affairs cannot be debarred from his right of inheritance, K. If married, such persons would receive their share; if not, according to circumstances, 12 C. P.

A father has not the power of debarring his son from inheritance, 76 C. P.; though he may limit the amount of property enjoyed by him during life, 16 C. P. A father can prevent a son's enjoying hereditary property during his own life, (16 C. P.) and may deprive him of a part of his inheritance (K.) but not of the whole, (P. K.)

On the father's incapacity, the son becomes manager. See Antea, 52 C. P. All persons, except the Sovereign, can prevent their son from inheriting the whole, but a father cannot deprive his son of a share in a future partition, K. Two Castes stated that a father may prevent his son's inheriting his property, P.

The only case in which an heir is deprived of his rights is that of a successor to a religious office entirely losing Caste by change of religion. In which case, though he would not be excluded from inheriting moveables and immoveables, and offices of a public nature, he could not enjoy the emoluments, nor (like a female incumbent) appoint a Goomashta to perform the duties, of such religious office, S.

A man entirely losing Caste by changing his religion from motives of avarice, has no right to share in the partition of family property, unless he did so in return for a grant to the whole family of a Wuttun &c, when he would be allowed a share. If the change of religion were operated by force, the relations might at their option reserve to the party a maintenance, P.

68. On the death of a man, whether separate or in community, the duty of performing his funeral, and subsequently the monthly and annual ceremonies of purification for the dead, devolves on his heir. In default of his eldest son, the youngest son should perform the funeral; 3, brother; 4, brother's son; 5, any heir, as the sister's son, or Sugotr, P. M. Should the son not be on the spot, the nearest relation present may perform Kreea. The Supindu should be performed within the year, if possible, and on the spot where the father died, and only by the son, or the relation who performed the Kreea, S. Should the party be disabled by sickness he may appoint a sister's or daughter's son of the deceased, to perform the ceremonies in his stead, 1 C. P. The eldest son defrays the expenses of the Kreea out of the common property, or if after partition, he performs the ceremonies at his own charges. The others would contribute contribute to the expence at his requisition. All might perform the monthly and annual ceremonies at their separate charges, if after partition, as other religious ceremonies, P.

An heiress is subject to the same rules, but she appoints a relation or Dhurmpootr* to be the actual performer of the ceremony, P. K. S.

The non-performance of Kreea, Sraddh and Sootuk, does not affect the party's right to inherit, only his religious purity, P. S. M. Nor does the actual performer (as a Purgotr, 45 C. P.) become thereby entitled to a share, but merely receives a present as hire, P. S. If not the heir, such performer is punishable, after being ordered to desist, S. The Kreea is usually performed by the Josce's orders, the expence varying with the amount of property, S. K. An entertainment to the Caste is usual, 55 C. P. If the deceased left no property, from five to ten rupees only are expended (K.) the rites being performed by a Dhurmpootr, appointed by the Caste. After paying the deceased's debts and providing for an entertainment to the Caste, the remainder is given away in charity, in the event of a man dying with distant relations only, 3 C. P. In this case, or on the refusal of the next heir to perform a man's Kreea, he may give his property to another on condition of his performing the ceremonies, and the survivors cannot dispossess such conditional heir, 3 C. P. A Wuttun service is often given to a stranger if there are no near heirs. The distant relations then perform the rites for their own purification, 1 C. P. and to insure the supposed happiness of the deceased in another state of existence, P. S. Hence if the individual whose duty it is to perform the rites refuse, he is subjected to fine before readmittance to Caste privileges (45 C. P. K.); without being precluded from receiving the property, (38 C. P.) The Kreea is however performed at his charges, 3 C. P. His share may be given to his son, Brahmuns, 2 C. P. The Sirkar may have the Kreea performed out of the attached proceeds of the descendant's estate.

Among Marwarrees, the Oswal and Surawugee sects do not perform Kreea.

Heirs are bound to comply with requests of the deceased as to his funeral (S) ; if consistent with Caste Custom, K.

Among Brahmuns, children who have not yet got their teeth, (P.) or who are under two years of age (K.) are buried. Sunyasees are sunk in water or buried (S.) They are buried in salt after the brain has been extracted, P. All other Brahmuns are burnt. Bunyas and other Castes sometimes bury their dead, but burning is preferred by many. Bhils, Mhars, Mangs &c. always bury, K. Jyns bury for the 1st year, then burn the bones, S.

The Kreea of a purchased dancing-girl, if not performed by the son or daughter of the family, is performed by the Caste, P.

Under the Native Government it was customary to levy Nuzzurs of indefinite and discretionary amount (averaging 52 per Cent on the annual value of the estate and varying from 2 to 182 per Cent) from Jagcerdars, on direct and collateral succession to their estates, on partitions, alienations, and adoptions ; as well as fines for neglect, contumacy, and disaffected conduct. The Sirkar's grants in Surinjam and Jagcer were held under a less certain tenure than Enams, still less than Wut-tuns, being liable to conditions of furnishing Military aid, either specified or unlimited, and not, unless under special grant, hereditary. Nuzzurs were not levied on succession to Enams, only on alienations by sale, to the amount of one year's value of the estate. The Zat Surinjam often yielded a few rupees only annually. The Fouj Surinjamdars levied small Nuzzurs from their dependants. Sahookars and Mahajuns also paid Nuzzurs. It is the only direct mode in which these opulent classes paid taxes, and it had a good effect in checking partition.

partition. Nuzzurs to the amount of 50 per Cent on the annual value of the estate were levied on Zumeendarees and village offices descending to collateral heirs, not in direct succession unless the estate were a large Sumusthan similar to a Jageer. On adoptions by widows and redemption of heirless shares, Nuzzurs of 125 per Cent were sometimes levied.

P.) 20 years (Sonars, 8 C. P.) or 25 years (Purbhoo, 8 C. P.) have elapsed without receiving intelligence of an absentee, his Kreea may be performed and his property shared &c.

71. After a man has separated from his father or brothers, his property on his death is shared by his sons, in equal shares, provided they prefer a partition to living in community, 89 C. P. The eldest son has some privileges (mentioned in Parentage), but so far as regards property, his chief advantage consists in a right to become manager, unless incapable of the trust.

The law of primogeniture prevails in some families of Sattara both as to real and personal property. These are, the Bhonslas of the house of Sattara, the Chowhans of Duflapoor, the Nimbal-kurs of Phultun, and others, S.

Among Desmookhee Wuttundars, in some places the eldest in like manner takes the whole property, giving to his brothers and relations villages, shares of villages, Huks or Nemnooks for their subsistence. In others the eldest reserves to himself a larger share, with the privileges of Burepuna and Karbharee or management, giving the rest a smaller share each. In others the eldest merely takes the management and Burepuna privileges, all sharing the property equally, P.

Among Despandhe Wuttundars, one custom is for the eldest to take the Dufur, Burepuna, and a larger share or even the whole property; another for all to share equally, the eldest being manager; another for the eldest to take the Burepuna only, the Dufur and Wuttun being held by all in turns, year by year, P.

Among Patells, the eldest in some places holds the title of Mokuddim, the Enam land attached to the Wuttun, the Huk, Lowazimah, the Pasoree field, Naonagur, and other Man-pan—the younger sons taking equal shares with him of the Meeras land, houses and other property. In other places the relations share equally the Enam land; in others, the Huks also; and in a few the Pasoree field also. In some villages, should the eldest be unfit to manage the office, the most intelligent of his relations would take that duty, receiving occasionally shares in Huks, P.

Among Koolkurnees, the usual practice is for the relations to perform service and enjoy the salary, land, or hüks attached to the office, year by year, in turns. In some places the land only, in others the hüks also, are shared by the relations equally; and if the eldest is incapable of management, he may appoint a Goomashta; or one of the relations acts as his substitute, receiving one-half his dues, P.

Equal partition is usual among Enamdars, P. In regard to hereditary offices, it is customary in some families to give the elder one-fifth of the property with the Sikka and Dustkhut, or the elder as manager takes the whole, providing for the rest of the family, the marriage of the girls &c. Moveables being shared equally, S.

There is no difference as to inheritance between the half or whole blood, natural, or adopted sons, or posthumous children, children, S. or children born before or after a partition, D. If a man die leaving three sons by an elder wife, and two by a younger, the five sons would take equally, 23 C. P. But 6 C. P. and Wys D. state that the three would divide one-half and the two the remainder. See Case, in Partition. 2. C. P. qualify this answer by the condition "should the mother be living at the time," and generally, a son separating from his father loses advantages in inheritance, even should the father not exercise his right to make unequal distribution.

72. On the death of a man without sons leaving a widow and daughters—

A Wuttun is inherited by the brothers of the deceased, providing out of its proceeds for the maintenance of the females and the marriage of the daughters, and performing the Wuttun service and the deceased's Kreea, Brahmuns P. In the mun and Būnya Castes the widow succeeds to the personal property, K. The widow receives a fixed maintenance while living virtuously, and may adopt in order to preserve the Wuttun hereditary, 1 C. P; she is entitled to her personal jewels; and may even take a share if her husband's property were not extensive, Ugurwale P.

A Zumeendaree Wuttun may be enjoyed by the widow for her life, but she has not the power of alienating it, unless her subsistence is not provided for by the relations. Should she not adopt a son (which is generally allowed) the deceased's next heirs take the property at her death, otherwise the adoptee. The widow is at liberty to give her jewels &c. to her daughters, P.

The widow succeeds to the Wuttun, or the partitioned share of it belonging to the deceased, providing for the marriage of daughters, and performing her husband's Kreea through a Dhurmpootr or adoptee, 20 C. P. She can only make gifts to a small amount without the consent of the next heirs. She has no right to alienate a Wuttun, but should appoint a Goomashta or agent, as, one of her husband's brothers, 1 C. P. for its management, and to perform the service attached, receiving her maintenance from him, K. On her death, it reverts (if no adoptee) to her husband's brothers, parents, cousins, or Sugotrus; in default, to her own brother or cousins; in default, to her husband's Gooroo; in default, to the Sirkar, or if a Brahmun, to his Caste, K.

Widows of Enamdars are at liberty to give to their daughters or in charity part of her husband's share. Where the Enam revenues are still enjoyed in common, the consent of the relations is necessary to such gift. Widows may also adopt, with the consent of the representatives of the granters of the Enam, P.

A widow becoming a Suttee, without children, may give away all her husband's property, K.

The widow succeeds to the personal property, with power of disposal of it during her life, 60 C. P. K. M. Out of it may give presents to her daughters, and provide for theirriage expenses, 3 C. P. She may give what she pleases to her daughters, even a house, Purbhoo P. Or she may adopt, except in 2 C. P. And her jewels descend to her daughters, P.

Two widows will be joint heiresses to their husband's property; but no widow can insist on a provision in case the husband has willed away all his property, K.

On the death of a childless widow the relations generally meet and appoint an heir to her property, K.

The widow's enjoyment of property is conditional on her living virtuously. In a case decided by Ramsastree in Fuslee 1175, a separation of property had taken place between two brothers, after which the elder died, leaving a widow. After his funeral the younger carried off all the property from the house, and the widow went to Benares. It was decided that the brother should pay the widow the whole of her late husband's property, after deducting the funeral expenses defrayed by him. It seems the parties were Brahmuns—the deceased left no children.

In a Nuggur Punchayet Case, (No. 110) in which the parties were Koonbees (Patells) and the Punch consisted of Brahmuns, a widow had resided for several years with her daughter and son-in-law, and before her death had given several presents to her daughter. These were allowed; but all her remaining property was assigned to her son.

Case proposed—A man dies, leaving in his house two widows, with two daughters by the elder, and two sons by the younger. After deducting future marriage expenses, the sons share their father's property equally; should he before his death have desired them to give their elder sisters any thing, they will fulfil his wishes. The two widows keep their jewels for life, should they prefer living separately (though in this case the younger would in general prefer living with her sons) the sons assign them a Nemnook, i. e. monthly or annual pension for their expenses of food, food, clothing, alms &c. They are at liberty to give during their lives their jewels &c. for charitable or other purposes, and what remains at the death of the elder, is shared by her two daughters: of the younger, by her two sons, P.

In a Khandesh Panchayet Case (No. 6.) the gift of Money by a woman (though by Dan-Putr) to her son-in law on his marriage with her daughter was declared improper; but “as some consideration should be paid to the deed in the grantee’s favour,” the Panch decided that the money should be divided between the sons-in-law and the woman’s husband’s brother, and clothes, metal utensils &c. left at her death should be made over to the latter as her heir, K.

73. On the death of a man with out sons or widow, whether before or after partition, leaving a daughter ;—

The brothers of the deceased succeed to his property, providing for the daughter’s marriage expenses, P. The daughter has a right only to such property (moveables) as may have been given her by her father or paternal uncle, P. The brothers may give presents of moveables to a grown up sister, 12 C. P. The daughter has a right to have her marriage expenses defrayed, even out of the real property; after deducting which, the whole property goes to her father’s brothers, parents &c. in order of succession, K.

Should there be no near male relation, a distant relation performing the deceased’s Kreea might share with the daughter; in default of whom, the daughter would take the whole (or daughters in equal shares), paying a substitute to perform their father’s Kreea, either their son, or some other not their husband, P.

His father will succeed to his property in preference to his brothers, 43 C. P. His father and brothers will divide his property, (3 C. P.) equally (Purbhoo, P.) the father receiving a larger larger share, (2 C. P.) His brothers will succeed in preference to his father, 50 C. P. Either in different cases, 2, C. P. If no near male relation exist, the sisters of the deceased would share his property with a distant relation performing the Kreea, P.

In a dispute between two Kasars, before a Punchayet of five Koonbees, (N. No. 35) it was decided on the evidence of the Patell and Barakaroo of the village that neither party was entitled to the Meeras land claimed, on the plea that one-half was directly descended, and one-half the property of an uncle who had died heirless; but as both appeared to be descended in equal degree (three generations) from the great grandfather, and as all other relations had fled the village, they were pronounced to be entitled each to an equal share.

It is understood that the law of the Sastra forms the basis of the rules of Inheritance among the higher Castes, but the strictness of its rules is often infringed by Native Arbitrators, in favour of parties connected with the deceased by ties of mutual assistance and long association, to the prejudice of nearer relations in the prescribed order, who may have deserted their kindred or be otherwise provided for.

His Caste will take charge of his property, and after paying his Kreea and charitable expenses in his name, will expend the remainder in an entertainment to the Caste, 32 C. P. K. S. And after paying his debts, 4 C. P. the Headman of his Caste will appoint a successor to his village Wuttun, or obtain the Sirkar's confirmation of the appropriation, 5 C. P. Patell's Wuttuns go to the Desmookh, Koolkurnees' to the Despandhe.

The Sirkar will succeed after the Kreea and debts of the deceased have been provided for, 42 C. P. Enamdars P. Provided the property were sufficiently extensive, 1 C. P. The deceased's house should be given to a Caste-man, K. 2, 3. But the Sirkar cannot succeed while any relation of the deceased can be found, Brahmuns P. And an entertainment to the Caste should be provided for, 3 C. P.

If the deceased left no bequests, after his funeral, half of his property, with the exception of village Wuttuns, should be taken by the Sirkar, and half by his Caste for religious expenses, K. Annual stipends revert to Government, S.

Heirless property goes to the Gouroo, 3 C. P. To the goddess Suptusing, 1 C. P.

Dewasthan property never reverts to Government as (Nirwans) heirless, P.

In an investigation into the proprietorship of a Tikan by order of Ramsastree in Fuslee 1185, it was decided by him that for a series of years it had been possessed sometimes by one party, sometimes by the other, generally by persons unconnected with either, and belonged to the Sirkar : he therefore took a Nuzzur of Rupees 250 from the Plaintiff, and gave him a Meerasputr for the future right of occupancy, copies of which were given to the Soobah of the district, to the Zumeendars, to the village, and to the plaintiff.

Lands given in Enam on failure of heirs revert to the grantor, whether Government, or an individual Jageerdar &c. K.

share ; a man cannot, while in common, alienate such property, even to his son, to the exclusion of other relations being heirs, K. Such a grant would only hold good during the grantor's life, and for his own share, 20 C. P. A Wuttun, or a share of it, can only be transferred to one of the relations, Brahmans 3 C. P. The relations have the right of pre-emption, K. and may appoint Co-mishnas to perform the duties, K. S. Should there be no son, the other relations would not consent to alienate a Wuttun ; an Enam field, or a house acquired by the party, might be given away with the relation's consent, Ugurwale P. Acquired Wuttuns and religious services, being personal grants (K), not rendered hereditary, nor hereditary in the family from which it was purchased, but granted by Government on condition of personal services (S.) may be alienated at the pleasure of the acquirer, K. S.

Grants to a temple, enjoyed by a Poojaree performing religious services, are not alienable by him without the consent of Government, K. An old incumbent, however, having no son, and being himself incapable from age or infirmity of performing the duties, may, unless the heir protest at the time, alienate for ever his right to receive dues or proceeds of land, subject to the performance of the customary religious services by the new acquirer, S. K.

Grants of descended property must to be effective have the consent of all the relations. The father's Danputr, attested by the heirs, is essential to gifts of immoveable property generally, as a hereditary Wuttun or land, P. There are instances of gift or will of Wuttun services (as a Patellship) where no near heir was on the spot, S.

The custom of Wills is not general in the Dekhun, K. S. As bequests are generally disputed, gifts are usually made during a man's life, S. Verbal and written wills are however valid, if made with the attestation of three or four relations, heirs, and several of the Caste, K. Houses, and other bequests, if made verbally verbally in presence of the heirs, or if they are not present before creditable witnesses, are fulfilled by the heirs, Purbhoo 6 C. P. Without an attested Danputr the grant would hold good only during the grantor's life, 2 C. P. A man may give property according to his circumstances by an attested Khut, 3 C. P. A will properly attested would hold good in favor of one yet unborn, K.

In gifts of Moveables, the consent of the immediate heir is sufficient, K. A son is bound to attend to his father's expressed wishes, 6 C. P. It is his duty to fulfil verbal bequests of Moveables, though no compulsory measures are adopted to compel his performance, 2 C. P. A refusal would subject him to reprimand and even exclusion by the Caste, 6 C. P. A son is bound to fulfil his father's bequests, but not to the extent of alienating his whole property, M.

Nuncupative bequests of Moveables to children, relations, or attendants are sometimes made on a death-bed, S. The amount of property directed by law to go to each relation may be varied at the testator's pleasure, K. Heirs have no right to object to gifts of Moveables, Purbhoo P.

After a man's death, should any one claim a bequest not known by the heirs to have been made by the deceased at the time, they are not bound to fulfil it, 73. C. P. Even a son is not bound to fulfil bequests of money, if he were grown up and his father had not made them with his concurrence, 4 C. P. The claimant must produce the father's Danputr, Sonars K. P.

A Punchayet of relations has authority to settle the distribution of the deceased's property, should his will be unattested, or its validity disputed, K. A Punchayet would set aside wills made contrary to Sástru and custom, alienating descended or immoveable property to the prejudice of the heirs. Even if a large portion of Moveables acquired were given to a friend or companion, not a relation, a part of such property would be demanded and probably received by the heirs on a Punchayet, S.

Verbal

Verbal directions are common previously to a man's death respecting living in community, the widow's provision, maintenance of helpless children, funeral and charitable expenses, and the management of the property; which are usually fulfilled by the heirs, P.

Wills made by women verbally or in writing before several respectable witnesses, are obligatory on the heirs, so far as their own property, given or settled on them at marriage—Jewels given to favorite wives are kept by them, K. See Widowhood and Inheritance.

The attestation of relations is in like manner necessary to a Gahun-putr of all property pledged, if the pledger is in community; and of immoveable property and houses, after partition, P. The Khut should be written by the Koolkurnee, (17 C. P.) and attested by the Village and District Wultundars, 20 C. P. The attestation of strangers is sufficient to a pledge of moveables, 4 C. P. Annual stipends can only be pledged during the life of the stipendiary; other property cannot be touched by the heirs until the original debt is liquidated, S.

accusations of these crimes, but in documents the presumption is in favour of truth. So also a Khot-puti* given by a party convicted of wrong or falsehood before a Panchayet, is to be believed in spite of his assertion that it was extorted. On the other hand, should a dependant of a powerful chief produce a deed of purchase as evidence of his just title to a Watan violently seized, or a receipt in proof of his having discharged a debt, should there be no collateral evidence by accounts &c. the documents on alleged extortion are not to be trusted as evidence. The same remark applies—to a Khot-puti extorted by a relation of such powerful dependant from his opponent in a civil dispute, which would not be held good evidence unless corroborated by other oral, written, or circumstantial evidence—to a Tumsook or receipt given on the faith of the grantee's paying money, which he afterwards failing to do, nevertheless insists on the validity of the documents thus fraudulently extorted—and to Tumsooks and acknowledgments of the correctness of accounts either signed by a Gomashita, or to which the Gomashita had obtained his principal's signature; such signature being fraudulent on the part of the Gomashita, and the principal being young or insane, or unable to attend to the whole matter, and the Gomashita therefore vested with general trust; in this case the principal, on subsequently investigating into the facts, will be entitled to call the Gomashita to account for any fraud or deficit, but has no claim on a 3d party, unless he is an accomplice with the fraudulent Gomashita. The following case has happened—several associates agree to share the profit in certain proportions of a Moamlutdarship formed from the Government, and one of them is appointed manager from an opinion of his trustworthiness. Should he afterwards attempt to defraud the children of a deceased partner, arbitrators would decide on an examination of general evidence. A Tumsook without collateral proof would not be of itself sufficient evidence to enforce payment of money, the party against whom the claim is made asserting that the money had been repaid, and that the bond had not been returned owing to delay and fraud on the part of the present holder ; especially if the original parties to the loan are dead, and the dispute exists between their descendants. A Tumsook is sometimes written, and after the expiration of some months the debtor gives the Sahookar another Tumsook for the accumulated principal and interest without having the former returned to him.

A Tumsook for payment of money, or deed of pledge of a Wattun accepted by a Sahookar from a young member of a family, who is not of full age nor has the management of the family property, would not be acted on, and be declared null on an investigation. Advances made to a wife without the consent of her husband, being of sane mind, cannot be claimed of him by the Sahookar, and any bond signed by the wife would be annulled, but documents signed by a wife of full age, and manager of a family (her husband being insane or unfit to conduct his own affairs) would be valid. Documents signed by a young widow, or by her with consent of her young son, would be invalid, the consent of the manager (whether a relation, a trustee appointed by arbitrators, or a trustworthy Gomashita, often, in large families, a hereditary office) being essential to such contract. Documents written by a person under the influence of Bhung, opium, or intoxicating drugs or liquor, would not be held valid.

provided the loss in the way stated is proved, or the depositor agrees to give the amount, on future proof of his having appropriated the goods. Should the depositor's property be confiscated by his Government for crimes, he is bound to reimburse the owner, regard nevertheless being paid to his means of doing so. The depositor is not reimbursed in case of his goods being proved to have been plundered in a gang robbery (Dhurora) ; nor in case of proof of their having been destroyed by fire while in the depositor's house ; in failure of proof the depositor is responsible.

Where the depositor's own goods have been accidentally destroyed or plundered and the depositor's preserved, it is usual for the latter to make the former a present in acknowledgment of his fidelity or exert himself in lessening the calamity, if induced by plunder or confiscation, by obtaining the restoration of a part.

Should he otherwise make use of them on his own account, he is bound to repay the depositor with interest, P. Should the depositor's house be destroyed by fire, he will be bound to reimburse the owner, but if poor, he may be allowed to do so by instalments should the money be lost by theft in the house, he will be bound to reimburse the owner, but without interest. The case is otherwise in regard to Rajkrant, or Durora. The deposit having been made in cash when the Sahookar pays interest, must be reimbursed by him if stolen, K. So also jewels deposited and entered in the Wullee on interest by Jageerdars or rich owners, K. See Deposits with Sahookars.

If their value is not stated in the list, the articles are to be appraised. Bullocks, Horses, and Mares, Camels, or Buffaloes may be placed in charge of another, the latter feeding the animals, and putting moderate loads on them. Should they die on the road from disease or accidentally lose their road and fall into a well &c. or be seized by gang robbery or armed violence, on proof of the fact the owner need not be reimbursed (K). Should however the person in charge have immoderately loaded them, or given them insufficient provender, or marched them too far, and the animals have died in consequence, he must pay their value, unless such excessive march was made to avoid plunder &c. Where carelessness is proved the loss should be divided, D. Separate agreements are usually passed relative to mares in foal, cows &c. Such person in charge should pay the owner a part of any large sum he may collect by letting the animals to hire. The money received from the Sirkar on account of horses for Sowars in public pay, after deducting all expenses of feed, is to be given to the owner. The owner should be reimbursed damages resulting from harsh treatment of the animal while let in hire by the person in charge, or the hire will be stopped (D.) Sheep and goats are left in charge during the owner's absence: if the person in charge cannot prove his assertion of their death &c. (having unwarrantably sold or ate the animals) he must reimburse the owner, P.

The young animals produced during the period of their remaining in charge and the milk and other proceeds are generally divided, (by sharing the quantity or alternately milking) between the owner and the Deposittee, or taken as an offset to charges of maintenance according to agreement, D.

Persons of great respectability would not demand compensation for injuries to their animals while lent or put in charge: inferior people would obtain their full value, especially if neglect or wilful injury is proved.

Should the person in charge of property for a time certain, be unable to restore it on demand by the owner after that time, from loss by fire, Rajkrant &c., he is excused,—being of course responsible if fraudulent retention is afterwards proved against him. The same remark applies to unavoidable losses pending an agreement, after the demand of the owner to restore the property in a short time certain. But should the time expire without restoration, the person in charge must reimburse the owner all damages accruing after the period from any cause whatever. Money in cash, animals, land and houses, if placed in charge on an agreement to allow them to remain so for a time certain, cannot be demanded by the owner within that time; jewels and clothes may be demanded by the owner on occasion of a wedding in his house &c. though within the time. Money too may be given back for a necessary cause, but if the owner have promised a certain sum per mensem as for the care taken of the property, such sum must be paid.

81. In the pledge of land, gardens, houses, animals male and female, slaves, and carriages, it is understood that the pledgee is to make use of the property, and enjoy its produce or proportion thereof, or produce of labour. Shawls, cotton cloths and silks are usually, if in any quantity, pledged in a packed state; if few in number, by special agreement, the articles may be worn. Jewels pledged are not worn by the pledgee, nor metal pots, nor weapons, but are merely kept as security, (P.) and are not saleable without the owner's consent, nor so long as interest is regularly paid, S. Except money, corn is the only article on the loan of which interest is regularly calculated, as where a ryot receives for seed or seed a quantity of grain promising to give a larger quantity of other grain yet unripe when cut (Moobadila), the quantity of the 2d varying from 25 to 100 per cent on the 1st (Suwace, Deerhee, Donce.) But interest on the money loan varies according to the pledge, viz. Security.

If there is a probability of repayment of the money within a week or a fortnight, it is usual to advance large sums on pledges of smaller value. If within a year, the pledge is generally 25 per cent higher in value than the loan.

A house may be pledged with an agreement that the owner should pay an annual sum towards the repairs: on his failing to do so, and the house being destroyed by the rains, the pledgee is not responsible. The latter is bound to rebuild the house and reinstate it, if so destroyed by the rains subsequently to the owner's having sent the money, the pledgee appropriating the same. A house may be pledged with an agreement that the pledgee should make the necessary repairs and that the owner should should be charged with the expence whenever he should settle the debt: if the pledgee should fail to repair the house, and in two or three years it should fall down, he is bound to pay the expenses of reinstating it. But after the period for settling the original debt has expired for several years, the pledgee is no longer so bound.

If the owner has agreed to repair the house and pay the Government tax (Puttee), should he from absence or other cause avoid doing so, the Sahookar (pledgee) will pay the money and charge it accordingly in his account, with interest. The Sahookar will be responsible if he does not make necessary repairs to a small amount: as to heavy expenses he should write to the owner and act accordingly: he is not responsible if the repairs absolutely necessary would involve a great expence, nor is he obliged to incur a heavy charge, even if directed by the owner to do so, on promise to allow the charge in settling the account, if inconvenient. In case of a house being burnt down, the loss would fall on the owner: enquiry might be made on suspicion of its having been wilfully or maliciously set on fire.

Hoondabhara is where a house is pledged as security for a debt, the rent of which is supposed to equal the annual interest, when no account is necessary. On the repayment of the principal, the house is given up to the owner. In such cases it is usual for the owner to agree to make the repairs.

ra.

In case of agreement that the pledgee should live in the house, paying no rent, and the owner be charged with no interest on the money lent him by the pledgee, repairs to a moderate extent (as 10 rupees) may be defrayed by the latter, and if the house should fall through his not doing so, he is responsible. The charges of rebuilding walls and other heavy expenses are paid by the owner.

A Gabunputr is not always taken in small pledges, for which an entry in the Wuhee is sufficient. The former contains a description of the property pledged, the amount of the debt, the rate of interest, and the period of repayment ; concluding (if a house) with a special agreement as to the rate of hire, the amount to be annually devoted to paying off the debt, the charge of repairs &c. It is signed and witnessed by neighbours and written by the Koolkurnee. Private contracts of mortgage are also entered into.

Animals.

Property pledged with an agreement to take great care of it, if destroyed by neglect of the pledgee, must be restored in value to the owner. If pledged property is proved to have been lost by gang robbery, by fire, by flood, or by military violence, (unless under special agreement) it is not restored in value. Property proved to have been lost by thieves is to be restored by the Sahookar (presuming negligence), K. If a slave dies from disease, his or her value is not restored, if from bad food given by the pledgee, he is responsible—animals not provided with proper food or medicine and dying in consequence, are to be restored in value. Camels, horses, bullocks overloaded, and thence injured, are to be restored in value, unless in order to escape plunder &c. Animals accidentally killed by tigers, falling into wells, or plundered, or dying by disease, are not restored in value. The pledgee hires out pledged cattle at his own risk and reimburses himself for their keep, S. Cattle are seldom pledged or at least remain in the owner's possession, K. So also horses, K. The pledgee is bound to make up to the owner of a garden pledged the injury to trees from not giving them sufficient water, or cutting them down, not if they accidentally die. If jewels worn by the pledgee or his dependants, or let out to hire by them, are lost, the owner is to be reimbursed, according to the value fixed in the yad of agreement at the time of pledge. Shawls being benefited by wearing, the owner is not reimbursed on account of their becoming dirty, if burnt or torn through the wearer's carelessness they are to be replaced ; not if eaten by worms or rats. There may be special agreement in these cases, P. Cloth and grain damageable by delay would be generally generally sold by the pledgee, or the pledger must bear the loss, S. Money taken from a sealed bag is to be returned principal and interest, D. Women are not generally pledged: if made to work contrary to agreement, the pledgee is debited with hire, D. The pledge of women or slaves is unusual, K.

Women.

In the pledge of swords, guns and other weapons, the Sahookar is not responsible if they are damaged from neglect to rub them with oil &c. from time to time, P.

The use of bullocks or carts is generally a sufficient offset to interest. If the pledgee feed the cattle, he is not responsible for damage incurred during ordinary work: if the debtor feed them and pay interest, the pledgee must pay hire, and be responsible for damages not accidental, D.

Carts
bullocks.

In the pledge of horses and animals, it is usual to fix a valuation and write it down at the time of payment. It is generally agreed that the Sahookars should be at the charges of feeding and tending the animal for three or four months, and be reimbursed by the owner at the time of settling the debt. If during this period the animal die a natural death, or run away, or be seized by military followers &c. the owner must reimburse the Sahookar according to the value specified, or give a new pledge to the amount. But should the Sahookar neglect to have the animal fed, he will be responsible to the owner for the loss. The animal may be sold when the charge of maintenance &c. exceeds the amount of the debt. If on sale his value should be diminished by natural disease, the owner is to reimburse the Sahookar; if from neglect of the latter, he is responsible to the owner.

Horses
animals.

In the pledge of Jewels or any other articles, should fraud or substitution be proved on the part of the owner he would be fined, and obliged to return the principal and interest, receiving back the article; if on the part of the Sahookar, the debt would not be recovered by him, and he would in addition be fined, P.

Jewels.

Books

Books wilfully destroyed while in pledge are generally restored in value or new ones written ; or the remuneration for keeping them is forfeited ; or the profit from the use of them is debited to the pledgee, D. Sahookars are answerable for damages to books while in pledge, K.

In case of Sugar pledged, a deficiency of one or two Seers is not reckoned on return ; if five or ten seers the Sahookar is answerable, K.

Moveables

Moveables are always taken away by the pledgee at the time of advancing the money.

to two.

Should immoveable property be mortgaged successively to two persons, and contrary to general custom the owner continue to enjoy the land, the latter is bound to settle the debts with both ; should he be absent or from poverty unable, the two mortgagees would possess and enjoy the land between them ; otherwise, the earliest mortgagee would enjoy the whole, even though his Gahanputr had not the Despandhy's, Koolkurnee's, and other usual attestations, it being proved that he had advanced the money, and that the owner could not at the time settle the debt. In the event however of one of the mortgagees holding the house in possession, and both having regularly attested Khutputrs, the party in possession retains the house without regard to priority of contract, and the other is left to claim repayment from his debtor by other means ; and this even should the owner be unable from poverty &c. to repay either. If however the first mortgagee [were unable to possess the house from being obliged to] go at a distant country, on his return he would be entitled to turn out a second mortgagee, and enjoy the house himself, especially if he had enjoyed the property for a long period before his departure, and the second had enjoyed it for a much shorter time, or both. Mortgagees may by agreement enjoy the property for equal successive periods.*

If the second pledgee is proved to have known of the former contract, contract, he must give up the article pledged to the first, on his demanding possession. So also if the 2d pledgee have been in possession long enough to have repaid himself his advance to the owner—if after the owner's death the first return from absence in a distant country, the latter is entitled to immediate possession, having made a large advance still remaining unsettled. In case of property pledged to one person verbally, and subsequently to another by regularly attested Deed, the latter is entitled to possession, P. Both pledgees would demand payment, K.

In case of the owner, after mortgaging immoveable property to one or two, selling it to a third person, with an agreement in the Khureedputr (Deed of Purchase) that he will answer any claims on the property, the purchaser pays the owner the purchase money; the mortgagees then putting in their claims, the purchaser is obliged to give up the property to them, and comes on the owner for repayment: Or, the deeds of mortgage and sale being regular, the owner repays his debts to the mortgagees out of the purchase money, and gives over possession of the property to the purchaser. In case of the owner having retained possession, or having spent the money advanced on the two mortgages, together with that received from the purchaser, and become unable to pay or having fled the country, the mortgagees and purchaser (neither having enjoyed the property) on comparing their Deeds sell the property and divide the proceeds in equitable proportion: Or, the owner having mortgaged his property to two persons without regularly attested Gahanputrs and afterwards sold it to another by a Khureedputr publicly attested by the villagers &c. the mortgagees cannot come on the purchaser after he has had possession for six months or a year, unless at the time of the sale they had given notice of their claims on the house to him—their debts would be considered simple contract debts. But if the mortgagee gave notice before a witness, the Khureedputr is void, and the purchaser comes on the owner for repayment.

manding settlement of a mortgage.

In case of the mortgage of immoveable property and its subsequent sale by the mortgagee to a third person ; after such purchaser has enjoyed the property upwards of 60 years, the original owner has no claim thereon, except he have frequently from time to time given notice of his right of ownership to the purchaser. In this case the latter is said to have the Suwedhbhogy or imperfect right of enjoyment, in contradistinction to the Nywedhbhogy held by a proprietor dejure. Arbitrators would restore the property in case of Suwedhbhogy to the original proprietor proving his title at any period, adjusting the claims (Torjor) by allowing interest on the purchase money, hire for the house &c. and cost of improvements.

Limits to time
maining in

It is not customary to allow property to remain in pledge for a long period, as for the life of the pledgee, or his descendants. If from poverty or absence of the owner the pledgee's descendants have continued in possession for several generations, they are bound to restore immoveable property to the pledger's representative on demand, it being proved that they have received repayment of twice the amount of the original advance (Dam Doput) from the property enjoyed. Should no demand be preferred for 100 years, the possessor becomes proprietor dejure. In the event of restoring property, the value of improvements made and buildings erected by the pledgee or his descendants must be allowed to them, settled by arbitration.

Case of mort-

If the mortgagee neglect during five years to enter into possession of a village he cannot do so; he will receive the debt, if proved by the Gahan-putr, with interest, whether he has enjoyed the village or not—unless he has been prevented from possessing it by force on the part of the mortgager, or has in the interval made Tukaza on the latter demanding possession, or at the time of entering on possession was compelled by the Sirkar to fly the country.

The mortgagee for (say) Rupees 5000 having entered on possession remains in enjoyment for a number of years, when the owner not making his appearance (or his being in the country remaining unknown to the 1st mortgagee) the latter transfers the mortgage to a 2d receiving 10,000 Rupees from him. Such 3d person receives the Gahunputr &c. with a memorandum of the new contract on the former one, and with a provision that whenever the owner should arrive, he should be at liberty to enter on possession, the 2d mortgagee giving up the village to him on receiving the principal and interest borrowed viz. 10,000 Rupees, from him, while the owner comes on the mortgagee for the difference. Even should the second mortgage be made as if the right of proprietorship were solely vested in the 1st mortgagee, the owner will come on the first mortgagee and through him settle the debt with the 2d; if he is unable to do so the owner will himself repay the debt to the 2d, and redeem his village.*

A village is mortgaged under an agreement that a sum amounting to the usual revenue of the village deducting expenses of salary &c. should be annually applied in discharge of the debt and interest, with exception in case of loss of crops or exaction. In the event of failure of the crops from want of rain, or the village being plundered, the actual collections only go in discharge of the debt, and should the Sahookar (mortgagee) oppress the Ryots, and future loss of revenue be thereby incurred, he would be responsible.

Whenever the amount of principal and interest equals the value of the pledged moveable, according to the period previously fixed for the settlement of the debt and redemption of the property, the pledgee is to give notice to the owner, and in default of redemption he is then at liberty to sell the property and reimburse himself. Until after the expiration of a period generally fixed in the Topnama, it is not usual to sell horses, jewels, or swords pledged, on account of their variable price. In the event event of no Bond for repayment at a particular period having been passed, arbitrators would determine the amount chargeable to the pledger on account of principal and interest (seldom exceeding Dandooput or equal amount of each) with regard to his circumstances, and the article is either returned to him on payment, or it is sold, and sometimes he gives a Promissary Note to the pledgee that he will pay the particular outstanding balance against him by instalments or whenever his future ability may allow. A Chithee on the settlement of the debt is usual, and in cases of poverty, the debtor is excused some part of his debt.

Land,

Immoveable property is generally redeemed by the payment of the principal debt only, it having been agreed that the enjoyment of the property pledged should be an offset to the interest. Immoveable property is never sold, P. Sometimes the time of possession is prolonged to the pledgee, on account of losses from want of rain or Rajkrant. Unless such causes of deficiency have been expressly exempted in the original agreement by some phrase, as "Bin Afat B nfitocr &c." And in the event of the proprietor flying the country before the expiration of the Mukta, or fixed time for redemption of the property of the property, the proportion payable to the Sahookar, his Tenant and the Proprietor, are fixed by arbitration.

Houses.

Houses pledged are given up to the proprietor at the time specified, when the interest and amount fixed as rent equal each other. The pledgee in possession has agreed to make the necessary repairs, but he is not obliged to rebuild the house if destroyed by fire, heavy rains, or other misfortune (Asurance).

Metal pots,
Shawls, Clothes, or Jewels.

In the pledge of Metal pots, Shawls or Clothes, and Jewels, should the period for redeeming the property expire, after waiting a few days, the articles may be sold before arbitrators, and on the arrival of the owner he would receive or pay the balance, whether on the price received, or on the principal and interest account. Should the owner be prepared to redeem his property, property, and in case of its not being forthcoming should referees fix the value too highly (as proved by their subsequent production) the referees' decision would not be set aside, unless on special agreement. The pledgee is to make up the loss (unless there were an agreement at the time) occasioned by the articles through his fault not being forthcoming on the demand.

Besides the Gahun Chittee, the Sahookar (pledgee) keeps a Yad of the articles pledged, specifying their number and weight (if jewels) and value; this Yad is referred to in case of losses from fire and flood and Rajkrant and Durora. If the pledgee sell the articles for more than stated in the Yad, or for more than the value as verbally settled or determined by referees, he must give up the surplus of his debt and interest to the owner. Such unavoidable causes of loss are comprehended under the general title of Afut Asmance-Sooltance. On proof of false assertion of loss, the pledgee would be bound to restore the whole value, in default of special agreement, either according to the Yad, or as otherwise deposed.

Interest on a debt secured by pledge is lower than on simple contract debts. In case of the pledge of land, or horses, or swords, interest varies from eight annas to two rupees per cent per mensem, without Munotee or bonus. If grain or clothes, or jewels, the same interest is required, and on the latter, Munotee at the rate of eight annas to two rupees per cent on the due of the pledge is besides paid at the time of the advance. Larger interest is taken according to comparative risk and mutual agreement, P.

If the pledgee refuse to deliver over the property after the interest and principal debt have been liquidated, he is liable to fine, D.

Without the consent of the pledger, no pledge can be repawned or sold, K. The pledger ought not even to use the pledge without the pledgee's consent; should he do so, he must pay the damages and expenses accruing. He cannot repawn or sell cles hired Rajkrant or Durora the proprietor is not reimbursed. Articles of carriage. glass, if broken, are to be made good. Metal utensils are weighed when taken by the hirer, and any deficiency in weight is made good on returning them. Jewels and gold and silver ornaments are valued, and any deficiency is made good on returning them, unless occasioned by Rajkrant or Durora. Cotton Cloths burnt or torn while in the hirer's possession are to be made good, allowing time to the party if his premises were destroyed by fire, P. Houses accidentally burnt are not chargeable to the tenant (S.) who pays the rent up to the time it was burnt down, K. If he or any of his people set fire to the house they are responsible. A tenant is not responsible for moveables left in the house rented or premises not rented by him ; unless expressly deposited in his charge, S. K.

Animals for In case of animals hired for carriage, if the owner accompany them on the journey, he is not reimbursed for any losses whatever ;—if not, the hirer must repay the value of animals dying or stolen or injured by his neglect, not if plundered by Rajkrant or Durora. The owner is bound to replace accidental deaths if he accompany the hirer, and if he have agreed to convey convey the party to a particular place, P. S. The owner of the cattle pays damage done to the bullocks and trappings, the owner of the goods damage to the goods, unless arising from the carrier's neglect, K.

If the animals are stolen by robbers or lost through carelessness, the owner not being with them, the hirer generally defrays half the value, (K). There is generally a special agreement,

In case of a person hiring land for a period of (say) ten years, and afterwards improving it by building a house, digging a well, or planting trees, on the expiration of the lease the owner takes the improvements at a valuation, otherwise the lessee is entitled to carry away the materials—(this is in default of any specific agreement between the parties). A man living in his father-in-law's house would not be entitled to reimbursement for buildings erected for his own pleasure, if turned out; but if he has improved the house so as to get rent for it, his expenses must be repaid, K. If from building a well the produce of the ground have increased two or three fold, and the Sirkar rent have increased in proportion, arbitrators would assign to the lessee annually after the expiration of the lease either the whole or part of the net increase on account of the well, deducting current expenses of labour, until he shall have been repaid the expence of building it;—the land and well remaining in the owner's possession. The same principle of settlement is adopted in other improvements, as bringing in water-courses or planting trees—or raising bunds,—or manuring the ground, P. So in case of the real owner appearing after the ground had been rented by a false claimant, K.

Agreements for hiring lodgings vary in terms and are generally made verbally before witnesses—the payments are usually in arrears—warning of a month at least is given if the rent is to be increased; as to other warning, there seems no established rule. If a man rents a house from month to month without any definite definite agreement, the landlord can turn him out at four days warning, K. The landlord's heir may turn the tenant out at 15 days warning, K. If the tenant improve or repair the premises, the landlord sometimes agrees in writing not to increase the rent so long as he occupies them. In case of the death of a landlord, it is optional with the heir to make a new lease, or continue the tenant, or reject him after due warning—so if the tenant die, his heir may insist on not quitting before the expiration of the lease, but it is optional with him to fulfil or not the engagement of the deceased, S. K.

In case of a man contracting to perform a particular work by a particular time, if paid by the day, his wages are not diminished by failing to finish it by the time stipulated. Agreements to manufacture a particular article according to muster must be strictly kept,—if the party fail with the materials given, he must find others, taking those spoilt after completing the article. But a builder failing to build a house according to a particular plan is not responsible for the failure, nor is in the former case the manufacturer, if the failure is at all attributable to the hirer, P.

Cloths not properly woven are returnable to the weaver contracting, the owner receiving back his advance, K. Dhobees are answerable for damage to clothes washed, but a man of respectability would not press for remuneration, K.

land.

In case of four persons renting a house and three absconding, the fourth will be answerable for the whole rent unless he give notice to the owner or his servants, K.

If a piece of ground is rented with a specification as to its quantity, the rent may be diminished on the quantity proving less than specified, otherwise not, K.

Two persons rent a house or land jointly, one of whom pays his rent regularly, the other dies indebted to the owner ; in this case the former is not answerable (unless on special agreement) K.

The landlord cannot without the leave of the tenant live in the house until the expiration of the lease, K.

A man renting a house from month to month may either give a written receipt or a verbal one. A man renting a house for a year before witnesses must pay rent for the whole year though obliged to leave the country two months after concluding the contract, K. His wife or relations living in the house would continue to pay rent, K.

The usual terms of land (either Wuttun or Enam, freehold or liable to quit rent) rented to cultivators by private proprietors are either to pay in money two-thirds of the Government rent, or to give a portion of the crop, not unfrequently one half, after deducting seed and sundry other expenses. The value of land of course varies with the fertility of the soil, the facility of irrigation with greater or less labour and expence, and the proximity to the village.

In case of farmers borrowing each other's cattle, should the animal be accidentally injured, the village sometimes decide that the owner should be reimbursed if he is poor and cannot afford the loss, otherwise not. If the animal strays or dies of ill usage the hirer is responsible ; if he uses it well and it dies of disease, the loss falls on the owner, K. Implements of husbandry lost during loan are generally replaced. Except under special agreement, hired cattle cannot without the owner's consent be hired to another, K. S. Young animals would belong to the owner, paying expenses of keep, K.

In case of goods engaged to be conveyed to a particular place for a certain sum, should they be lost during the carrier's casual absence, having left them in charge of an unknown person, as on a necessary occasion, his neglect being implied he is to reimburse burse the owner; so, if lost while the carrier is asleep; so, if articles of glass were broken by his falling asleep or other neglect; so, if metal utensils were damaged by being thrown down; so, if the carrier without authority pledge or sell the articles on the road. But a very young person would be excused from responsibility to this extent, and in all cases the owner is not to exact repayment of the value of the article without proof of the carrier's neglect, nor to exact it with severity as to amount of damage or time of repayment, but to have regard to his means, P.

Such carrier is not responsible if the goods were seized by gang robbers, himself being alone; nor if dropped accidentally into a well while he was drinking, nor if seized by Rajkrant, nor if consumed by fire, nor are his family responsible if the carrier himself were devoured by a tiger &c. Do. S. K. P.

The carrier is not responsible for breakage unless he gave a special agreement to deliver those articles safe on larger amount of hire. The responsibility of the carrier extends to the delivery of the packages to the persons directed as made over to the carrier by the owner, S.

A deduction may be made from the line agreed on if not delivered within the time specified, provided the delay arose from neglect and not from accident or disease, P.

DEBTS AND INTEREST.*

83. The amount of interest in the ordinary state of the money market varies according to the security given, or the probability that the principal and accumulating interest will be repaid. The lender receives on advancing the money a bonus of from 1 to 2 or even 5 per cent on the whole, called Munotee. Interest on loans to Sahookars, or on pledge to substantial ryots, varies from $\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 per Cent per mensem, but loans from one partner to another often bear no interest, D. Large Sahookars would would take 6 to 12. Even 48 per cent is taken, K. The rate to petty traders varies from $\frac{3}{4}$ to $1\frac{1}{4}$, and to grain dealers, Zumeendars, Moamludars and Khooshbash individuals from 1 to $2\frac{1}{2}$.

Larger interest is paid in particular cases according to private agreement between the parties. Sometimes the borrower receives only 95 Rupees in every 100 nominally borrowed, (the deduction of 5 per Cent being on account of Gunessee 2, Kichree 2, and Dustoree 1) and promises to pay 125 Rupees in one or two years by instalments. Loans to petty bazar traders on whose credit the Sahookar has little confidence, are sometimes contracted for on an agreement for the trader to pay one pice per week on every bazar day for every Rupee advanced,* P. Even so high as one anna or $6\frac{1}{4}$ per Cent, payable weekly, has been known, S. Ryots sometimes mortgage a proportion of their crops (as from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ of the produce of a particular field); in this case the Sahookar takes his chance of the season, or he agrees to give a certain quantity of grain, as from 1 to 3 pylees of rice, ragee, til &c. per Rupee lent, or if no grain, he gives an equivalent sum of money at the bazar rate of the time. Advances are made by Sahookars to ryots of grain for subsistence, to be repaid at the close of the year at the rate of $1\frac{1}{4}$ to 2 Muns of grain for every Mun advanced, P. D. 25 per cent more is given on grain advanced for subsistence, and 50 if for seed, S. But the lender cannot reject the payment of the grain in kind at the expiration of the time, S.

So in advances for Cotton, the repayment is generally fixed in money at the price of the time of the advance, (if in cotton a larger quantity being given in lieu of interest or premium.) If the creditor refuse the article according to agreement he can only receive the principal without interest at the price of the time of the advance. If he decline removing the grain or cotton, though warned by the ryot, he bears the loss; though accidental losses are generally participated. A Sahookar cannot insist on repayment, if the grain he lent for seed does not come up at all; at least great indulgence is due to the ryot, D.

Do. for cloth.

Advances are sometimes made to receive cloth at a stipulated rate and period. If the contract is not performed, the advance bears interest from the period, unless from unavoidable causes; if the non-performance was with a view of profit, the creditor may claim either his interest or the debtor's profit made, D.

In advances by a Sahookar to a ryot on condition of receiving a quantity of Goor from sugar cultivation, in the event of a bad year the Sahookar abides the loss, K.

Do. for per-

Advances are sometimes made to Brahmins to be repaid in labour, viz. in bringing water, cooking or writing, reckoning the wages at 2 or 3 rupees per mensem. The borrower in this case receives his maintenance; servants of other castes may receive money to be repaid by labour without maintenance. A ryot sometimes contracts to serve as a labourer from 3 to 5 years, receiving food and clothing during that period, in consideration of an advance of Rupees 30, P. Artificers and others agreeing to work out debts by personal service can only be obliged to perform duties consistent with their caste, D.

Compound Interest is not usually specified, but from the custom of making up accounts at the Deepoulee, and entering the balance of principal and interest as a total sum bearing interest in a new account, it is in fact paid, S. K. There is no limit to the amount of interest, but Panchayets award a sum according to the debtor's circumstances, either taking off interest of a particular cular period, K. or reducing it to 1 or 2 per cent, or striking off the excess of double amount of principal (Dandoput*), and decree that it shall be recovered by instalments. In case of poverty, the principal only, or a part of it, is accepted by the creditor, P. D. K.

Contrary to the Sastru, all castes, even Brahmins, trade in any articles except leather, meat, and spirituous liquors, and take interest at the rates above specified without regard to the caste of the lender or borrower, D. S. K.

After a partition brothers are only bound to defray funeral expenses. A father is bound to defray his son's debts whilst living with him, especially for maintenance (with interest) unless he have given notice or warning not to trust the son. to Minors.

In loans to minors payable when they may obtain possession of their property, a bonus of from 5 to 10 per Cent (Munotee) is at first deducted, and the interest varies from 8 to 12 per Cent per annum. On coming into possession land is often made over to the Sahookar with a Promissory Bond to pay the principal debt by annual instalments, the produce of land being a set-off to the interest, S. Fathers sometimes give warning to Sahookars not to advance money to their sons &c. after which they would not be responsible, K.

Sahookars to whom Bunyas are indebted sometimes stop the sale of their stock in trade, and take the whole in pledge—in this case the trader cannot remove his trade to another bazar without giving security to the Sahookar, K.

The custom of Tukazu under the late Government was of various kinds. If the parties were Sahookars, or the debtor a man of fortune, it was usual for the creditor to demand payment verbally or bring the debtor to his own house, D. K. Then to send a Goomashta to his house to demand payment; then to seat a man near his house, and should the debtor not request his creditor to take him off by a Munnachithee, he would be obliged to comply with the man's demand for daily subsistence (4 annas &c.) the owner fasting the whole time from morning till evening and accusing the debtor as the cause thereof—should the debtor still persist in not coming to some agreement, the dun would forbid any water to be brought inside the house, and subsequently plant several hired men of the debtor's caste at his door, who would forbid the cooking of food within

K.—In Tuka-zu the creditor cannot exercise violence towards his debtor, nor dun his wife or family, nor take away property without his permission, K.

Among Tylung Brahmuns, and Gosaeens, it was not usual to place any hired person at the debtor's door, but the creditor himself remained on the spot, fasting, abusing him, and demanding payment, or he stood with a stone placed on his head, or his Sendee (lock of hair unshaven) platted and fastened to a peg at the debtor's door; he even threatened to hang himself, or confined the debtor in a room. The sin of these self-inflicted acts is considered to rest with the debtor who is the cause of them; nevertheless men in power would repel such attempts to obtain payment by violence, P.

Among Ty-lung Brahmuns

Confinement in jail for default in paying debts was not practised under the Mahratta nor under Tippoo's Government, D. Debtors confined should be allowed to give security and be temporarily released for performance of religious ceremonies, D. and for food, K.

It was usual in demanding payment of debts from Sirdars and Military Chiefs, to plant at their houses 10 or 15 Sipahes, and demand daily on their account 25 to 150 Rupees, according to the circumstances of the debtor, but not to prevent his taking food although themselves remained fasting, P.

Jemadars of horse under the Native Government were paid by Tunkahs drawn by Sirkar officers on particular Villages or Amils—if the Amildar were discharged before the bill was honored, or if it were unpaid, the drawer was held responsible, unless the delay arose by the Jemadar's consenting to receive the money some time after the bill became due. If the ryots gave a bond on which a Sahookar paid the Tunkah, the new Amildar would pay the Sahookar and recover the amount gradually

By custom a Jemadar entertaining sepoy or horsemen was responsible for all promises of pay &c. to them, notwithstanding his services were not subsequently required from the Sirkar; (D.) in case of written agreement, K. On advances to Sepoys paid irregularly under the late Government, and horsemen (providing for their horses out of their pay) the Sahookar generally deducted a bonus of 1 per cent at least and charged 12 to 24 per cent interest, or received the bonus at the 1st receipt of pay. In Hyderabad the rate of interest has been known as high as 72 per cent per annum, and among the Arabs in Khandesh 10 per cent a month for arrears of pay was commonly given, S. But sepoy enlisting on a tacit agreement only received what the Jemadars could give them, and sometimes put up with loss of pay altogether, K.

In case of the mortgage of villages &c. by a Surinjamdar or Sumusthan for the payment of Sirkar dues or expenses incurred on account of Government, in the event of the Surinjam being resumed by Government, the Sahookar would be allowed to remain in possession of part of the land until repaid; if the debt were contracted on private account, the loss falls on the Sahookar if the Surinjamdar has no other means of payment, D. Do. Zumeendars, K. Government would settle the Sahookar's debt out of the land attached (K.) if on account of Government. If incurred on account of charity or a Marriage &c. the Surinjamdar would be answerable, K.

A Surinjamdar is responsible for the whole of debts contracted by him notwithstanding the subsequent resumption of his Surinjam, or a part of it, by Government. Payment would be made by instalments or deductions according to the circumstances of the debtor, D.

Petty Zumeendars' estates are often completely in the hands of Sahookars, who pay them an annual sum for expenses, discharge charge the Joree or other dues to Government, and receive the whole surplus, D.

A Jageerdar is bound to pay every debt contracted in his name by his recognized Karbaree or Manager, K.

Jageerdars

It has been customary for villages to borrow money from Sahookars in order to pay their balances due to Government at from 12 to 24 per cent, K. Where a verbal agreement is made with the ryots jointly,* or a Bond is given by the Mokuddum and head ryots on the part of the village, defaulters' shares are made up by a Puttee on those who are able to pay, exclusive of new ryots who were not in the village at the time the loan was contracted (inclusive, if on account of Government, K.) Where a number of ryots sign a bond, each is answerable for his own share only and his heirs (K.) but he is bound to aid in recovering the money from absentee defaulters. It is better that the Government should levy the money from the village and pay the Sahookars, K.

Village debts.

In case of a Sahookar receiving money from a village and becoming re-ponsible for a larger amount of their balances, and afterwards becoming Bankrupt, the ryots must not be called upon to pay any money twice over, if not recoverable from the Sahookar's estate: the part already not paid by the villagers only must be collected from them, D. K.

Bankruptcy
kar.

In case of a Sahookar becoming responsible for village balance, and paying them, after which the village is plundered, or the crops fail, he must recover the amount from the village by gradual instalments. The Sahookar pays the amount to the Amildar pro tempore: the new Amildar recovers on his arrival outstanding balances from Sahookars, Durukdars, Patells and villagers, and if they produce Chorchithees from the former Amildar, he is of course responsible for what he has not brought to account.

Mortgage of Government lands for village debt.

It is not usual for villages or head ryots to mortgage Sirkar lands: it occasionally happens if the debt is contracted to defray Government balances or with the consent of the Government officers; in which case the mortgagee would enjoy the lands, and the ryots collectively pay the Kists due thereon, D.

Enam lands are sometimes mortgaged for a short period to pay village debts, the Enanidar recovering the amount gradually, D. Government should aid in releasing them, K.

Extorted bonds and vill-

Durbar Khirch,

It was not usual to keep vouchers for money paid as douceurs to men in power under the name of Durbar Khirch; of course the amount of Bonds for advances on that account was repayable to the Sahookar, D.

Ryots, to

The ruinous system of lending money to ryots or grain for subsistence and seed is very general. A bond is generally given by the unfortunate cultivator for all outstanding balances and interest at the end of the year, so that he is bound to the Sahookar as a slave to his master, mortgaging the crop to him, or selling it at one-fourth, one-third, or one-half its price in a fair market. Meantime the rents to Government are regularly paid, and the ryot finds the advances of the Sahookar necessary to enable him to continue his occupation, S.

Under the late Government it was customary to purchase the Moamlutdarship of a district, paying the money in advance, and subrenting villages &c. to other individuals. advances made by his sub-renters unless he received his own from Government, including principal, interest and Munotee, D.

Amildars under the Native Government and those employed by Sumusthans, Jageerdars &c. are precisely on the same footing, K. The profits of the latter are however less, D. They have a small fixed salary, and much arbitrary power of exaction. In case of the purchaser of an Amil dying before the expiration of the lease, it was usual to continue his heir if capable of managing the trust, (K.) otherwise to return a part of the purchase money to the heirs, or allow a pension, or give presents to the females of the family, D. K.

Death of the purchaser.

In case of a purchaser of any Moamlutdarship committing exactions &c. to a great amount, breaking cowls, and resuming Enams, the oppressed individuals generally received some redress from the new Amildar. If the extortions were in order to pay the amount due to Government, Government would excuse the ryots the sum of their bond debts, D.

Exactions by

A Moamlutdar would be obliged to repay all borrowed money actually spent by him on private and public account before losing his Moamlut, principal and interest, K. And if Government had sanctioned a loan from one Sahookar to him, he could not recover interest on forming another contract with another Sahookar, K.

A debt to a Sahookar may be proved in the absence of Tamsook or Bond, and pledge, by entry of the payment in the Sahookar's Wuhee, supported by one or more Kuboolat Chitthees* signed at different periods by the debtor for the principal and accumulating interest, though without a regular Bond or Tamsook. It may be proved by such Kuboolat Chi if witnessed, even in the event of the Wuhee having lost. And if not witnessed, yet if the Kuboolat Chithee is proved to be in the debtor's handwriting by comparison with other known handwriting of his, it will be sufficient proof of the debt. Such Kuboolat Chithee is in the following form, "Raj-

A debt to a Sahookar may be proved by the mere entry in the Sahookar's Wuhee if he be of a respectable character, even without any Khut, Tumsook or Kuboolat Chitthee, or if the money were paid through a third person, the debt may be proved at the Deewalee ka parwa (annual settlement of Sahookars' accounts on or about Kartik Sood 1) by inspection of his Wuhee, even should no entry have been made in the books of the actual creditor. Should the parties be unable from absence to come to a settlement for several years, it may be made on meeting on the above principles. The Wuhee consists of, 1, Kucha-khurd or rough Day book ; 2, Puka Khurd, or Cash book, into which the entries in the 1st are copied fair: these two are kept in order of date ; 3, Khutawunee or ledger, the entries of which are called Khat ; this is kept in order of names, and contains the accounts of the Sahookar with all his constituents. All these should be compared in seeking evidence of payments, whether from the party, or by transfer through him.

Should a creditor abstain from offering Tukazu to his creditor for any number of years, it matters not how long, the creditor may exact payment on proof of the debt. But should a debt be of very long standing (50 to 75 years) it may be settled by arbitrators, who annul the debt on the debtor paying the creditor a sum equal to double the original principal (Dam-doput) if the debtor is a man of substance ; if poor, on his paying

Such abstaining from Tukazu is prima facie a suspicious circumstance, but the relative condition of the parties is to be enquired into, as, if though living in the same place the creditor could not demand payment, his debtor being a man in power; or did not do so, on account of the poverty of the debtor. In assigning a debt to a 3d party, the creditor should give up his bond to the 2d, and take a receipt; the parties being Sahookars, an entry in the Wuhee is sufficient, P.

Many Ryots have not sufficient capital to manufacture their own sugar. The cane is often bought up on the field, the ryots cutting it and bringing it to the boilers. In the sale of animals, it is common if the purchaser and seller are unacquainted with each other for the seller to give security, or a Khureedputr, in which he binds himself to answer all other claimants, P. and to give various warranties, S.

Draught bullocks are generally taken on a week's trial (unless bought from a stranger); Cows on several days trial as to the milk; Horses are also taken on trial for three or four days, P. Of animals dying accidentally while on trial before payment of purchase money agreed on, the loss falls on the seller, S. K. P. Of those dying before the payment of purchase money, a time being specified after trial, the loss falls on the purchaser, K.

If the purchase money remain unpaid after the period fixed by agreement, (say two months) interest is chargeable. The original ginal owner may oblige the purchaser to sell the animals to a 3d person in order to defray the debt, but it is not customary to charge hire for the period, P. nor to demand payment for forage, S.

Calves taken from the cow at one year old are pastured for three years, when they are sold, and the produce equally divided between the owner and pasturer, P. S. In the interval the farmer is not responsible for the death of the young animal, nor can he in that case recover expenses of keep, S. K. Colts are pastured in the same way for one or two years. A mare in foal or a cow in calf is pastured for a year, then returned to the owner, and after the expiration of another year the calf is given to the pasturer. The same kind of contract is made with regard to goats and sheep. If an abortion occur, the mare or cow is exchanged for another, or sold and the produce divided. Should the cow die accidentally no money is paid on either side, P.

In carrying home cattle, lucky or unlucky days are consulted. If earnest have been paid and the animal die even while in the stall of the vender, the purchaser must bear the loss, S. Unless their death is caused by the vender's neglect or ill treatment, K.

The rules regarding the sale of cattle do not appear very definite, nor even everywhere the same, S.

In the transfer of land &c. the situation, extent, and nature of the land, the tenure by which it is held, and the consideration for which it is made over, are described in the Khuneedputr. With the land are also transferred water, grass, trees and their produce, dry wood, treasure, and stones to be found thereon. The village officers and others witness the deed, which is generally written by the Koolkurnee, S. P. Land is not resumable by the granter if he give an Enam Putr, K.

Do. interrupted.

86. In case of a Wuttundar's running away, and another possessing his Wuttun (by permission of the villagers &c.) without interruption or dispute by any one for a period of 100 years, the descendants of the original Wuttundar cannot claim possession. If however such acquirer (Jura) has had his claim disputed in the interval by a sharer (Tukseendar) of the Wuttun or resumed by the Sirkar, he must give it up to the owner on proof of his claim, keeping a part in consideration of his having paid charges on (Kusala) and preserved the Wuttun for so many years.

In case of a Goomashta preserving a Wuttun and paying its expenses, though the papers belonging to the Wuttun are not in his possession, after possessing the Wuttun for 100 years without interruption, he becomes proprietor. Should he only have had suredh bhogy, he or his representatives would be appointed Wuttundar or hereditary Goomashta, or would have a pension assigned to them payable from the Wuttun after delivering it up to the proprietor's descendants. The possession of the papers confers the right to proprietorship.

In case of a Goomashta or Jura Goomashta of a proprietor personally unknown to the village possessing a Wuttun for a long period, and the proprietor selling it to another, the purchaser should continue to transact the business of the Wuttun, as the signing and sealing papers, Doomalaputr (deeds of transfer signed by Zumeendars) &c. through such Wuttunee Goomashta,

A proprietor lets a house for a stipulated rent, and goes abroad. The lessee and his descendants then enjoy the property without paying the rent, but keeping the premises in repair. After 100 years the representatives of the proprietor may claim the property, but not the rent, in case the expenses of repairs nearly balance its amount calculated to the period when the claim was made. In case of the lessee having built expensive additions to the house &c., if the proprietor cannot defray their arbitrated value, the lessee has a right to carry away the timber and materials.

In a boundary dispute, where Nirwedhbhog, or uninterrupted enjoyment of the land is proved on one side for a period of 100 years, a trial by ordeal is not admissible. If within such period the land in dispute has been partially enjoyed by another, or resumed by the Sirkar, or has been the ostensible cause of village disputes, it is matter of Judicial investigation, P. In a Panchaet case in Khandesh (No. 3.) no witnesses or documents were produced by either party in a boundary dispute, and both were ready to make oath. It was decreed accordingly that the land in dispute should be equally divided, K. See Ordeal.

Should the house be in the possession of a family for several generations, and afterwards be sold to a stranger, who on pulling it down finds treasure concealed, he is bound to give three-fourths of it to the heir of the former proprietors, and keep one-fourth himself; should he through avarice keep the whole, he would be obliged to give it up to the heir on subsequent investigation and proof. The first case depends on an omission of the word 'Treasure in the conveyance.

granted by

Of treasure found on the site of ground newly given to cultivators or other proprietors by the Sirkar, three-fourths is to be given to the Sirkar, and one-fourth to the new proprietor. It is customary in giving an Enam putr, to mention, as included in the grant of land, water (Jul) Trees (Turoo) Grass (Trin) Dry wood (Kasht) stones (Pashan) and Treasure (Nidhee,) in which case the Donee would of course take the whole.

On

Treasure found on Government land by a ryot (whether Meerasdar or Oopurce) in the jungle on the bank of a river, on a road, or in drains (Moree), belongs de jure to the Sirkar, but the Sirkar would usually grant a part of it as a recompence or free gift to the ryot or finder.

Treasure found on the boundary between two houses is to be given to the owner, as proved by investigation; as whether the description or name of the vessel in which the treasure was found is known to either occupant, whether either has any knowledge of the treasure having been buried, under which house are found the marks of a hole having been dug, or of chunam lining such hole, whether, the ancestors of one were rich, of the other poor &c. if the ownership is proved by neither, they are to divide the treasure; but if it appear probable that the ancestors of neither concealed it on the spot, the Sirkar may take the whole.

Treasure found in a house by a tenant not a proprietor is to be given by him to the proprietor.

Treasure

Treasure or property of any description to which there is no heir is to be given to the Sirkar. If found on the site of heirless property given by the Sirkar to a new proprietor it is to be given to the Sirkar, the proprietor receiving a present thereout. In the Peshwa's time it was usual to give the whole of Treasure trove to the finder if a Brahmin, Sahookar, or Sirdar.

EVIDENCE.*

88 to 92. It is not customary to receive the evidence of a boy under 15 years of age, his understanding not being supposed sufficiently matured. In Wuttun Deeds, persons under 25 years of age do not sign as witnesses. The evidence of a Goomashita or servant is not received in a matter in which their principal is concerned, unless absolutely necessary, and is always suspicious. The evidence of an old or deaf man who has become imbecile in understanding, or of an insane person, is not received. Nor of a shameless quarrelsome individual (or low caste, D.) always engaged in disputes. Nor of an avaricious man, careless of the means of acquiring wealth. Nor should the witness be a great friend of the party, or have money dealings with him, or be otherwise interested in his favor by relationship &c. Nor is it usual to admit a woman as evidence. Nor should the witness be prejudiced against the party by enmity &c; or a constant eater of opium, bhung &c. or drinker of intoxicating liquor. The above rules apply to disputes of Wuttun, Debt &c. But the evidence of bystanders would be taken in all cases of homicide, assault, robbery, &c. P. D. The evidence of a child is receivable in cases of murder, D.

Incompetent

And the evidence of witnesses of doubtful credit (including females) would be received in all cases as confirmatory of other unexceptionable evidence, but would not be admissible unsupported. A single witness is not admitted, unless of established veracity.

In

In cases of theft, where it has evidently been committed by persons within the house, all relations and servants are admissible. Circumstantial proof is brought in aid of the vivâ voce evidence, and occasionally the parties undergo some ordeal with the view of discovering the theft. Under the late Government it was usual to beat and otherwise ill-treat and alarm prisoners in order to obtain confession ; such confessions were not however considered good proof, unless confirmed by some circumstantial or other collateral proof, P.

No. of witnesses.

Two respectable witnesses at least are generally necessary in every case ; one witness of extraordinary character for veracity would be sufficient. Where no other person was present, one witness is admissible for proof. No objection exists to receiving the evidence of a man of one Caste against a man of another ; respectability of character is the great requisite, D.

Accomplices and interested

The evidence of accomplices in criminal matters, as of persons interested in civil disputes, should not be received against the party in one case, nor in favor of him in the other, D.

Written

Documents should be proved genuine by comparison of the signature &c. with other hand-writing of the party. The account book of a respectable Sahookar is good evidence provided his character for honesty is established, P. D. The different parts of the Wuheer, and balances brought forward should be compared, P.

Witnesses should be admonished, examined separately, and fined or disgraced on giving improper or untrue evidence according to the circumstances of the case and the Caste or rank of the offender. False evidence is held right if given to save a life, promote a marriage &c. not if given to prevent the punishment of a criminal, D.

A witness is bound to answer all queries whether they criminate himself or no, D. Under the Native Governments it is customary to flog or otherwise harass prisoners with the view of making them confess.

On

On other points relative to evidence the opinions given accord with the English practise. A physician's or Wukeel's evidence is admissible, but a man violating his professional confidence would lose estimation in society, D.

ORDEAL.*

89. Oath or ordeal is demanded by a party suspicious of another's veracity in the last resort, and in default of other written or oral evidence, 1, In a boundary dispute ; 2, In a dispute between brothers or relations as to family property entrusted to one during the absence of the other ; 3, In a dispute as to the proprietorship of a Wuttun ; 4, In disputes of debt and accounts ; 5, In cases of theft ; 6, Of homicide ; 7, Of suspicion of any crime.

Ordeal is of various kinds : 1, Tuptgola, in which the person submitting to the ordeal, after first stating his innocence, or giving his deposition, takes in his hand, unhurt, a hot iron ball of the weight prescribed.

2, Tupt Rawa, in which he plunges his hand into a pan of boiling or heated oil, and takes out a piece of money placed therein.

3, Kucha gura. He has to fill an unbaked earthen pot with water from a river &c. and bring it back on his head unbroken.

4, Bel-bundar. He goes to the temple, and brings away therefrom the sacred Bel or creeping plant and Bundar (turmeric roots ground) or from the household god in his own house.

5, Gunga. He stands in the river Godavery, and gives his deposition.

6, Dewul. He stands in some temple which has a high character for Kuramut (power to detect good or evil) under the bell, and before the idol, and gives his deposition.

7. Gou.

9. Siw. In boundary disputes between villages, the village officers assemble both parties, who by common consent name in writing an individual, according to whose deposition the decision is to be passed on one or the other side. He then bathes in a sacred stream (if any near) puts the Toolsee plant round his neck or other sacred flowers, goes before some god, applies sandal to his forehead, and gives his deposition. Afterwards he proceeds to the boundary, and walks over the disputed ground. The line traced by him is fixed on as the true boundary thereafter. But if any calamity happen to him or any of his family within a certain period (the particulars being before prescribed in writing) the deposition is considered to have been a false one, and decision is passed in favor of the opposing party, P. Or he carries on his head an oil cake (sacred as the food of cows) when if it breaks, the deposition is considered a false one, P.

CUSTOMS OF SAHOOKARS.*

It is not the general custom to take Tumsooks in money transactions between Sahookars, especially if they are of credit and importance. Entries in the Wuhees are considered sufficient security. Tumsooks are taken from petty Sahookars and traders, ryots, and persons not engaged in trade, in which case a memorandum to that effect accompanies the entry in the Wuhee.

In the former case it is usual to send a man in the evening of the day on which a payment has been made to a Sahookar, to enquire whether it has arrived and been accounted for; it is not necessary for the Sahookars themselves to meet, or see the entry made.

The

* Authorities. Vide the replies on the subject of Hoondoes, P.

The entry in the Wuhee stands thus, "Date —— Huste (by the hands of —— belonging to —— received —— Rupees." Wuhees of both parties may be compared by either at any time, but such comparison and settlement of accounts is most usually made at the Deepoulee.

Wuhee.

When a Sahookar of credit opens an account with another, his name only is written in the Khate or ledger entry. When the person who opens an account is not a Sahookar, it is customary for him to procure another Sahookar who will give verbal security for him, being responsible (should he be bankrupt or overdraw his account) to the extent of 1 or 2,000 Rupees for a specified time, as, till the next Deepoulee. The account is then opened in the Khate: Widyuman, or Nisbut, or Marifut* or Junma—Sahookar. No other document is necessary, but the Khatree or security must be renewed after the time limited has expired.

On the settlement of accounts at the Deepoulee, the balance on one side or the other, if not paid, runs on in a new account for the following year, where it appears with the rate of interest determined on as a balance brought forward from the last year. (Ootar Pan sal Goozushta.)

The rate of interest as determined on is specified in the first entry at the time the money was advanced. If the Sahookar is one of credit to whom the advance is made, the interest is from 4 to 8 annas per cent per mensem; if the money is advanced to a smaller trader, or person not in trade, from 8 annas to 1 rupee. Should a sum of money be paid by one Sahookar to the Goomashta (or shopman in the service) of another and the debit be made in his Khate "Huste, Nisbut &c." the Yejman or principal of the Goomashta will be answerable at the Deepoulee, even should the Goomashta have fraudulently received the money and converted it to his own use. The Goomashtas of Sahookars being personally known to each other, it is not usual for them to bring orders of payment; and a further security exists against fraud in the custom of sending every evening to make enquiry. In the above case the money is debited to the Goomashta's principal, there being an account current with him at the time. If however the same entry is made, to the debit or account of the Goomashta himself, the Sahookars advancing the money can come on the latter only, and so also in the event of there not having been an account current between the two Sahookars before the money was paid to the Goomashta and debited to his principal, unless the payment was allowed by the party sending a man in the evening or entered in the Wuhees on both sides.

The Kuchakhurd, called also Rozkhurd, Phurd, Roznishee, is the first division of the Wuhee. It is a rough cash, or day-book, from which the entries are transcribed into the Puka Wuhee (Cash book or Journal), and thence (under the separate names) into the Khutawunee* or Ledger. The entries in the latter are called Khate. Some Sahookars have no Kuchakhurd. The balance in hand daily struck, is called Silk-jhara, and the particulars of the coins in which it consists Nanamel. These with the Jumma Khurch are all entered in the Kuchakhurd. The Jumma Khurch alone is entered in the Puka-Wuhee.* Hoondees drawn or presented for payment are copied and entered in a separate book called Nagul-wuhee or Nagul Wuhee Wuhee (by the Goozrattees.) The Marwarees hoondees in a Kucha-Wuhee when sent off, and in a Puka-Wuhee on notice of payment having arrived.

The Jangur-wuhee is an account book in which articles given to a broker for sale are entered. The entry consists of the broker's name, a description of the articles, and their value.

In the Chitnoud or Chitha-Wuhee are entered the particulars of letters from correspondents and others relative to the trade, also of Hoondees, and consignments of goods. The date and abstract are sufficient.

In the Wyaj-Wuhee are entered statements of interest due, as agreed on by the parties after inspection of the account. This is not however universally kept; the entry may be made in the Phurd. And generally, the account-books universally kept are the Wuhee and Khutawunce, Kucha and Puka.

Should in the progress of time the Wuhee appear to be of insufficient size for probable entries of the year, or the unwritten part be damaged by oil or ink thrown over it, new paper may be added, but it is not customary to make a copy of a Wuhee once written from any of these causes.

The names of persons in the service of Sahookars on account of trade are,

Clerks and servants to them

1, Mooneem, whose duty it is to receive, and pay money, take charge of deposits and pledges, superintend purchases and sales, sign Hoondees, and generally to give orders to entertain and dismiss Goomashtas, Parkhees, (Suraffs) &c. But the Kilee-wala (in charge of the keys) is generally appointed by the the principal at the same time as the Mooneem, and is liable to be dismissed by himself.

2, Goomashtas, who write the accounts, Heondees, and perform other duties abroad or at home. Occasionally the Mooneem also makes entries in the Wulce.

3, Kilee-wala, who is in charge of the keys, and by the Mooneem's orders opens the chests for receiving or giving out money or other articles; unless appointed by the Mooneem, which is unusual. He does not give him the keys every evening.

4, Parkhee, who shroffs the coins and states the daily balance.

5, Gure-manoose, who are sent in the evening to enquire whether money payments have been received; dispatched on Tukazu &c. &c.

The number and description of these clerks vary according to the extent of the trade; in some the Mooneem performs the office of Suraff and key bearer; in some shops the key-bearer shroffs the coins.

The salary of a Mooneem varies from 100 to 1,000 rupees per annum, but he generally contrives to make money on deposit, pledges &c. either by the death of the depositor, or false entries in the accounts. Salaries of Goomashtas vary from 150 to 500 Rupees; of the key-bearer from 200 to 750 Rupees; of Parkhees from 75 to 200 Rupees per annum. Gure-manoose receive monthly wages of from 5 to 8 rupees.

The key-bearer may open the chests &c. at his option and replace the articles, but in all transfers of property to strangers or receipts of property from others the order of the Mooneem is essential. It is not customary to put seals on the locks.

If a Goomashta or other servant is not trustworthy, it is given by . . . to take on his account Malzamin, Hazir-Zamin, and Fael-zamin (the last however merely binding the security to produce the party in the event of his committing or concealing fraud) a Zamin Khut is taken, but after 6 months or a year, the party having having become trustworthy the Khut is withdrawn. Should the party commit frauds &c. the money (if Malzamin) is paid by the security or his heirs, and if he died after having become Hazir-zamin, his son, being of age to conduct business, will answer for the party. The son either verbally may continue his father's security or enter into a new bond, or refuse, when the party must find another surety until his employers have confidence in him.

Wives and families of Goomashtas and servants dying after many years service receive, at the option of their employers, a certain part of the allowances, which are continued to them. The amount and period to which such allowances is continued vary in different cases. their l.

In case of the death of a Goomashta while carrying his master's property from one place to another, whether such were his regular occupation or otherwise, by violence, as gang robbery &c. his master sometimes gives a present to his surviving wife or family. The party himself if wounded may receive a present of a turban &c. But these are not universal customs. A stranger so occasionally employed would not appear to have any well-founded claim. And

A Goomashta or servant losing property committed to him to carry from one place to another, if by neglect, is punished, if by Rajkrant, or such unavoidable misfortune, he is excused. It is not customary to oblige him to repay the value in any case except fraud, when the whole is recovered from the party or his surety. The recovery may be made by stopping half his pay and allowing the party to remain in service and receive the other half for his subsistence. Re-

If however not entered in the Wuhee from forgetfulness, or the Goomashta giving notice by letter of the deposit to the principal, the latter is responsible as to Wuhee debts. The principal afterwards recovers from the Mooneem, whether money expended on his private account or debts contracted during sickness or insanity, or from his heirs, in the event of his death.

In the same way, the claims of depositors, though the deposit were made without his express consent or knowledge, are settled by the principal if entered in the Wuhee, in the event of the Goomashta's death or insanity or inability to do so, and the principal afterwards recovers from the Mooneem or his heirs.

Insurance contracts.

The principal is responsible for losses or insurance contracts entered into by the Mooneem, the latter being solely responsible for any money of his own which he may have risked in the investment.

The Mooneem Goomashta receives besides a yearly salary of from 100 to 1,000 Rupees (varying according to the circumstances of the principal Sahookar and the ability of the Mooneem) presents of clothes and money on Marriages and festivals (the Dussrah, Deepoulee, or Gooreckee Parwa—Chytru Sood Ist.)

of draw.

The principal is bound to account for all Hoondees drawn according to custom by the Mooneem in his name. The Mooneem signs his principal's name at the top of the Hoondee or Khutputr and his own at the bottom, unless it is signed by the principal only. The principal's signature is alone necessary in dismissing his Mooneem should he himself superintend the business.

The Mooneem in drawing on his principal, if the Hoondee has not been paid for, writes to that effect to his principal; and the bill remains Kutree until he hears from the Mooneem that the money is or will be paid. The principal pays a bill drawn on him by his Mooneem, before the arrival of (Lahune) consignment to answer it, if the Mooneem writes to that effect.

CUSTOMS OF

The Mooneem and principal are sometimes in partnership—otherwise all gain and loss on trade affects the latter only. Trading can only be undertaken by the subordinate Goomash-tas on their own account.

Partnership
of

The Mooneem if placed at the head of a shop in another place has the whole superintendence of the trade in his own hands, writing and signing Hoondees, Khut-putrs, &c.

It is usual to make up his accounts and send them to his principal at the Deepoulee, but in cases of limited confidence, the principal may require them to be sent at shorter intervals.

Even should the Mooneem cease to write his principal's name, and accounts between the firm and other Sahookars be written in the Mooneem's name, the principal (if really continuing to employ the Mooneem in charge of his capital) is responsible for all debts and contracts, and the creditors come on him and not on the Mooneem or his heirs. The principal afterwards settles his own account with the latter.

Of two individuals entering into a trading partnership, one advances capital, and the other officiates as Goomash'ta, under agreement to receive a salary of Rupees 100, or in lieu $\frac{1}{4}$ th of the profits: for several years he receives $\frac{1}{4}$ th accordingly, the total profits sometimes a little exceeding, sometimes falling short of Rupees 400. A year of loss following, he receives nothing. Afterwards following a year of unusual profit, the capitalist partner would be bound to give $\frac{1}{4}$ th of the profit to the Goomash'ta. The latter is in this case a partner, and has been treated as such in the year of loss.

Partnership
of "C"

It is customary, but not universally, to continue in his father's place the son of a faithful Goomash'ta, if capable of conducting the business allotted to him, or to give a Nemnook for life to his childless widow. Also to give a Nemnook to a Goomash'ta wounded by robbers, or rendered incapable of further service in the course of his duty.

In

Fraud by the

In case of a Goomashta concealing any deposit or statement of account favorable to a constituent on the latter having a civil dispute with his principal, and receiving as the price of such concealment a douceur of half the amount, on discovery of the fraud after the Goomashta's death the principal would not be allowed to recover the half so given from the Goomashta's heirs.

In appointing a Mooneem Goomashta, it is sometimes usual to present him with a cocoa-nut, saying, "This is my head which I have given into your charge, to preserve or to destroy." Sometimes the principal writes a Khut-putr, specifying the salary and the trust, advising caution, but without any limitations as to the trade to be carried on.

by neglect.

Should the Goomashta, having been instructed to keep a certain number of Cure-men, keep fewer in view to appropriate the amount of their wages—and afterwards property be lost on the road owing to an insufficient escort, the principal would be justified in dismissing the Goomashta on proof, but he would not come on him for the amount of the loss. The Goomashta is not answerable for property sent by the principal's order, though in charge of a friend or casual person, and afterwards lost while in their charge.

Prohibitions
of the principal.

Should, contrary to custom, the principal prohibit the Goomashta verbally or in writing from trading in a particular way, in the latter case only the Goomashta is responsible for the loss:—and not even then, should he advise his principal of this intention so to trade, on a probable estimate of profit.

Should money be sent for from a Sahookar by the hands of a subordinate Goomashta, and its amount afterwards entered in the Wuhce of his principal, having been paid on a chittee of the principal to the Mooneer, or on a chittee written by the Sub-Goomashta in the name of the principal or Mooneem, and in the evening found to have been received by the Sahookar's messenger, the principal is responsible—But should a Goomashta be discovered to have made fraudulent entries in the ble for fraud.

A Goomashta is answerable to the Sirkar for treacherous intrigue and acts detrimental to its authority ; also for acts contrary to its orders on account of his principal. But if the principal ordered him to do so, or replied to his letter consenting thereto, or even abstained from forbidding him after receiving a letter with advice of what was going on, the principal is responsible.—Fines on account of adultery, theft, assault, fraud on his own private account, or on account of his relations, and for acts of treason against the State in opposition to his principal's order,—are to be paid by the Goomashta.

Fines imposed by the Sirkar in an investigation connected with the trade, are defrayed by the principal.

Should the Mooneem be desirous of placing a substitute in his room, he writes to his principal for permission before doing so, mentioning that the person is trustworthy. After the answer has arrived the Mooneem will not be responsible for losses—even should he, contrary to custom, place a substitute without acquainting his principal, the losses would fall on the latter. The Mooneem indeed has a right to place such substitute if intending 10 or 12 days' absence only, instructing him to collect and pay money, enter it in the Wuhee &c. and drawing blank Hoondees, for him to fill up as many as will in all probability be required—and all losses during the Mooneem's absence will fall on the principal.

DEPOSITS WITH SAHOOKARS.*

Or the deposit may be made for security, without receiving interest, or paying charges.

Entry in Wu-

An entry in the Wuhee is generally considered sufficient to secure deposits of cash; but if the depositor fears the loss of the Sahookar's books (from Rajkrant) or doubts his credit, the latter gives him a Yad specifying the sum, rate of interest payable monthly or annually, signed by the Sahookar; or a Khut signed by both, and generally attested.

of the Sa-
Cash

If the parties agree that the Sahookar is not to be responsible for losses by Rajkrant, Durora, fire, or flood, he will not; but they generally determine that any articles afterwards recovered will be restored to the owner. If no agreement have passed, a deposit of cash entered in the Wuhee, lost by the above four means, is to be recovered from the Sahookar; not so a deposit of cash merely placed in amount without such entry.

Jewels, Metals and cloth.

Jewels, Gold, Silver, metal pots and cloths are not recovered in whatever way lost; but as the former articles are only partially injured by fire, what is recovered by the Sahookar must be restored to the owner.

If the Sahookar's property be confiscated by the Sirkar through a crime of his, the Sirkar will give up deposits, on proof of ownership, to the owner—and if a fine be imposed on the Sahookar he will be obliged to give up deposits to the owners.

if the depositor agreed to give 2 or 3 days notice of his intended demand, and failing to do so, the depositor delayed returning the amount.

Cash deposits remaining unclaimed for many years owing to the depositor's going abroad, may be redemanded with interest by the son of the depositor after his father's death, even should the interest amount to double or treble the amount of the original deposit. Should however in the interval the depositor send a written notice to the depositor that he should withdraw his deposit, and prove* his having forwarded such notice (so as to render it evident that the deposit was left in his hands merely to raise the interest balance) he will only be called on to pay the principal and interest up to the day on which the depositor received the notice—even should the distance be great, and there be no means of drawing a Hoondec.

Cash deposits with a Sahookar of high credit, if remaining unclaimed for 10 years, nevertheless accumulate at compound interest, the statement of the principal and interest being annually made up at the rate agreed upon. After 10 years, it accumulates at simple interest only; but should the depositor in the interval have made a false charge against the Sahookar, afterwards disproved, he can only receive compound interest up to the period when such charge was first preferred.

The following articles are generally deposited with Sahookars; Money in Cash, Jewels, Gold and Silver, Silk and Cotton, Cloths, Houses, Lands, Metal Utensils, and Grain.

Deposits brought to a Sahookar within 10 Ghurees after sunrise, are received, and interest for that day paid. Hoondecs are subject to the same regulation; if not received till after the time specified, that day is not reckoned in the period for its payment.

The Deepoulee festival commences Aswin Wudy 13th and ends at Kartik Sood 5th. The 1st day is called Dhuntryodusee on which Sahookars open all their chests, perform Pooja to their wealth, and take account of Gold, Silver &c. therein. The Ghee lamp lighted on that day is allowed to burn till the Prutipudha in the Jamdarkhana, and oil lamps are lighted on the outside of the shop. On the Chutoordusee, it is customary to rise three Ghurces before day-light, bathe, and anoint the person with oil, before eating. On the Ahmawasyu, in the dusk of the evening, gold and silver coins are brought out, Brahmuns invited, and the Lukshmeec Pooja performed; Sandal &c. are placed on the new Wuhee, and Pooja is performed before the old and new Wuhees, and the papers, pens, ink, and scales, appropriated for the new year; Dukshuna is distributed to the Brahmuns, festivities are usual in families at this season, and presents are given to women, relations and dependants, as well as to Bhikshook and Josees, Brokers in connection with the trade, private friends and Sirkar servants. Pansooparee and Lahce (a dish of rice) and Buttasee are presented to the guests. On the Parwa, or several days after, Sahookars send to each other 5 or 10 Rupees by way of opening the accounts of the new year. These are called the Sukoon rupees. A Goomashta is sent out by rich Sahookars for this purpose with a Yad of the names, among whom the money, Lahce &c. are to be distributed.

In the Mungulwar-Nana,—and especially in the Bhowanee-Peth of Poona reside wholesale traders in Grain and Kirane received from travelling Bunyas and sold to retailers in the city. It is the custom for these Urthes on the day of the Pooshy Nukshutr (falling generally on Kartik Sood 6 (Gubar Moort) to make Pooja before their Wuhee &c.

From Bahadrupud Sood 1st to the Deepoulee, during about 2 months, Sahookars send to their creditors demanding payment, and collect their debts. From Aswin W. Ahmawasy, Karkeons &c. are sent to the houses of their constituents to compare pare and settle their accounts, principal and interest. It is not usual to enter the amount of interest except under the debtor's personal inspection. If the balance is unpaid it is entered as a "balance brought forward" in the new Wuhee.

PARTNERSHIP.*

Partnership implies joint trade and joint liability to gain or loss thereon. It is usual in the sale of cloth, in transactions of mortgage, deposit, and Hoondees, in the purchase and sale of Ghee, spices, Goor, turmeric (Kirane) &c. in the purchase and sale of grain (bhoosa), in the purchase of houses and timber, in brokerage, in money-changing, and in agency of Hoondees.

In what is customary.

Agreement of partnership is generally concluded on personal knowledge of the party, seldom with a stranger. It is not customary to write security Khuts on entering into partnership. A partnership trade is carried on by several under the name of one, who is the head of the firm.

So Khuts not usual. Name of the head of the firm.

There is no limit to the number of partners; each takes a certain share in the trade, in the proportion of $\frac{1}{2}$ anna, 2, 4, or more annas (the whole being reckoned as 1 Rupee), and occasionally by consent of all a small proportion of the profits (say $\frac{1}{2}$ anna) is reserved for expenses in honor of some god. It is not usual for a working partner to receive a proportion of the profit and not be responsible for the loss, but it may so occasionally happen.

Every subordinate partner usually writes a Surkut-nama or partnership deed addressed to the head partner, in which he states

Then follows the subordinate partner’s signature, and occasionally also those of two witnesses. Each party keeps a copy. Verbal agreements of partnership are sometimes made, and sometimes an entry is made in the account book to the same effect. Occasionally one joint Deed is drawn up by all the subordinate partners, expressing the money deposited, and proportion of loss or gain accruing, addressed to the head partner.

Borrowed Capital.

The duties to be performed by each partner are prescribed either by the head partner, if the trade is carried on on his capital, or by common agreement, if all contribute capital. The interest account on capital advances is kept separately. Partners also carry on trade on capital borrowed from a Sahookar, either on bond, or joint or separate debit of their names in his books—Or the head partner borrows the money on his own responsibility. A partner either contributes capital, or labour, or both.

Bankruptcy

In cases of bankruptcy following trade on borrowed capital, as it is the most general custom for one person to borrow on his own account, the subordinate partners would not be liable to pay their quota of loss, unless they had jointly borrowed the money and made themselves jointly responsible ; this is sometimes done by two traders. But if any one of the partners, not the head, borrow money from a Sahookar under the name of the head partner i. e. of the firm, and the sum is entered as such in the partnership accounts, all are responsible (on a bankruptcy) according to their respective shares. The entry is thus made in the Sahookar’s books, “Paid to ——— (huste) by the hands of ———.” Tumsooks are not usual unless in cases of weak credit, when a Khut is drawn up in the name of the head, or of all the partners, or of each of them.

The duties of the head partner are to superintend the important purchases, sales, mortgages and deposits connected with the trade, to be answerable to the Sirkar when called on, and to overlook the whole establishment. His share in the trade is generally greater than that of the others. Of subordinate partners, one agrees to write and keep the home accounts, another to travel to make purchases and sales, another to collect money &c. Each has separate duties.

Duties of the head partner.

The partnership account book is one; all the working partners superintend the manner in which the accountant performs his duties, and those partners who advance capital only without actively engaging in the trade receive their shares, confiding in the integrity and intelligence of the rest. Errors in making out the profit and loss account are not usual, and are settled at the time, should they occur, and on the error or fraud being discovered, the party guilty is made responsible.

Of the accountant.

It is not usual for the head partner to take a Mokhtyar-nama from the subordinates, nor for them to agree verbally to what he may in future propose. It is a system of mutual confidence; the head partner on all matters of consequence asks the advice of the rest.

Mokhtyar nama not

Expences of salaries to Goomashtas, hire of shop or premises, charges for oil, paper &c, wages to servants, charges incurred by the partners on account of the trade, are deducted previously to a partition of the profit or loss. Sometimes a charge on account of personal servants is allowed to the head partner. A head Goomashta or several Goomashtas are entertained by the head partner after consulting the rest, and the expence is of course deducted as above. Also charges on account of vows by any partner to pay money to the shrine of a particular deity, if entered into for the benefit of the trading partnership, are deducted as above. Also fines imposed by the Sirkar

Deepoulee.

The accounts are examined every year at the Deepoulee a few days before or after Kartik Sood Prutipudha. According to the profit or loss which then may appear, the several partners either receive or pay their proportions at the time, or making a statement of the account, carry it on as before. Only in the sale of houses, and money changing, a settlement of accounts may take place daily, or on settling every separate contract.

A head partner may either send a Naik (head Goomashta) or go himself abroad and purchase goods &c. but he must be guided by the amount of the joint capital, otherwise by his extravagance and speculation those at home will undergo loss or ruin.

And should such absent partner purchase goods abroad on account of the firm and clandestinely send them for sale to his own house or elsewhere, such fraud will be matter of enquiry, and those concerned in it will be responsible. If however he agreed first with the rest to make the excursion on his own private account as well as on that of the firm, they cannot complain. The profit or loss accruing in consequence of a person sent by the head partner affects all the partners.

The head partner receives deposits and pledges,—it is not necessary for the depositor to advise the rest. An entry is made in the Wuhee, of the deposit and the object of it; should the firm thereafter become bankrupt, all the partners are responsible according to their proportions. Enquiry must however be instituted whether the head partner was a nan t bar or otherwise (Wastuwik); in the former case denaader alone responsible.

It is customary whenever the trade of the year has been profitable, to set apart a portion of the gains as the share of Ballajee (whose temple is at Triputee in the Komatuk) or Venkoba

Venkoba (a name of Vishnoo). Some set apart on this account one-third, one-fourth, others one-eighth or one-sixteenth, others five per cent. This money is set apart, and expended in alms and charitable expences by the head partner with the consent of and as agreed on by the rest, and is kept in his charge.

Losses by Government confiscation or Rajkrant, by theft, or by fire consuming the shop and premises employed in the trade, fall on all the partners. Also losses by fire consuming the dwelling house of the head partner, if adjoining the shop, not otherwise. If fraud be suspected, an investigation is held into fraudulent deposits or transactions for the party's own personal profit. In the same manner, losses on the road accruing to one of the partners (from Rajkrant, neglect, forgetfulness or fraud of another) travelling with money or goods, if not fraudulent are defrayed by all the partners according to their shares.

Should such travelling partner be killed on the road, the loss falls on all the surviving partners. If he have left a son capable of attending to business, his father's share is continued to him; and accounts of interest, profit and loss are made out, if necessary, by arbitration. Should the son be incapable, or should the deceased have left no son, it is usual for the survivors to pay a sum without strict calculation to his family, and take a Farikhut or release in full.

road.

Such travelling partner being sent to purchase cloths, he receives on departing a Jabta or Yad specifying the articles and prices. So in purchasing Kirane, the Jabta specifies the quantity and prices. Verbal directions are also customary. An intelligent traveller is allowed to make unspecified speculations which are afterwards approved by the rest, if entered into with due regard to the capital of the firm.

Should a head partner die, the surviving subordinates are bound to pay balances due to the creditors of the firm, even though they were not known to have been in the partnership, but but only according to their respective shares. The remainder must be paid to the creditors out of the deceased's estate.

Servants or

Persons who bring water or cook food are not in partnership, unless allowed a small share (one-half anna) of the profits as a maintenance by the head partner, being his relations but unfit for any other duty. Should the trade be unprofitable, their small proportion of loss would be defrayed by the head partner, or they may receive settled wages from three to five Rupees, or be paid in both ways. The other shares are distributed as at first settled, and without regard to comparative diligence &c.

Fraud of the

Should a head partner carry on the trade singly, (his other partners supplying capital only and not attending to the business from confidence in him,) and afterwards fraudulently open another trade on his own private account, transferring losses and bad debts to the partnership account, and profitable transactions to his own, on an investigation he will be obliged to repay the losses so occasioned. This species of fraud is not unusual.

of

Four partners trading together one advancing capital, one acting as head partner, and two performing the business of the firm, the former having agreed to give the two latter one-fourth or four annas of profits that might accrue in lieu of salary (roz-murra,)—after the first year the two working partners receive each 75 Rs. on a profit of 300 Rs.—After the 2d 25 Rs. on ditto of 100 Rs.—then after the third a year of large profits, say 5000 Rs. the former would not be allowed to pay them only 75 Rs. as in lieu of salary, but must act either strictly on the letter of the agreement, or on the same principles as they had done in the two former years.

Two partners commence trading, superintending shops in different places, but advancing equal capital, and agreeing to share profit and loss equally:—The profit and loss of the trade of each shop must then be estimated, and the whole gain or loss equally divided. Should one of them admit other partners with the consent of the other, the new partners share the whole gain or loss with the two original; if without the other's knowledge, they of course only share in the profit or loss falling to their principal, and have no connection with his original partner.

Should one or more of several partners die, arbitrators and respectable persons would decide on an examination of accounts what balance is due to the family, and Farikhuts are given on receiving it; after such full investigation, the accounts would not be demandable by a son on growing up, nor would a different estimate be admissible. But should the surviving partner receive a Farikhut merely on his own statement, the son on growing up has a right to inspect the accounts, and to receive any small balance that may be proved not to have been paid to his family.

a count on the death of a part-

Should one of several partners absent himself on his own affairs in another country, it is customary for him before his departure to leave his son, brother, or other person in his place, responsible for him. Should he not do so, but write a Farikhut of separation, or verbally state that from that day forward he and his former partners would have no dealings in partnership, it is of no consequence; from that day, or from the following Deepoulee, his partnership ceases, and he may receive the balance due to him whenever he may return. Should a partner after speaking with the head partner absent himself for a stated period, and exceed the time settled by several months, the partnership nevertheless goes on. On his continued absence, the head partner would write him a notice of its termination should he not return by a certain time; should he not send any reply the partnership account would be closed from the day of his receiving the notice. Should no notice be written, the partnership would continue at least till the period fixed on at departing for his return. But the absentee might in the event of his capital advanced not being repaid to him, claim interest and principal on his future return up to the day of its payment.

Should

Should a partner absent himself without consulting the head of the firm, the latter would write to him a notice that their partnership account would close by a certain period; if then he return by a day specified by himself, he continues in partnership; otherwise he ceases to be a partner from the following Deepoulee,* and the remaining partners with respectable arbitrators inspect the accounts, and fix the amount payable.

Should a partner be detained by violence, for instance, seized by the Sirkar † on any matter connected with the trade, as for refusing to pay a Dund or contribution, his partnership account would be allowed to continue till his return at liberty; but should it be proved that he had after obtaining his release lived without restraint for a long period, his claims on the partnership would cease from the day of his obtaining such release. Should he be apprehended on a matter of personal concern, as for any crime, the head partner writes him a notice, and should he return no reply, the partnership account ceases after the expiration of a year.* Should he be absent at that time, his wife or brother &c. receives the balance due to him of profit, with principal and interest, as may have been settled by arbitrators, and gives a Farikhut. Should he have no relations, the amount remains settled by the arbitrators as to profit or loss, and on his future return he may receive his capital and interest up to the time of his return. He is entitled to a year's profit or loss on his return whether or no there have been any arbitrated settlement.

Should a partner go on a pilgrimage after fixing a period for his return with the other partners, and should he delay such return for a long period, either party may write to the other fixing the present year as the period for closing the accounts. Should neither write, the accounts of profit and loss (exclusive of interest) should be made up to the Deepoulee* of the year in which the return was fixed.

Should

Should a partner after consulting with the rest go on an absence of a month or two, and should it be prolonged by sickness &c. to a year, if the parties agree by letter, the partnership account may go on ; if however he have no capital in the firm, the others will not agree to such prolonged absence, but will give him his share of profit and loss up to the specified period of his absence, and not beyond : in some cases however indulgence is given on this point, by favor of the head partner &c. Should he engage in trade while absent on such understanding, his profit or loss will be considered part of the common stock, and shared among all.

It sometimes happens that a head partner expends and consumes the gains of the whole concern deposited with him by the rest: on a bankruptcy then occurring, all the partners come on the head partner; and should he have no effects, they incur loss to the extent of the deposits.

Bankruptcy
from extravagance of the head partner.

It is customary for a man to advance money to a Sahookar on a written agreement to receive a small proportion of profits thereon as part of the Sahoo-kar's capital without being answerable for loss, and without receiving interest thereon. Such sum is to be repaid at the time specified, but is not demandable except at the period of the Deepoulee.

of trading profits.

It is customary on dissolving a partnership for the party leaving to write a Farikhut or deed of acquittance to the rest, which is sometimes witnessed. It expresses the amount of capital, interest, proportion of profit and loss &c. and states that from that day the one party has no claim on the other. If no Fa-rikhut is written, the party signs an entry in the Wuhee to the same effect.

Dissolution of Partnership.

In introducing a new partner the consent of all is of course necessary. It sometimes happens that a head partner persuades a person to advance a sum under the idea that he is taken into partnership, and makes an entry in the Wuhee of the receipt of — Rs. with or without interest. The advance would nevertheless

vertheless be considered a debt payable with or without interest. But if such entry in the Wuhee specifies that the person paying the money is admitted as a partner, the others, in the event of their not objecting to it at the time, would be bound to consider him as such.

Claims on
fraudulent Sa-
hookar.

Should a Sahookar make away with his constituents' money and keep no accounts, and after his death his son obtain wealth, the creditors of the father must prove their debts by bond &c. proved by comparisons of hand writing before arbitrators; and should it appear that the debts are just, and the accounts were fraudulently destroyed, the son would be bound to defray the whole debts, with interest. Some deduction may be made in the event of a long period having elapsed.

Intimation to Sahookar on opening Partnership.

In opening a partnership, it is usual to assemble some respectable traders and inform them who are the parties; but it is not usual to mention the amount of the shares. If required, such information may occasionally be given. It has never been usual to acquaint the Sirkar. In small partnerships of brokerage &c. the above intimation is unnecessary.

Period.

No particular month is prescribed for commencing a partnership, but it is necessary to do so at a propitious moment, astrologically determined.

Two partners borrow — Rs. from a Sahookar and make a profitable speculation. The Sahookar himself then enters into partnership with them, after which a bankruptcy ensues. In the event of one of the two subsequently making money, the Sahookar can only come on him for payment of a share of the money he may have advanced as a debt, with the interest thereon; if he agreed to advance money on chance of gain or loss only, or to enter into the trade on the chance of gain or loss on his former advance, or in view to receiving share of profit only without interest, he cannot come on them.

Deceased's Effects.

on his account, after writing to ascertain the fact, waiting six months or a year, the deceased's relations in order, or if none, his caste or the Sirkar (according to the custom of the caste) will be entitled to the balance of his property remaining in the Goomashta's hands. Arbitrators of the caste would collect all the proceeds of the deceased's estate, pay the Goomashta his salary (Wetun) and deliver over the balance to whom it may be determined.

Two brothers being in community put 5000 Rs. into a Sahookar's hands, in one payment (Khate) or in two separate equal payments from each; and a dispute afterwards occurring between them, should one charge the Sahookar not to pay over the other's share without his consent, it is not customary for the Sahookar to pay such share. Should the Sahookar afterwards become bankrupt, on the settlement of the dispute between the two brothers, if the one who gave the charge to the Sahookar is proved to have had a just claim, he will pay his brother his share of the deposit that may be recovered from the bankruptcy only; if his claim was disallowed, he is bound to pay him the half of the original deposit viz. 2500 Rupees with interest.

Partnerships in brokerage, Suraff-trading and house selling may be terminated by one party at any time at his option, he receiving his capital, interest, and share of profits. But in partnerships of Kirane and cloth selling, it would incur a loss to the trade were a partner to leave the firm at his option at any period; he is desired to leave a Goomashta to act for him in the interval, and at the following Deepoulee the accounts are made up and he receives his share. Otherwise on his refusing to do so, a valuation of all the goods is made, the debts and credits are set down, and the advance of capital made by the separating partner is repaid him in goods, or by Howale * on some debtor of the house. He would probably incur great loss on such an arrangement, P.

On

The term Wima is applied to a per centage on the value of articles conveyed from place to place, and insured against their loss or damage. It is also used to signify the articles insured. The insurer has not only to reimburse the owner for such loss or damage, but to subsist one or more attendants to accompany the goods on the road for their protection ; and in the carriage of gold, silver, jewels or cash, it is customary for the insurer to pay all the expenses of carriage also ; there being in general, owing to Hoondee transactions, no necessity to send the whole, the carriage of jewels is a trifling charge, and there are no land customs levied on those articles. Insurance is also paid at Poona on the carriage of cloths, cottons, silks, and shawls, merely against losses, and exclusive of cattle hire and land customs, respecting which the owner must make a separate arrangement. Insurance is also paid on the carriage of cattle, grain, metal pots &c. but not, here at least, to so great an extent. Losses insured against are, plunder by military bodies or robbers, damage or loss incurred by fire or water, by the carrier's negligence, by his being carried off by a tiger, or drowned in ford-

Sikh Country, Shawls are insured from thence at 6 to 10 per cent ad valorem. They are not otherwise procurable. Cloths &c. are insured at the same rates as Silver and Cash, exclusive of bullock hire and land customs.

Insurance is not undertaken for a longer distance than 100 Coss (200 miles) unless on property of a greater value than 1000 Rupees. Within that distance the value of goods whose safe carriage is insured varies from 100 to one lac Rupees.

The charges to the insurer are less if the owner or persons on his account accompany the goods ; they are enhanced by the number necessary as an armed escort. Exclusive of such charges, the principal sums defrayed by the insurer are on account of loss and damage to the property insured.

Persons may act as partners in receiving Insurance-premiums, being responsible for losses and charges in the proportions agreed on.

The valuation of the goods is made previously to their being sent, and in the event of their being lost, the sum so fixed is paid to the owner, (without interest) and after deducting $1\frac{1}{4}$ to two per cent thereon. The valuation fixed by the owner, whether greater or less than the real value of the goods, forms the basis of reimbursement in the event of loss or damage accruing. But greater than one-fourth excess or deficiency of the real real value is not allowed on Gold and Jewels. A still greater conformity to the real value is necessary in insuring money or Silver. It is customary among the Hindoostanee Sahookar insurers to make the valuation verbally; the owner presenting his packages to the insurer packed or sealed with a Yad of the contents kept by both parties. Among the Poona insurers there also prevails the custom of opening the packages and making a correct valuation of the articles.

The Sahookars of Poona who are insurers make no insurances on the carriage of goods by sea; nor is the custom known here of insurance of houses &c. against fire, nor of life insurance.

Insurers are bound to defray loss or damage, if they possess the means of doing so, even should their property have been partially confiscated by the Raja.

In case of property being sent not by the insurer's people but carried by the owner himself with or without associates on the part of the insurer, he would be required to prove by a letter from the Patell and Koolkurnee &c. of the nearest village, the fact of his having been robbed or of having lost his property in the mode stated by him before receiving the sum to which amount he had made the insurance.

Proof of loss

It is usual to enclose in the package a letter to the insurer's correspondent in the place to which it is to be sent, or a Yad of the articles, and the reply or receipt is afterwards shewn to the owner. The premium is paid either on sending off the articles, or on hearing of their safe arrival.

Yad and re-

The packages are sealed with the seal either of the insurer or owner, in order to prevent their being opened on the road. If however the carrier should contrive to extract some part of them, if the insurer previously inspected all the contents, he must defray the loss, and replace the articles; if he merely received a Yad of the contents, as of a certain number of jewels, he must replace any deficiency in the number on the arrival of the package, according to the valuation set by the owner on the lost jewel ;—if the insurer did not see the package closed and sealed, but received it in that state from the owner, he is not bound to reimburse him for any loss incurred by the exchange of the jewels sent for others of less value, or similar fraud committed by the carrier.

Traders in cloths &c. often travel in large companies ; all of them do not insure their property, but the insuring Sahookars pay the losses of those only who pay their insurance on departing, either on inspection of the goods, or simply on the statement of the trader as to their value, and the sum to the extent of which he intends to insure. The insuring Sahookar sends with the traders from 5 to 10 men of his own, or as many as are necessary. Losses incurred from neglect, delay in moving from a halting place, and subsequent robbery,—are reimbursed by the insurer, but the matter is investigated, and if it should be proved that the owner had made a false statement of loss, or had buried or otherwise concealed the property with a fraudulent intent to appropriate the sum insured, he would not of course receive any thing.

It is customary on some occasions for the owner to make a contract with the insurer, for the latter to pay him the value of the property (say jewels) either as settled on inspection, or submitted to the valuation of others, being himself chargeable with Insurance money. The jewels on their arrival are sold by the owner's correspondent (Urthee) and the produce paid to the Sahookar's correspondent. In this case, losses on the road fall on the Sahookar only. Should the value of the jewels be Rs. 5000, and Rs. 2000 only have been paid to the owner, whether damage or loss happen on the road or no, the Sahookar is bound to pay the owner the balance, deducting 2 per cent on the whole. This species of contract is called Dam Wima.

In

In common insurance, it may happen that the insurer having seen the package closed and sealed, and received a Yad of the contents at the owner's house, does not take it away with him on account of the lateness of the hour, but promises to send for it on the following morning. Should it happen to be stolen during the night, or lost while in the owner's possession, or while in charge of his servant carrying it to the insurer, the insurer is not bound to defray the loss. It is not however customary to take a Yad until the package is deposited in the insurer's house. If lost while in charge of the insurer's servant the insurer is responsible.

It is customary to make an entry in the Wuhee at the time of despatching insured packages of their description and amount to which they are insured; if after the owner's depositing the packages, and before such entry in the Wuhee, one of them should be lost by the negligence of the Mooneem or other Goomashta of the insurer who has the duty of receiving goods, the insurer would defray the loss, to the whole amount insured of the particular package without deduction:—Of course his servants would be responsible to him for their individual neglect. Should all the packages be insured for a certain sum as the value of the whole, the insurer would on the complaint of the owner send for the two packages back from the place to which they were sent and keep them himself, paying the owner the whole sum insured. In this case the insurer takes his chance as to the proceeds of the packages not lost.

Property coming from a distant place (say Dharwar) may be insured by the owner (at Poona) on advice from his Goomashta or correspondent, giving a Yad or statement of the property coming to him, and fixing the amount to which he will insure its safe carriage from the place where his Goomashta or correspondent resides. Whether a servant of the insurer is sent to take charge of the property or the owner's people bring it, the the insurer will (on clear proof of the loss or damage) pay for the same, deducting 2 per cent or less as before stated.

After intelligence has arrived of the departure of the property from Dharwar uninsured should a report be brought of its plunder or damage, the owner may if he please insure its value at 50 or 60 per cent on the value, the insurer taking his chance of the report proving a false one, or of paying the value on its proving true with the usual deduction.

In common insurances of property despatched from the place where the insurance is made, it is customary for the insurer to fix a certain period for its arrival, and to agree to give interest on the amount insured at the rate of from $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ a rupee per cent per mensem for the time that period may be exceeded. This is in compensation of loss to the owner on account of delay ; damages on the road are of course provided for by the insurance.

Property may be purchased from a Sahookar and sent to another country for sale, the value of the whole being Rupees 5000: the purchaser insuring its safe carriage to the value of Rupees 2500 on his own account, receives the amount of losses up to that sum; if he agreed to pay premium on Rupees 2500, the Sahookar and himself taking equal shares of losses, such contract also would hold good: this last is termed a partnership insurance.

Dhuneejog, where Atmaram pays a sum of money to Bapoo Moonee Sahookar at Poona, previously to his journey to Dharwar, receiving a Hoondee drawn by Bapoo Moonee on his correspondent or Urthee Krishnajeet Sahookar at Dharwar payable to himself or order.

Shahajog, where Atmaram pays the money to Bapoo at Poona, receiving a Hoondee drawn on Bapoo's Urthee at Dharwar in favor of his (Atmaram's) correspondent or nominee (Dyaram) there, being the bearer.

Nishajog, where the person to whom the money is made payable (Dyaram) is described in the body of the Hoondee, not being known to Krishnajeet.

Advice from the correspondent (Dyaram) (or Goomashita or partner) of Atmaram of payment of the money at Dharwar is called Jowab-i-Hoondee ; on account of which Atmaram pays to Bapoo Moonee 8 annas to two Rupees, according to the distance of the place, per cent.

When the drawer, in order to answer his Hoondce, sends gold, silver, or cash to his correspondent, such articles are called Lahune. This is said to be a general custom. No other articles are sent to answer Hoondces. In some cases the balance of debts and credits would render such carriage of bullion and coin unnecessary. Sometimes the drawer (Bapoo) sends to his correspondent (Krishnaje) in lieu of Lahune, another Hoondce drawn on a Sahookar of (say) Hyderabad, a debtor of his, payable to the order of Krishnaje, who then sells it in Dharwar for the amount, and the purchaser (indorser) obtains the money from the Hyderabad Sahookar on its being presented there for payment. Such Hoondce is termed Desawurchce Hoondce, Budulee Hoondce, and sometimes Bapoo Moonee has credit with Krishnaje to a certain amount by agreement: till his Hoondces drawn on the latter exceed which it is unnecessary to send Lahune (or Budulee Hoondce.)

The correspondent is entitled to his Hukshace or commission whether he receives bullion and cash, or Budulee Hoondces to answer Hoondces payable by him. In the latter case, a bill-broker is often employed to sell the Budulee Hoondce, who receives a brokerage (Dulalee) of one anna per cent on the amount of the Hoondce. The Hukshace and Dulalee is chargeable to the drawer.

Although it is not customary to draw Hoondees in sets, on hearing of the loss of a Hoondee on the road by theft &c. it is customary to write a Pet to this effect, "On—I gave a Hoondee on you for——; in consequence of its having been lost, I have written this Pet. You will therefore give Rupees —— as written in that Hoondee."—Should the Pet be lost, it is usual to give a Pur-pet written in the same form, mentioning the Hoondee and Pet. And on the three first being lost or stolen, a Jab, mentioning the Hoondee Pet and Pur-pet, to the same purport. The bearer of the Hoondee before receiving payment from Krishnajece must prove his identity with the payer mentioned, by producing an evidence thereof (Khatirjumma) or Zamin. If on such apparent proof Krishnajece should pay the money to the wrong person, the thief for example, he must nevertheless pay the bearer of the Pet or Pur-pet the money specified, and come on the person to whom he paid the money for reimbursement. If he cannot find him or his security the loss falls on Krishnajece.

Should

Should Dyaram on account of the delay of the Hoondce on the road, request Atmaram to send a Pet, on his doing so, the holder of the Pet does not by custom sell it :—Should he do so, and the new holder present it to Krishnajece for payment (Krishnajece having before such presentation paid the money on the Hoondce itself presented by Dyaram) he would not pay it again on the Pet unless from excessive carelessness or not taking Khatirjumma, but in any case the loss if any falls on himself, not on Bapoo Moonee. Krishnajece would come on the bearer of the Pet for the principal with interest at 8 to 12 annas, and the loss of the latter would be a punishment for not having known or acted up to the custom of not selling the Pet.

It is not customary for Krishnajece to decline paying the Hoondce at the time specified if the credit of the drawer is well known to him ; but if the drawer is unknown, he would require Lahune, Budule Hoondces, or other Khatirjumma before payment.

If Krishnajece is a smaller Sahookar, and the Lahune consignment should be delayed beyond the time fixed for paying the Hoondce, he requests the delay of a day or two. On the Lahune not arriving, from inability or unwillingness to pay, the Hoondce would be returned to Dyaram, by him sent to Atmaram, and by him to the drawer. Otherwise on its arrival, the money is paid to Dyaram with interest for the days which have elapsed above the time fixed in the Hoondce at 8 annas to 12 annas per cent per mensem, and Krishnajece afterwards recovers the money from the drawer Bapoo Moonee. But should the Hoondce have been forwarded as drawn by Bapoo Moonee through a Goomashta of Krishnajece resident at Poona whatever its amount may be, and whether or not accompanied by Lahune, Budule Hoondces or Khatirjumma, Krishnajece is bound to pay the sum to the payer Dyaram, having merely ascertained that Atmaram had paid the original money in Poona.

* The allowance on account of different coins is properly speaking Butta, but the Butta is included in the Hoondunawul or rate of exchange. Exclusive of butta, Hoondunawul varies on account of the distance, expence of carriage of the Lahore consignment, its insurance, interest, and other charges attending the contract. In the interior, besides the balance of trade, Government remittances often greatly affect the rate of exchange, so as occasionally to counteract the Butta on the coins.

It is not customary for a correspondent in Poona, Bapoo Moonee, to purchase bills on Hyderabad and send them to his correspondent in Dharwar whenever the rate of exchange is favorable,—unless they have a specific agreement to that effect, or a particular order for bills is sent from Dharwar with a consignment to answer it. If in case of such agreement but before the receipt of such particular order, Bapoo Moonee should purchase bills on Hyderabad from Atmaram, send them to Dharwar,

Dharwar, and they should be afterwards returned dishonored from Hyderabad owing to the bankruptcy of Atmaram's correspondent there, Bapoo Moonee would be entitled to claim from Atmaram the principal, interest, Azora and Nukraee. Should Atmaram be bankrupt, and Krishnaje's name have been written in the Hoondree as the Rakhile, (or person on whose account the Hoondree was drawn and from whom the money for it had been received) his will be the loss, even though he should have written no specific order on the occasion in question.

Should the bearer of a Hoondree payable to himself die on the road, or the payee die before receiving the money, his heirs should be discovered, and the money paid to them. If within two years they can be nowhere found, the Sahookar who has received the amount of the Hoondree should build a temple or expend it in charity.—Should he keep the money himself, he will suffer the consequences of sin: such money would not be taken by the Sirkar.

Payment
inver drawn.

Should a Hoondree not presented for payment be after two years returned to the drawer, the original payee (Atmaram) having in the interval died, the money should be paid to the heirs of the latter, but without interest unless Atmaram's correspondent Dyaram should have agreed to allow the money to remain in deposit in Krishnaje's hands, when the amount would be debited in Krishnaje's accounts to Bapoo Moonee, and Krishnaje would alone be answerable for the subsequent payment. Otherwise the Hoondree remaining unpresented (Koree) Atmaram's heirs would come on Krishnaje, and in default of his paying the money, on Bapoo Moonee, P.

The drawer is responsible if with a view to profit he draws for more than he is authorized to do, and the Hoondree is lost or in consequence dishonored, D.*

Sahookars purchasing grain of the ryots at from 4 to 6 pylees per rupee, put on the resale a charge of 4 to 8 rupees per pulla of 120 seers called Urthee. It is customary in Poona for retailers to purchase grain and other articles from these Sahookars, and not directly from the ryots.

The brokerage on the sale of horses and other animals, also on ginger, dates and spices depends on mutual agreement. It is an immemorial custom not to levy brokerage nor custom duties on cows.

Persons negotiating a marriage, if successful, often receive from 100 to 1000 rupees, according to the difficulty of the case and the circumstances of the parties.

Brokers employed by Sahookars to retail property are answerable to them for the purchase money of all articles transferred to them, and are entitled to any excess they may obtain over the price agreed upon with their employer.

Should

BROKERAGE.

Should the broker through neglect or roguery sell any goods not intended for sale, the owner has no claim for restitution on the purchaser, but the latter must prove the sale by accounts or witnesses.

Fraud of do.

The owner of property, on discovering it to have been sold without his consent in the bazar or elsewhere, may oblige the ~~seller~~ to point out the person from whom he purchased it, or restore the property, provided the seller has no commission as broker or agent, P.

Sale without ownership.

There are three sorts of Dulals—one who receives a per centage (say $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent) on bringing the purchaser and seller acquainted. Another who actually makes the purchase, receiving about one anna or $6\frac{1}{4}$ per cent; a third who brings customers and holds himself responsible for the payment; the last receives a higher premium in proportion to the risk he incurs, S.

Different
kers.

A Sahookar agreeing with a man to procure him articles on a per centage cannot refuse to take them on account of delay in delivery, occasioned by rain &c. though if occasioned by neglect of the contractor he is answerable. Goods purchased through such contractor would not be returnable to the seller on the Sahookar countermanding his commission, K.

Delay in de-

Sahookars and Suraffs sometimes enter into partnership, the latter engaging to deposit his bags of coin every evening with the former. Should loss occur by carelessness in the house of either, he would be responsible, without interest; losses by robbery in the street, would be borne equally. A special agreement is usual, D.

Suraffs make great profit in selling pice. They purchase pice at the mint at 73, or from gardeners, oilmen and petty traders at 79 per rupee, and sell them at 72—Ryots and others selling their gold and silver ornaments to Suraffs receive less than the ordinary price, often 2 rupees per tola of gold (15 for 17 rupees), and are paid in silver coins of less current value. Butta on the different coins is another large source of profit; but Suraffs.

have generally to pay interest and Mūnotee on borrowed capital, besides the hire of a shop from 4 annas to 3 Rupees per mensem, Bytuk payable to the Sirkar (1 pice per diem), alms to Fuqueers &c. P.

In exchanging copper for silver, large Suraffs charge a Dumree $\frac{1}{256}$ th of a rupee, and even an Adela $\frac{1}{128}$ th. The price of copper however constantly varies with the supply and demand in the market, the former of which is carefully regulated by those interested. In receiving payments, they take one Dumree or Adela above the price of the day, in making payments they give one less. They refuse coins with the slightest blemish, or take them at a lower rate, paying away the same coins at par. The great Suraffs advance copper to the smaller money-changers, who receive 1 pice or $\frac{1}{72}$ of a rupee for giving change.—These are in fact subordinate agents of the larger houses, receiving from 20 to 25 Rupees' worth of copper at a time. Loans to shopkeepers are frequently made repayable weekly in copper; a fund is hence raised for the traffic of the money-changer.

The evils resulting from this system will always continue so long as there exists no standard coin in general circulation, S.

BANKRUPTCY.

Inability on the part of Sahookars and traders to pay their creditors arises in this country from numerous causes independently of fraud. Such are the destruction of property by fire, flood or shipwreck, the loss of property uninsured on carriage, the failure of trading speculations, the falling in price of goods kept for sale. Under the Native Governments advances to chiefs and Sirdars, either on account of warlike equipments and enlistments, or for other expences, were frequently not repaid at the time agreed on, if at all, under pretence of the failure of the military expedition and the non-performance of the Sirkar's promises to themselves.—Rich Sahookars were also on frivolous accusations accusations obliged to pay fines to Government or furnish them with forced loans. Advances made to Moamlutdars, inferior officers and ryots, often remained unpaid on account of failure of crops, plunder and exaction.

Fraudulent Sahookars under the Native Government, after neglecting their accounts or wilfully making false entries and balances, drawing Hoondees afterwards dishonored, and receiving large deposits as bankers, absconded with the money and took refuge with a powerful Sirdar.

Fraudulent

It has been customary for the Sahookar himself (in the former case) to represent the constant Tukazu he underwent to Government. The Sirkar authorities then placed men in charge of the Sahookar's property and house, for the collection of his debts and the payment of all or a proportionate part of the claims against him. A man becoming bankrupt signifies his inability to answer demands by placing a light on a small mound of cowdung at his door, himself leaving the house, but not his family. If he shut himself up in the house and deny himself to his creditors, give bills on merchants which are afterwards dishonored, and refuse to pay the amount when protested, or continue to evade payments of money due, the creditors assemble and make arrangements for the collection of debts and assets, and dividing the amount, S. By Government authority all the bankrupt's books, papers &c. may be seized and his house broken open for that purpose, S. The creditors, or several of the most respectable of them, then assemble, and calling the bankrupt before them enquire into his debts and assets and the causes of his insolvency. All mortgages are if possible paid off, otherwise pledges are generally sold, D. If not redeemed, the pledgor can only share the proceeds with the other creditors, S. Deposits of cash are accounted for. If necessary, the creditors would make Tukazu on the individual with whom the bankrupt has taken refuge ; the expence to be borne by agreement among the creditors sending after him, P.

D. K. If the assets are sufficient to pay off principal but not interest of the respective debts, at various rates, the interest on all the debts is reduced to the same rate ; (K.) but should there be a surplus, the creditor at higher rate of interest receives a larger proportion on that account, D.

There is no preference in paying the creditors to those of higher caste, as prescribed in the Sastru, D. P. A bankrupt becoming so by misfortune is allowed to keep necessary articles of furniture and wearing apparel, S.

If one creditor is absent on a pilgrimage his share is to be kept in deposit till his return, D. K.

Any of the creditors refusing to receive the dividend, or any absentees whose shares may not be kept in deposit, take their chance for future payment from any property the bankrupt may subsequently acquire, P. The same rule holds on the bankrupt's absconding. His person is also liable to be seized on his return, S.

Moveables of the bankrupt are generally sold, sometimes shared. Even the wife's jewels are not exempted, contrary to the Sastru. But a Wuttun or immoveable property belonging to the bankrupt is not sold or mortgaged ; the annual proceeds only are given up in discharge of debts, P.

Persons not trading becoming insolvent from want of property, cannot benefit by the customary rules in cases of bankruptcy unless by consent of their creditors. Without an acquittance in either case the insolvent is liable to be sued again for the balance of the debt, though generally for the principal only, from the day on which the goods were seized. If property is expected to be forthcoming, the creditors may procure the continued imprisonment of the debtor, S, though this was not usual under the Native Government.

OF THE PARTIES, AND CONSENT OF WHOM NECESSARY.

1. Marriage must be contracted with a girl of the same cast, of a different Gotr (adnam of a Rishce's lineage) and whose age is less than that of the intended husband. Nor can any one marry his mother; sister; daughter; father's brother's,† or sister's daughter; his mother's brother's, or sister's daughter; or his own brother's or

* This is not a universal cause of breaking off the contract, but it is considered right to do so in the Brahman and higher castes. The practice of giving Hoonda, money and jewels, on either side, is pretty general, tho' reprobated by the Sastrus; the sums given, vary according to the beauty of the girl, the age of the intended husband and the fortune of the parties.

or sister's daughter; tho' the Gotr is a different one in some of these cases, (the wife by marriage taking the adnam of the husband). The Brahmuns cannot intermarry even with the lineage of the brothers of their Rishee, nor with any Sugotr or connection within 3 or 4 degrees. But cases occur among the Tylung Brahmuns of marriage with a sister's daughter and here occasionally among the Desust with a mother's brother's daughter; but such marriages are irregular and only tolerated from the poverty of the parties and consequent difficulty of marrying the girls. The D. Josee, Kacharee, and Lukheree mention 3 prohibited relations; daughters of a mother's brother or sister and Sugotry: also the Moolangar mention those of the same adnam, and sister's daughters. The Brahmunjace and R. Josee marry their mother's brother's daughter. The Kykaree marry the daughter of a mother's brother, not of a mother's sister. The Kast do not marry their mother's brother's daughter.

2. Vide (1) Marriages are contracted, in preference between families who have intermarried for several previous generations.

The age of the girl should be less than that of the intended husband; and the marriage should be concluded before the Shanee. The Burhace caste stated that marriages may be concluded with a girl whose age is under 20.

1. Marriage is occasionally deferred till after that period from poverty or temporary exclusion of the family from caste privileges, or inability to procure a husband answering all the requisites of caste, Gotur, astrological conformity &c.

from Noul- In marriages of Brahmuns, the male must have been previously invested with the Brahminical thread, and the marriage ceremonies performed as ordained by the sastrus; the God, fire, and a few Brahmins being present as witnesses of the solemnization. On the fourth day the idol is removed from the elevated situation which it holds during these ceremonies, and the parties take their leave; this latter rite is called nagolee.

A marriage performed, as above agreeably to the sastrus, cannot be annulled. Four days is the time usually required to go through the ceremonies, though where a sufficient reason may exist to warrant a departure from this established rule, the whole of the ceremonies may be performed in one day, but in no case can any one of the Rites be remitted; such a circumstance being sufficient to invalidate the marriage.

The Bunyans observe the same ceremonies as Brahmuns though they sometimes take sixteen days to complete them.

The Jyn caste also observe the same ceremonies as the Rajpoots which they perform according to the rules laid down in the sacred writings of the caste called the Boodhmuth sastru.

The Koorumutrul caste observe the same rites on a marriage as the Punchall caste.

In many castes which do not tolerate the Nikka the Brahminical ceremony of marriage is observed. Brahmuns are obliged to act up to the letter of the Sastrus, but in other castes the rules of the Sastrus are modified by local usages and the Custom of the country.

The lower castes moreover do not consult the sastrus in performing the subsequent ceremony of the Phulsobun, but merely imitate as far as they can, the Brahmuns who are guided on that occasion as well as at the Shadee by the Sastrus,

The Nikka being permitted in the Soodru Caste its members do not at their marriages consult the stars, nor do they observe the ceremonies of the moonj, difference of Gotru is not necessary, nor the presence of fire. Their marriage ceremonies are performed thus. The Bride and Bridegroom are shewn to each other. The caste of both is ascertained to be the same, and the consent of the Parents to the union duly obtained. The ceremony of betrothing is then performed as follows.

A number of the caste assemble, in whose presence the Parents mutually promise their children in marriage, Sugar and Betel are distributed to the assembly,

* These are replies to queries prepared by Mr. J. Warden, from 2 Brahmuns at Noulgeond and Dummull, in the service of Government. "The former is known in the vicinity of Dharwar as a man of talent and general information, and the latter is a Bhut. This information may be therefore relied on as correct."

bly, the betrothed female is decked out with ornaments and new clothes presented to her by the parents of her betrothed husband, and finally a period is fixed for the Solemnization of the marriage, which is performed accordingly ; and on the fourth day the Nagolee or ceremony of taking leave is performed, It is not necessary in the Soodru Caste to perform the Phulsobun, though where either party can afford it, they often imitate the Brahmuns in this particular.

If parties wish to give entertainments at Weddings, there is no objection to their doing it; the bridegroom or his parents usually decorate the bride with new clothes and ornaments, and when her parents are opulent they on their part often present their Son-in-law as a Dowry with cash, clothes, household utensils, Elephants, horses, cattle, enam Lands or even villages, according to their ability. A marriage once performed according to the rules laid down in the Sastrus as aforementioned, cannot in any caste be annulled.

Answer from Dum-mull.

1. The female being selected.
2. Poonyawachun is performed.
3. The Muntupdeo is brought and deposited in the house.
4. The Nandeehu rite is performed.
5. The Gutukarstarpun.
6. The Muddoopurk. *
7. The Soomoorth achopun.
8. The Kunyadan.
9. The making a mutual Vow to be true and faithful to each other through life.
10. Kunyapaneegram.
11. Kunkunbundun.

* The ceremony of rice throwing described in a subsequent part of this answer.

18. Lajahom.
19. Dhoorvaaroondithee Duraun.
20. Sheshahom.
21. Nakballee.

The above are the ceremonies to be observed at a Shadee; those for the Phulsobun or ceremony observed upon the female's attaining the age of puberty are as follows.

1. Poonyawachun.
2. Gurbadhan Sunkul.
3. Hom.
4. Attiring in New clothes.
5. Phul Dan.

6. Ghurpurwurush.

The Bunyan caste in their marriage ceremonies substitute for Lajahom, Shesh hom and Suptapudeethe following rites ;

1. Oongur Phulpooja.
2. Kunya purmeswuree pooja.
3. Naguswuree pooja.
4. Lekh pooja.
5. Balnagur pooja.
6. Gunga ditto.
7. Gotur ditto.
8. Bhaskuracharee pooja

and

9. Irunnee Ditto

To the ceremonies observed by Brahmuns, the Punchallee cast adds that of Kalleekapooja

The Goozeratees follow the same forms as the Punchallees with the exception that they substitute for Kalleekapooja the Phoordurrapooja and Krishna Deotapooja.

The Brahmuns and Kshutree caste make use of the ved Muntrus and the Vys Punchall Goojur, of the Pooran muntrus in their marriage ceremonies.

Turneric

Turmeric and Oil mixed together are rubbed over the bodies of the man and woman, who are then bathed, and covered with a Blanket which is not taken off till the close of the marriage ceremony, when a feast is given to the Jnugums and the rest of the caste. Twenty two twigs of the Holy figtree being then procured, 4 new earthen vessels are placed in 4 sides of a square (East, West, North, and South,) and a cord passed round them, so as to form an enclosure, in which the man and woman and their relatives being seated, anoint themselves with Oil, bathe and eat their meal. The officiating priest is then seated on a stool with the persons to be married and 5 small vessels being placed before him, he consecrates the "mungul soothur," or small silk thread (to which a small gold ornament is appended) worn light round the neck by married Women as a token that they are married, and which on the death of the husband, is taken off and broken; this the Gunacharee, Stawur Dya, Mutputtee and the Bridegroom's Gooroo, then touch with their hands, and deliver to the man, who fastens it on the woman's neck; the atchhooturpun ceremony is then performed; a piece of thread being fastened to a Pan beerce, it is attached to the woman's wrist, she is then adorned with a chaplet of flowers, and with the bridegroom paraded through the streets mounted on bullocks; the whole being concluded by the nagole or leave taking ceremony: a matrimonial union thus formed is indissoluble.

The only ceremony observed by the Lingayet caste at the Shanee or the period of the females attaining a state of puberty is, to cause the man and woman to be bathed, their parents at the same time exchanging presents and giving a feast to the caste.

The marriage ceremonials observed by the Dhungur, Lohar, Koombhar, Hujjam, or Nhawee, Dhobee, or Purit, Koorwur and other inferior castes are as follows;

On the first day the betrothed are anointed with turmeric, and Oil and then bathed-on the second day they worship their god and in company with their assembled relations partake of a Dinner. On the third day the couple are carried about the house on a person's shoulders and afterwards bathed, the "Bahasing" or chaplet being then tied on, they mounted on Bullocks proceed to the temple sacred to the tutelary God of their caste whom they worship accordingly. The man upon their return is made to stand on a grinding stone and the woman on a basket of Rice with a curtain between them, the other persons present scattering at the same time a quantity of coloured Rice over their heads, and tying a bracelet on the right wrist of the man and the left of the woman; the man then fastens the Mungul Soothur round the female's neck, and both having tied a small quantity of Sugar and spice in a corner of their clothes, a nose-ring is put into a zinc vessel containing rice, into which both dive their hands in search of it, and the one who finds it deposits it in the hand of the other; this ceremony having been gone through, three several times, the whole concludes by the local astrologer immersing the nose-ring in a Cup of Water which is sprinkled over the man and woman.

The same ceremonies are observed on the Shanee by these as by the Lingayets as mentioned above; other inferior castes observe the above rites, with the following slight difference viz.

In the Dher caste the Chulevadee scatters the rice over the heads of the couple. In the Chambhar caste, the Poojaree performs this task, and the man and woman parade on Horseback or if a horse be not procurable, on foot, the Bullock not being used by the Chambhar caste in Marriage ceremonies.

After the Magune and before the Marriage, should it be discovered that either is of a lower caste, or has lost caste, or that the stars are not favorable to the union, or that the man is impotent, or that the parties are of the same Gotr, the marriage is broken off, and should any money (Hoonda) have been given to the other party by the girl's father, it is returned: should the marriage have taken place before such discovery, the presents of clothes and utensils given at the time of marriage are not returned: An agreement to pay Hoonda money is sometimes carried into effect, sometimes not; should either the bride or bridegroom die in the interval between marriage and Cohabitation, the Hoonda already paid is not repaid, and that remaining unpaid is generally not exacted. In this case the husband may marry again, the girl may form Pat (except in Brahmun and other higher castes,) If impotence is discovered after marriage, and before Shantee, the girl with the Consent of her caste may form Pat. (58.) ON THE CAUSES OF PARTITION.

1. The causes of partition of property among a father and his sons tho' not general are quarrels of the parties or the extravagance of one of the number; one son may receive his share from his father, the others remaining with property in common as before, and the sons take what the father freely gives them; brothers usually separate on account of the quarrelling of their wives, the appropriation of an undue share of the proceeds by one, or the refusal of one to listen to the advice of the rest.

2. The shares of the father and sons on a partition are not equal. The son is to take what the father is pleased to give; another son remaining with the father, or born subsequently to the dismissal of the former, will take what re- the father's death paying the father's debts. There are few Wuttundars

3. The son has no right to take a share from his father; the father gives at plea- sure to his son, and should another son be afterwards born, the debts and inheri- tance will be divided equally between them on the father's death.

4. The father and son's shares on a partition are equal; a son born after- wards, or a 2d son remaining with the father, will on his death take the remain- ing Property being chargeable with the debts.

5. The son takes what the father is pleased to give him (Vide Partition between

6. The father is absolute in disposing of Property acquired by himself and receives a larger share of that acquired by his sons.

7. The father and son do not divide property in general. In such case a son born after partition would take the father's remaining property, and pay his debts without connection with the separated Son.

8. On the birth of another son as in (4). But should 2 sons be afterwards born the Wuttun should be equally divided between the 3.

By the answers of 75 castes it appears that the adopted Son is on the same foot- ing as one begotten vizt. he has no share de jure on quarrelling and separating from his father, but must take what the father is pleased to give him.

1. A son has no right to demand a partition from his father, so long as the latter conduct himself according to good custom (not being sane in mind and not a spendthrift,) whether as to Immoveable or Moveables, Hereditary or ac- quired Property. What the father freely gives, the son may take. But should at any time the father begin to act improperly, the son must make arrangements for preserving the family Property, and giving his father maintenance with filial obedience.

- All the Castes. The non performance of the Kreea, Sraddh and Sootuk does not affect the inheritance, but merely the purity of the party refusing to perform what is considered a religious duty. Nor does the actual performer, whether by order of the heir or the Caste, become thereby entitled to a share in the Inheritance, he only receives a Turban or other present as heir.
- 1. Jungum. The deceased obtains Gutee (happiness after death) by the performance of Kreea by his heir.
- 1. Panchal Sonar. Should a near relation be disabled from sickness, he should appoint the deceased's sister's or daughter's son to perform his kreea in his stead.
- 55. Castes. The kreea is usually performed according to the orders of the Jeece, the expense varies according to the property of the deceased and the ability of the heir, it being usual if he can afford it to give alms and an entertainment to the Caste.
- 1. Marwarce. Among the Jyns, it is not customary to perform kreea in the Oswal and Surawungee Castes. Among the Ugurwale, Wancees, &c. the son performs the ceremonies; if none, the Caste or daughter, or her son, or any one of the family.

1. If one of several relations die without sons, the widow is entitled to an equal share with the brothers, and she is permitted to adopt and to give away in Dhurma &c. any part of that share. But she is not entitled to any thing in the event of her taking to vicious courses, or living separately from her husband's relations.

2. The same as (1). But a widow cannot give away part of Immoveable Property so coming to her share, without the consent of her husband's relations.

3. The widow is not entitled to a share, but if she adopt a son from the family of a near relation she receives food and clothing, and is allowed to give alms &c. while residing with her husband's relations. If she lives separately, she receives an allowance for food only, and is deprived of this in the event of living disorderly.

4. The same as (3); with the exception, that it is not customary for a widow to adopt a son.

5. The same as (1); with the same exception that a widow does not adopt.

6. The same as (1). The widow is not allowed to dispose of her whole share.

7. Do. The widow can give a small part

8. A widow is only entitled to food and clothing; she may adopt if ordered by her husband to do so before his death; she may in that case give alms &c. out of the proceeds of the Wuttun, or moveables; but may not give away the share of the Wuttun to which she then succeeds in right of her son; she is not entitled to the management of the Wuttun; she receives food and clothing, tho' living separately and addicted to vicious courses.

In the castes which allow of a widow's marrying again (Pat) should she have before been entitled to a share, she gives it up to her husband's relations from whom she receives nothing after such marriage. They give her a bewaris chit on the occasion. After an adoption, no widow can marry.

9. A widow is only entitled to moveables, she should live with the relations on equal terms with them &c. (as in 1). 1. Koonbee.

(I.) On the death of one of a family after having received his partitioned share, without sons, but leaving a widow or daughter; if a Wuttundar.

1. The younger brother should perform the Kreea, or should there be none, the elder; the brothers should take shares of the Wuttun, giving from the proceeds maintenance and clothes to the widow and daughters, and paying the marriage expenses of the latter, according to their ability, and performing the duties of the Wuttun. 2. Wywharee Jossee, Goluk.

2. The marriage expenses of the daughters are to be first provided for; the deceased's share of the Wuttun with that deduction is to be given to the widow, who may perform her husband's Kreea by a Goomashta (Dhumpootr)*; or her adopted son may perform it, otherwise the brother. 2. Kan. Sonar, Mang.

3. The widow may direct any one of the brothers to perform the service of the wuttun; she is at liberty to give the wuttun to one of them; should there be no widow, the brother shall perform the kreea, and all of them after paying the daughter's marriage expenses share the remaining property equally. 1. Lohar.

4. The widow is heir to the husband's wuttun; should there be no widow, the brothers take equal shares after paying the daughter's marriage expenses out of the estate, and perform the duties of the wuttun. 18. APPENDIX. B.
ON THE CUSTOMS OF GOSAWEES OR GOSAEENS.

ON THE CUSTOMS OF GOSAWEES OR GOSAEENS.

Their Origin.

1. A Gosawee, as may be discovered from the appellation, which is a compound of the sunskrit word गो (Go) passion and स्वामी (Swamee) master was originally a person who, in honor of God and for the benefit of his own soul, had so completely mastered his passions as to be able to devote his whole life to the exercise of the strictest devotion, and most rigid ansterities.

2. The founder of the sect, according to the traditions of the Gosaweets themselves, was Sunkur Achary whose principal disciples are the Brahmins of the Siw order. The Gosaweets accordingly worship that deity in the shape of the Lingum; as the Byragees, the other kind of Indian devotees, do Vishnoo, in his incarnation of Ram. Sunkur Acharye in his Gosawee character, nominated four chelas or disciples named 1st Neera Troteeka Achary, 2d Shringee Rushee Pritvee Oodha Achary, 3d Dhurmbootee Swuroop Achary, 4th Pudum Achary.

3. Neera Troteeka then chose three disciples immediately subordinate to himself vizt. Geeree, Sagur, and Purwut. Shringee Rushee Pritvee Oodha Achary had also three followers, named Pooree, Suruswuttee and Bharuttee, Dhumbootee Swuroop and Pudma had only two followers each, the names of those of the former were Teert and Asrun; and of the latter Bun and Urrun,

4. The four disciples of Sunkur Achary provided for the performance of the discipline they had imposed upon themselves by the establishment of four muths or temples in four different quarters. The first was situated in the north, the 2d in the South, the third in the West, and the 4th vizt. that of Pudum Achary, in the East.

5. These establishments are said to have been afterwards subdivided, and the fraternity then consisted, as it does at the present time, of ten different sects composed of the followers of the above mentioned ten persons appointed to be disciples to the four Gosaweets who established their muths in the four different quarters: each sect bears the name of the person of whose followers it professes to be composed; thus, there is the Sagur sect, the Purwut sect, the Pooree sect, and so on. The whole are equal in rank, one having no objection to eat with the other. In the early periods of the institution of the order, Gosaweets supported themselves by the alms they received from good men.

6. In process of time the fraternity became less distinguished for their devotion than their ancestors, and some of the disciples commenced trading or followed the profession of Arms; while others, wandering still further from the road they professed to follow, formed matrimonial connections, and became in every respect as worldly as their neighbours. The latter in consequence are not acknowledged as brethren at all except in the Dukhun.

7. Those

* To compensate the good Gosawee for the fallen state of these apostates, some are still found to be sufficiently devout to deserve the name of P'urumbonsh or "the most devout of all Devotees." The hearts of these men are said to be as unspotted as the feathers of the sacred Honsh whose name they bear, and their mind so unceasingly abstracted in the contemplation of the Deity as to be able to raise their bodies from the Earth into the air.

7. Those Gosaweess who still adhere to the ancient land marks of their order are called Dundee or pilgrims (literally mendicants who carry a staff): the traders are distinguished by the name of Dunglees and the married Gosaweess are called Churbaree Gosaweess: as the latter no longer profess to be guided by the original laws of their order, they will be spoken of separately.

8. All Gosaweess live in buildings called muths or Temples, those especially devoted to purposes of worship are called Purumpuragut muths, or ancient temples descending from generation to generation; the others are simple dwellings.

9. The written laws by which Gosaweess are professedly guided are the Dhurm and Munoo Shasturs: all questions however relating to the Internal administration and discipline of the order are decided by an assembly called the Dusname which should consist of the disciples of the ten Founders from whom they take their names, but as in some places members of each sect are not to be found, as many as there may happen to be are authorized to meet, their decisions being as irrevocable as those of a perfect assembly: from the dusname there is no appeal. In the event of a difference of opinion occurring among the members of the assembly, it is usual to convene a grand meeting of the residents in the surrounding country, whose opinion decides the point at issue, provided it has not in the mean time been settled, as it is very desirable in all cases that it should be, by the original referees.

10. The laws of the fraternity are said to be most correctly expounded at Benares, Jhansee, and Hyderabad, and least so at Poona, the maladministration, for several years under the Mahatta Government, of the empire of which this was the capital, having it is said induced a relaxation of principle on the part of the Gosaweess and occasionally actuated the dusname to give opinions at variance with those of the same assembly at other places, altho' the customs and privileges of the order are avowedly similar in all parts of India where the members of it are to be found.

11. If any member of a muth be particularly distinguished by his acts of hospitality, veneration for his ancestors, and a life of morality he receives from the dusname, the honorary title of Muhunt. This distinction is not to be purchased at any other price, neither riches nor length of years giving any claim to it, if unaccompanied by the qualities mentioned. There can only be one mohunt in a muth and his authority does not extend beyond the limits of his own establishment. The dusname being absolute may at any time deprive the mohunt of his honorary degree if he shall appear to the assembly to have ceased to deserve it. It is generally conferred upon the Gooroos of Muths who are the abbots of the Purumpuragut muths or the monasteries, and supreme members of the muths used as dwellings.

12. Every Gosawee calls the person who chose him for his disciple his Gooroo* or spiritual Master; of these Gooroos there may be many in one muth whose respective tive cheelas or disciples are subordinate to them, while they as well as their disciples are subject to the authority of the head of the establishment who is called the Gooroo of the muth. This person has considerable power over his disciples, having the whole internal administration of the establishment. He can expel any disciple who may be found guilty of misappropriating the common property, of gambling, of drunkenness, of fornication, or contempt of his authority. If his orders be disobeyed they are enforced by the assembly of the Dusname, which has appellate Jurisdiction in all such cases.

* It may here be observed that whatever is said of the powers of the Gooroo of a muth applies also to the authority of any Gosawee who has pupils or Disciples of his own in so far -- under such circumstances he can exercise it.

13. If on the other hand the Gooroo establish any bye laws for his muth subversive of the fundamental principles of the order, he may be dismissed by the authority of the dusname, which will nominate his successor from among his disciples, or leave it to their discretion to select the fittest member for the situation.

14. The Gooroo is empowered to advance the public money of the establishment to the most intelligent of his disciples for purposes of trade; during their absence on such expeditions they are independent of the Gooroo, but the moment they return they again become subordinate to him, and must deliver over their profits to him to dispose of for the public benefit in such manner as he may deem most proper.

15. The Gooroo is bound to support any of his disciples who, after separating their interests from those of the establishment, come to want; upon the same principle every Gosawee is bound to support the disciple of his choice, whether alienated from him or not, whenever he may stand in need of assistance.

16. When a Gooroo is too old to continue his duties or from other causes becomes unfit for his situation, the most intelligent of his disciples is selected in his stead; should any discussion arise as to his successor, the point is decided by the dusname.

17. The establishment of a muth may consist of any number; the most devout, intelligent, and conciliatory member is generally appointed Gooroo, and each may introduce as many of his own peculiar disciples as the capital of the muth can support.

18. When the Gooroo finds his death approaching, he names the disciple whom he wishes to succeed him and who must be appointed accordingly. The nomination on the part of the Gooroo may be either by word or in writing; tho' in the former case the fact should be witnessed by some of the members of a foreign muth.

19. If the Gooroo die suddenly without having appointed a successor, his Disciples select one of their own body to preside over them; should they differ as to the most proper person to be nominated, the question is adjusted by a Decree of the Dusname which is final. During the consideration of the question by this assembly, the muth and all the property of its Establishment are taken possession of by the Dusnames who provide for the due administration of its affairs until the successor to the Chiefship is nominated.

20. The duty of a chela or Disciple may be said to be a passive submission to the will and caprice of his Gooroo, who is in the place of his father, and to whom he is, in respect to support, protection, and inheritance, as a son; so much indeed does this principle appear to prevail among Gosaweess, that, in speaking of the Gooroo of the person to whom they are disciples they call him grandfather Gooroo, in the same manner they speak of a grandson and great-grandson Disciple. The Disciple may be alienated by his Gooroo and deprived of his inheritance; this is done by the Gooroo giving him such portion of his property as he pleases, taking a deed of separation from him, and appointing by a witnessed writing or by word, in the presence of three or four respectable Brethren, another person his Heir.

21. Gosaweess being professedly unmindful of distinction of sex admit Females into their community, the form of initiation being the same as that for the males* Gosawunees or Female Gosaweess. Female children however, are never selected or purchased as Disciples, it being necessary to their admission, that they should have arrived at years of discretion.

22. Those Gosawee Devotees whose desire it is to be considered free from every natural feeling or prejudice prevailing in this World, appear publicly in a state of perfect nakedness; their bodies, which are defiled by filth and ashes, are they say to them, as statues, no longer susceptible of any excitement that is not created by the contemplation and adoration of the deity, which engrosses their whole mind and leaves not a thought for this World. The less devout, but less ostentatious and indecent, class bind a cloth round the waist, and the generality of Gosaweess wear as much clothing as other men; the texture of their apparel is coarse and the colour a dingy red, they some times allow their Hair to be sufficiently long and matted to be twisted round their heads, something in the shape of a Turban.

23. The Gosawunees unite in their persons, in token* of the perfect oblivion of sex, the costume of both male and female, they wear the Turban, the Ungar or long robe reaching from the neck to the knees, and the Dhotee.

24. In Hindoostan proper, persons of the Brahmin, Kshutree and Wysh castes can alone be introduced among Gosaweess and initiated into their orders. In the more Southern countries of India the members of the Soodru caste are also admitted.

25. Candidates may be of any age, some are admitted gratuitously, others in consideration of the payment of money, and during periods of famine, many sell themselves to Gosaweess for personal support.

1. The candidate is received with the consent of the Gooroo and chelas of the establishment

* In illustration of this, it may be observed that the Jussu naturu, best known by designation of Hermaphrodite, wears the female saree and whether born of the highest or the lowest caste are outcast from their birth; and considered the vilest and most polluted of beings; they live upon alms which they exact from the Brahmin at whose door they press their request, and who is willing to purchase their silence at any price. Their condition is supposed to be induced by the debauchery committed by them on Earth before the transmigration of their

to which he is to be attached on the one side, and that of his own sects or nearest relatives on the other.

27. His head is first shaved, when he immediately becomes a Gosawee in a state of probation; after remaining so a year or two and making himself familiar with the usages of the order, the ceremony of Beeja Hom (a sacrifice to fire) is celebrated, when he becomes a perfect Gosawee. If a person of too inferior caste to have been admitted into the fraternity has thro' inadvertence been regularly initiated and eaten with the brethren, he is branded with a hot coin, deprived of the clothes that may have been given to him, and ejected from the muth. The Gooroo who admitted him will then go before the Dusname in the attitude of submission, and pray for mercy and pardon at its hands; which, if granted, restores the Gooroo and his Establishment to their former rank, and if denied, leaves them equally outcastes with the person who deceived them.

28. During the noviciate of the candidate his parents are at liberty to withdraw their child and any contribution they may have given; but after the solemnization of Beeja Hom, he is irrevocably attached to the Gosawee sect, and as much alienated from his family by birth as if he had never belonged to it, not even performing Sootuk or mourning upon the death of its members.

29. The natural child of a Gosawee, if born of a Brahmin, Wysh or Soodru Woman has rank and rights equal to those of a chela or Disciple, after he shall have been initiated in the usual way; the only peculiarity being that the ceremony cannot be performed by the father; the uncle or next nearest relative should officiate.

Discipline.

30. The Discipline of the order is either severe or relaxed, as the Gooroo of a muth or the majority of the Dusname are of harsh or mild dispositions. The crimes however for which a member should be ejected from the Fraternity are specified, they are; taking away the life of a cow, a brahmun, a woman, a Gooroo, or a child; and for having had sexual intercourse with other than a Hindoo woman. The punishment is ordered by the Gooroo, or the Dusname. If such criminals throw themselves on the mercy of their brethren, their punishment is occasionally commuted to fine and penance; such indulgence is never allowed to Gosawunees, who are always expelled for serious offences.

Sale and Mortgage of Muths.

31. The Parumpuragut muths, which appear to be as much consecrated and devoted to Worship as any other Hindoo Temples, cannot be sold or mortgaged for any purpose whatever. If any are so surreptitiously, the offender is ejected from the muth, and the sum for which it was sold or mortgaged paid to the buyer or mortgages by the Gooroo and his disciples. The same plan is adopted in cases of illegal mortgages or sales of the other kind of muths. Such sanctity is avowedly not considered to attach to the muths which are the Dwellings of the Dungle or merchant sect of Gosawees; the right however even in respect to them is limited to the Gooroo, he may sell or mortgage the muth in he presides, and his act is confirmed by the Disciples, who redeem it. It is not usual to divide the property in a muth and sell the building after having once made Common stock. If from any cause such arrangement be made, the Gooroo takes to himself what portion he pleases, and decides the amount to be allotted to each of his subordinates. If any Disciple wish to separate his interests from those of the rest, he receives such share of the whole property as the Gooroo may please to give him, and a deed of Partition is taken from him.

32. The right of Government to distrain muths used as Dwelling Houses for the payment of the debts of the Gooroo, after having referred the subject without effect to the Dusname, is admitted. This assembly however generally manages to adjust the matter without requiring a recourse to such an extreme measure. A muth not being supposed to consist of shares, the distraint of it for the payment of debts due by other members of the Establishment than the Gooroo is considered as unjust as the sale or mortgage of it by one of the Disciples in liquidation of his own debts. Such sales or mortgages are always recognized, in so far that the purchaser or mortgagee is not allowed to lose by the fraud of the seller or mortgager, who is punished for such acts by his Gooroo or the Dusname.

33. Land is bought from Enamdars when it is found necessary to build a muth; by this arrangement the Government has no right in the Land; if it be charged with a Joree or quite rent, a permanent remission of it is solicited from, and in general granted by Government, or the amount of the right of Government is paid as part of the price, and the annual charge defrayed by the Enamdar himself; should Land however, after the completion of the muth, be saddled with a Tax, the establishment pays it.

34. It is usual to allow the public to partake of the Water of a river, well or Tank within the limits of a muth for bathing, cooking and drinking, but they are not permitted to erect a mote (the usual machinery for drawing water from wells) or to apply the water to purposes of agriculture.

35. Treasure found in the land of a muth is considered the property of the finder, no enquiry as to the owner being made.

36. A division of property and interest sometimes takes place between chela and Gooroo; the only tie which in that case remains between them is that each supports the other when in distress; the riches acquired by them under such circumstances, belong in virtue of the partition exclusively to him who earns them, the chela having only a very remote interest in the wealth of his Gooroo, depending upon the contingency of his dying without other disciples or not having named an heir in the prescribed form.

37. The alienated chela is not responsible for the debts of his late Gooroo when incurred before or after the alienation.

If

If an alienated disciple die leaving no disciples of his own, his Gooroo takes his property, pays the expences of his funeral, and settles debts in communication with the dusname; if the deceased leave no property, the Gooroo is not responsible for his debts, but must pay the expences of his funeral; if the Gooroo of the alienated chela who may die in these reduced circumstances be also dead, the Gooroo's heirs are bound to do what would have been his duty.

39. If a Gooroo proceed upon his travels and no one hear of him for 10 or 15 years, the person who would succeed in the event of his death (that is one of his disciples) performs the ceremonies observed on the death of a relation, which consist of assuming the appearance and performing the ceremonies of mourning and entertaining the fraternity in the name of the deceased. The Gosawees differ from most other Hindoos in burying their dead instead of burning them. This probably originated in the Brahmin custom of burying their sunyasees or devotees.

40. If a Gosawee die very poor leaving one or more rich disciples in a state of alienation, the dusname obliges him or them to bear the expences induced by that event. If a Gosawee die in indigent circumstances, and have no disciples of any kind, the dusname perform the last ceremonies due to him on earth.

41. One fourth of a Gosawee's fortune is devoted to ceremonies consequent to his death, and another quarter to the erection of a suitable tomb over his remains.

GHURBAREE GOSAWEEES.

42. Upon perusing the information that I have collected regarding this class of dissenters from the fraternity of Gosawees, I find that it relates only to the peculiarities of the Institution of marriage, the existence of which among them forms the grand distinction between their fundamental Laws and those of the rest of their brethren; and that the greater portion of what is said upon this subject even has been anticipated in the Replies to Queries relating to marriage among Hindoos in general, which were furnished to me in the Southern Mahratta Country, and have been already embodied in the Report upon Hindoo Law by Mr. Steele.

43. The following are the points in which the Institution, as it exists among Gosawees, differs from the Laws of marriage among other Hindoos.

44. A Gosawee is not permitted to marry other than a Gosawunee; if he do so, his marriage is not annulled, but his wife is not acknowledged as a Gosawunee. The nees must marry before they reach their fifteenth year. failing to do so they can give a satisfactory reason for the omission) they are obliged to pass their lives in continency; loss of caste being held out as the punishment inflicted upon her who may be found to have lost command over her passions. These maidens have not the privilege of becoming disciples, as females of other Hindoo casts may, but must pass their lives with their Parents or relations.

. A female of any Hindoo caste who is initiated as a disciple is not allowed to marry.

47. A Brahmin Bhut performs the marriage ceremonies.

48. A marriage can be annulled on account of impotency alone. If a woman arrive at the age of puberty and hear no tidings of the approach of an absent husband, she enters into a left handed connection (Pat) with another man, who however is obliged to give her up if required by the husband, and is reimbursed in the amount of his expences. If on the other hand, the husband decline taking his wife he is reimbursed and she is no longer his wife; The husband, tho' he may take his wife, is not obliged to support her illegitimate offspring. The pat is not allowed to widows.

49. If a man separate from his wife and give her a Chhor Chittee or deed of Divorce they can never reunite. If no such paper be given at the time of separation he may take her back. Adultery on the part of a Gosawunee is followed by expulsion from the order if committed with other than one of the Brethren. The wife who has received a Deed of Divorce may form a pat connection; she who has not is not at liberty to make such contract without her husband's permission.

50. The assembly of the Dusname exists upon exactly the same principles among the Ghurbarree as among other Gosaweas; as however the former are divided into families consisting of man and wife with their offspring and collateral Relatives, there is of course no such person as the Gooroo of the muth.

51. The above information, as far as it goes, may I think be considered correct; it was obtained by referring Queries to the pilgrims who last year visited the source of the Godaveree at Trimbuk near Nasik. They at first received the proposal to disclose the Laws of their order to the public authorities with the greatest hauteur; when however it was explained to them, that the measure was only adopted to enable Government to decide upon Civil Suits in which their brethren were parties, they relented and cheerfully imparted what was solicited. As therefore the motive for giving the information at all was to benefit themselves, it is not likely that they have practiced deceit to the prejudice of their own rights; several thousand Gosaweas of the first rank from all parts of India attended the Yatra, and each had access, to, and ascertained the accuracy of the information given by another. The same question was frequently put in two or three different shapes, and an air of consistency pervades the whole, which could not perhaps have been effected by falsehood; even if it had been an object to have kept us in ignorance.
